Mr. Holmes agent for the Pioneer Fire Extinguisher was in North Adams on Wednesday. He usually makes some sales of fire extinguishers when he comes to this village and wednesday was no exception.

The farm home of Frank wyllis on the Angling road south-west of North Adams was discovered on fire at about three o'clock Tuesday Prompt assistance from a volunteer fire brigade saved the house with considerable damage to the roof. In the morning the chimney burned out but is was supposed no further danger was to be feared.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Susie Haight. Reports of the secretary and treasurer and committee chairmen were given. The following officers were elected: President, Ethel Clement; vice pres,, Julia Mercer; treas., Minnie Gray: The executive committee will appoint other officers later. A social hour and a potluck supper were enjoyed.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Gertrude Young on Monday May 5th.

SERIOUS FIRE AT HANOVER

Store of Benjamin Levy, Dry Goods Dealer Consumed. Loss $20,000

As we went to press on Thursday last the general store of Benjamin Levy at Hanover was consumed by fire. also the ice cream parlor of C. Kirby and the Owens hardware next door was only saved by quick work on the part of fire-fighters. Chief King of the Jackson Fire Department responded with the chemical apparatus and with his men succeeded in checking the flames after a hard struggle. We supposed Hanover is about as well equipped as North Adams to combat the fire but evidently they are not.

The fire was discovered about 11 o'clock in the evening in the rear of the Levy store by Dr. Frazier, who was returning from a professional call and a general alarm turned in. Levy carried $6,000 insurance and the ice cream dispenser a policy of $4,000.

The origin of the fire is not possible to determine as no one had been about the Levy store for more than an hour. Hanover is twice as unfortunate as North Adams as this blaze is the second disaster in the heart of the town within a few years with not much hope of ever rebuilding.

Super Power Serves Seven Millions

Eleven electric companies serving 7,000,000 people in six eastern and southern states have formed a cooperative superpower group for securing coal supplies and reducing overhead expenses. The companies have an investment of $135,000,000 and produce 2,000,000 horse power for industrial and domestic use in the heart of the coal regions. They have decided to unite in securing coal supplies nearer to the mines and thus ultimately reduce the price at which power can be sold. It is expected that within a year the electric power groups of Naigara Falls, the New England and southern superpower systems will all be linked with the Chicago district. This is going to improve the service and stabilize the supply of electric current and transmission resources affecting service to 7,250,000 consumers. There will not only be more economical consumption of coal but thousands of coal mines and a vast number of industries including the Pittsburgh steel district will be able to purchase cheaper operating power. Six of the largest power plants will bc located over coal beds where they are assured from 50 to 75 years fuel supply.

Harry is a "Repeater"

After 16 years of incarceration in the Insane Asylum Harry Thaw is at last declared sane but he is not yet free. This self-same Thaw is about as cute as they make 'em, but we have known of many a worse criminal being let off much easier for the disposal of such detestable rounders as Stanford White is known to have been. while this may serve as a lesson to other young blades of the higher life to profit by, yet one can hardly say that justice is fully satisfied by placing a man of Thaw's character in a retreat for raving lunatics. No doubt the sensual life and the embellishments of millionaire high life had made him temporarily crazy, and probably he is by nature a degenerate, yet after all is said and done, Stanford White could not have been a shade or two better than Harry Thaw.

while the remark was passed freely among common people of the decent class many times during Thaw's trial and apprehension for shooting Stanford white, that both men were far better out of the world than in it, it remains to be proven today but that the foolish frivolous brainless stage beauty which Evelyn Thaw was known to be, was not the cause of Thaw's incarceration and she herself is not worth the price of a decent bootblack anywhere. She claims that Thaw's release will endanger and blacken the character of their son. If the son is a combination of the vices of both these persons he certainly is a dandy—and we think immune as far as impressions are concerned. At any rate the past record of Evelyn would seem to indicate that if Harry were released and Evelyn placed in the same institution the ends of justice would be much better served.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Exclusion Vote Is Congress' Reply to Japan Note—Dawes Plan O. K.'d.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JAPAN'S effort to dictate America's immigration policy has resulted, so far, very unfortunately for Japan. Ambassador Hanihara's warning that, adoption of the exclusion clause in the Johnson bill would have "grave consequences" was considered impertinent and insulting by congress. Therefore after the house had passed the measure by a vote of 322 to 71, the senate set its face sternly and voted unanimously in favor of that clause which provides for the exclusion of Japanese immigrants from the United States.

The administration, through Secretary of State Hughes, is on record as opposed to this clause and in favor of extending the quota limitation to Japan with the "gentlemen's agreement" retained. But in view of the unanimity of opinion in congress it is held by many in Washington that President Coolidge scarcely can afford to veto the measure. On the other hand, all the pacifist organizations in the country have jumped to the front with demands that Mr. Coolidge put the mark of his disapproval on the legislation. Jane Addams, Amy Woods, Arthur Deering Call and other spokesmen for these associations urged that the bill would be a distinct setback to the cause of amity among nations. Since it has become known that the Russian Reds have been working through some of these peace organizations to break down our national defense and our form of government, their influence has declined. Still it may be that the senate, having given full expression to its resentment against the Japanese attempt to interfere with our legislation, will decide to modify its stand when it comes to the passage of the immigration bill as a whole. Not, however, in deference to the views of the pacificists and pinks.

The Japanese government and people are naturally disgruntled and disturbed. The jingo press over there is demanding the resignation of the ministry and even hinting at war with America. Already a campaign has been started for a trade boycott on the state of California if the exclusion measure is finally adopted. The government insists there shall be no retaliatory measures and is said to be ready to ask the League of Nations conference at Brussels on July 23 to approve a new international immigration basis. In America the question is looked on as being one of the admission or exclusion of immigrants undesirable economically. In Japan it is considered a question of race equality, and the Japanese feel that they are undervalued and insulted.

Possibility of war with Japan is of course remote, but the controversy is being utilized by both those who advocate the strengthening of our defenses and those who urge that we abandon the Philippine islands before they are taken away from us by Japan—as they easily could be under present conditions.

HAVING been approved by the reparations commission and by the British government and accepted by the German government as a basis for settlement, the fate of the Dawes report seems now to rest with France. The other countries involved are almost certain to give the plan their approval. Prime Minister MacDonald announced in the house of commons his government's full and unreserved acceptance of the report and said it would urge all the other governments concerned to take the same course. Mr. Baldwin assured him that in this he had the support of the whole British people. Chancellor Marx called the presidents of all the German states to conference in Berlin and after a warm discussion the cabinet formally accepted the invitation of the reparations commission to adhere to the Dawes plan. The German reply makes no reservations and says the government "is ready to assure its co-operation in the experts' plan." Marx afterward said Germany would expect "complete and unrestricted disposal over the whole reich territory within the boundaries set by the treaty of Versailles," and suggested that fulfillment of the report would be endangered if "the immediate threat of disturbing interference" continues to exist.

"Oppressive and peremptory guarantees for the fulfillment of the plan's provisions are demanded from Germany, and they will be granted," Herr Marx said, adding, "hence I deem it not improper if Germany wants to see that it will not be threatened with military interventions which, even with the best of intentions of fulfillment, would form a serious hindrance to an attempt to convert the plan into deeds."

Premier Poincare in a public speech virtually declared France would hold on to the Ruhr and the Ruhr guarantees until the experts' plan is executed. French officials feel that the allies must reach an agreement on France's security before the Dawes plan is accepted, and that all the allies should agree upon the measures to be taken by them if Germany defaults again on its obligations. Poincare, it is thought, will demand the continuance of the operation and control of the railroads in the occupied zones until military necessities are protected and a certain number of payments are made.

British officialdom was worried by the attitude of Poincare and it was said Mr. MacDonald warned the French ambassador that its maintenance would endanger the continuance of the entente. Probably France will acquiesce after the demands of domestic politics have been satisfied.

One thing that is worrying the French is the fear that they will lose the full fruits of the Dawes plan by a nation-wide German plot to cut down the proposed revenues to the allies by ceasing the use of tobacco and beer and reducing to the minimum the consumption of sugar and matches.

DEMOCRATS and insurgent Republicans in the senate are still seething with something like indignation over the rebuke administered by President Coolidge for the manner in which the investigation of the internal revenue bureau is being conducted and for the resolution of the committee to employ Francis J. Heney as investigator at the expense of Senator Couzens of Michigan. The President agrees with the secretary of the treasury that the investigators are devoting themselves mainly to efforts to implicate in tax dodging the concerns in which Mr. Mellon is interested, and says the hiring of Heney was improper. His admonition to the senators to conduct their investigations in accord with constitutional guarantees aroused resentment, and all through last week there were hot debates on the subject between the Democratic and insurgent leaders and the Republicans who support the administration. Governor Pinchot admits he suggested to Senator Couzens the employing of Heney and defends it. Couzens was ill and the work of the committee was suspended.

ATTORNEY GENERAL STONE, it is said, has carefully examined the evidence upon which Senator Wheeler of Montana was indicted in Great Falls and has found the action of the grand jury was justified. Department of Justice officials say the evidence was turned up by chance while investigators were working up cases of violations of the postal laws, and the United States district attorney in Montana acted without any suggestion from Washington.

Among the witnesses heard by the Daugherty investigating committee last week was the delectable Gaston B. Means again. He told a story of how the late Jess Smith had collected at least $250,000 from bootleggers and had split with the former attorney general. He informed the committee that the night before Smith's mysterious death in the Daugherty apartment in Washington he asked Means to return a large sum of money to New York bootleggers, who were threatening exposure and to whom Howard Mannington already had returned $20,000. Means also said Secretary Mellon had a contract to give liquor permits to "the Green River whisky crowd," and declared he had found enough evidence in the Bosch Magneto case to call for the indictment of former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, and that Daugherty and Jess Smith had decided that it would be better to hold this over Palmer's head to influence Democratic votes in congress than to bring prosecution.

George W. Storck of the Department of Justice gave evidence tending to implicate Francis B. Harrison in scandals, and the committee then took a recess to permit Senator Wheeler to attend the sessions of the committee that is investigating the circumstances surrounding his indictment.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE says steps should be taken by the federal government to put outdoor recreational opportunities within the grasp of all the people, and himself takes the first of such steps by appointing Secretaries Weeks, Work, Wallace and Hoover and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt a committee to promulgate "a national policy which should not merely co-ordinate under federal guidance all activities in behalf of outdoor recreation but also formulate a program to serve as a guide for future action."

WITH considerable publicity the conference between British and Russian representatives for the re-establishment of trade and political relations opened in London last week. Almost before it got under way there were indications that it might come to naught. Prime Minister MacDonald opened the proceedings with a polite speech in which he warned the Russians that if they desired credits—which is what they do desire—they must make it plain that they are ready to respect their contractual obligations, and that the one way to do this was to keep their old contracts. He warned them further that Britain would not stand for subversive propaganda anywhere in the empire. The Russian delegates were conciliatory, but in two days the conference adjourned over the Easter holidays with the gentlemen from Moscow in doubt as to what to do. For meanwhile two of their chieftains at home, Zinovieff, president of the Third Internationale, and Trotzky, minister of war, had come out with violent attacks on MacDonald. Both of them assert that Russia will not meet the claims put forward by the British and that an agreement is possible only if both countries start with a clean slate, after which the soviet government will meet any obligations the Russian delegation may sign at the London conference.

OUR army's globe-encircling aviators have been having some exciting experiences up in Alaska, which culminated in the forced landing of the plane piloted by Major Martin, commander of the squadron. A crack in the crank case compelled him to descend at Cape Igvak and the other planes proceeded to Chignig, 170 miles further west. Word of the mishap was sent out from there and two destroyers hurried to the rescue of Martin and his mechanician, who were found safe in an inlet and were taken to Kanatak where a new engine was to be installed.

NEW YORK'S two state conventions were interesting because for the Republicans Secretary Hughes delivered the keynote speech and gave unstinted praise to President Coolidge, while at the Democratic gathering Gov. Al Smith was formally put in the running for the presidential nomination. This was done through the adoption of a resolution presented by three leading women, and in response Smith agreed to make the race.

THE people of Greece voted by a huge majority in favor of the establishing of a Greek republic, and so the downfall of the Glucksburg dynasty is complete. The Persians, on the other hand, seem to have given up the idea of setting up a republic, Premier Sirdar Sipah having repudiated that plan. He is said now to be negotiating with Harry Sinclair for a loan of $10,000,000 in return for an oil concession in northern Persia.

Son of Japan's Emperor May Visit United States

Washington.—Japan's appreciation of the sympathy and aid of the United States following the earthquake last fall may be expressed in person by Prince Hichibu Yasuhito, the second son of the emperor.

Such a visit to the United States by one of the imperial family would be considered an unusual honor to bestow upon a nation that has been friendly in time of trouble. It was pointed out by diplomats in this city that only once before has a son of the ruler left Japan to visit a foreign country.

Prince Hichibu is one of the most popular young men in his country. He was educated in the military academy and has the rank of a second lieutenant. Although only twenty-one years old he has won himself a place in the hearts of all of his countrymen by his democratic spirit and his ability as an athlete.

It is known that while the imperial household and the Japanese cabinet will have the final say as to whether Prince Hichibu will visit the United States, commercial firms having dealings in this country are bringing their influence to bear in favor of his coming.

While the plans for the visit remain to be worked out, it is likely that he would make the trip on a warship, landing probably in the harbor of New York. From there he would cross the continent and depart for home from San Francisco.

Reading the Palm

"What," demanded the skeptic, "can you tell by looking at a person's hand?" "You can tell a good deal," said the palmist. "If a woman wears a platinum circlet on the third finger of her left hand she is just married. If she wears a plain gold band the marriage dates further back. If she wears a diamond ring on this finger she's engaged. If she's engaged she's probably in love. That's all women want to know about—love and marriage. Yes, by looking at a person's hand you can tell a good deal and surmise a whole lot more."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

"IF ANYONE WANTS TO KNOW ABOUT TANLAC LET THEM SEE ME"

Says Joseph Baker of Memphis in Praising World's Greatest Tonic—Tells of Recovery.

"If anybody wants to find out about Tanlac, just let them see me," is the hearty suggestion of Joseph H. Baker, 550 North Third St., Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. Baker went overseas with the famous Thirtieth Division during the World War and participated in the St. Mihiel, Valley of Wovres and Argonne drives, having been cited for bravery in action in the Argonne. He is now a popular member of the Memphis Fire Department.

"When I came back from over there," said he, "I was in a mighty bad fix. I had been gassed and after getting home I got down with pneumonia. This left me 'all in,' without appetite, down in weight, liver out of fix, and suffering from constipation, biliousness and headaches without end.

"Tanlac put me to eating as never before, shot my weight up fifteen pounds and made a strong, well man of me—and I feel fine even to this day. I can't say enough for Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

STAYING HOME FROM WORK MEANS MONEY LOST

Many Women Know This by Experience

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You As It Helped These Women

Mrs. McDole's Experience

Ludington, Michigan.—"I suffered every month and was very irregular, had headaches all the time, was thin and pale, with no appetite. I had taken all kinds of medicines, and every doctor told me I would have to face an operation before I would be well again. I was doing factory work, and I had to stay at home so much that I was getting discouraged. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did so with good results. I am now feeling fine. I have advised all my girl friends, who have such troubles as I had, to take your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. THRESSA McDOLE, 426 S. Rath Ave., Ludington, Mich.

Los Angeles, California.—"I was in such a condition that I was scarcely able to walk, even to do my housework. I had no energy, was depressed and often wished to die. I am a chef, but was totally unable to do any cooking. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it with success. After the fourth bottle I felt much better, and after the tenth I never felt better in my life, as it resulted in a complete recovery. I certainly recommend it to all I hear complaining and you can use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. MARY SULLIVAN, 923 E. 46th Street, Los Angeles, California.

Greatly Relieved

Jersey City, N. J.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for cramps and fainting spells. I do office work, and have been in this condition four or five years, having to stay at home from work a day or two at a time, quite frequently. I have taken about ten bottles of it, and have been greatly relieved. I recommend it myself and you may print these facts with my full address."—LOUISE SCHOENFELDER, 112 Woodlawn Ave., Jersey City, N. J.

No matter what your work is, a great deal depends upon your health. It is discouraging to be obliged to stay at home frequently on account of sickness.

Your trouble may be caused by some female weakness, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought relief to many women just as these letters state. For sale by druggists everywhere.

No Fruit Today

The captain entered the officers' mess kitchen.

Too Short

A visitor to a country town, talking to a local resident, was criticizing the one paper the town boasted.

"Well," he concluded, "I'll say this for the editor—he can be the most sarcastic fellow that ever was when he tries."

"How's that?" asked the other.

"Why, in last week's issue the feature entitled 'Local Intelligence' was only about three inches in length."

Black Hole of Calcutta

The "Black Hole of Calcutta" was an apartment in which 156 English prisoners, captured by the Nawab Siraj-ud-Daula, were confined over night of June 20, 1756. This apartment was 18 feet by 14 feet and 10 inches. It had only two small windows, obstructed by a veranda. The crush was dreadful, and after a night of terrible suffering from pressure, heat, thirst and want of air, there were left alive in the morning only 23 survivors.

Origin of Safety Pin

The first safety pins were long, slender pins of bronze, characteristic of Italy. Evidently some one one day conceived the idea of bending the body of these pins after putting the pin through the garment, so as to hold it more securely. Later an improvement was made by having a disk formation in the bend of the pin, containing several twists of fine wire, which acted as a spring and held the pin in place. The original bow pin is said to have been found in graves dating back to the Tenth century B. C. There have been many evolutions of the material used and the shape and style of the safety pin, but it is interesting to note that the primitive and simplest form is the one which has survived and is used at the present time.

Do You Believe In Signs

If you do you are a judicious advertiser and a good business man. Judicious advertising Always Pays and especially when you advertise in a paper that is read by everybody in its territory.

This newspaper reaches the eye of everybody who might be a possible buyer in this section.

How Would You Like It?

Old Jim Haskins, our Howard City contemporary, reflects the sad fact that a lawyer charges a man $10 for ten minutes conversation the man insists on paying it. A doctor charges $1 for a prescription and the patient says: "O, pshaw is that enough?" An undertaker conducts a funeral and charges $100 and he is just perfectly lovely with everybody inside and outside the family. A man buys a gold brick and apologizes for not having bitten sooner. An editor walks a mile in the hot sun to get the facts of a wedding or social function and spends three hours writing it up and tells lies and praises people till he hates himself. Then if he makes an insignificant omission or error or charges ten cents straight for three extra papers he is a stingy cuss who gets anything right and charges four times the price of city papers twice as large. In short, he is a confounded almost any-old-thing and ought to he run out of town. Talk about the ice man How would you like to run a newspaper?

The Mud Slingers

A public official in a modern congressional investigation is covered with political slime, forced to resign the charges against him dropped, and the mud guns turned onto another victim. Proving charges seems a secondary consideration.

This system does not seem honorable, just or fair. If continued, it will be imposible to get any man who cares for his family or his name to serve his country in a public office, for regardless of guilt or innocence political enemies can blacken him in such ways that it is practically impossible for him to defend himself.

Statesmanship seems to be a thing of the past except in rare instances, and dirty commercial politics for the benefit of cliques, groups and blocks has taken its place.

Starts Tests For Better Cucumbers

A better pickling cucumber, especially adapted to Michigan conditions, will be sought in a five year breeding project just inaugurated through a cooperative agreement between the horticultural department of the M. A. C. and the National Pickle Packers Association.

Under the plan adopted, the packers association will furnish funds for graduate fellowships in research work, the graduate students carrying on the test and experiment projects under the direction of members of the college horticultural staff.

Location of this project at M. A. C. was decided on the national association after consideration of many similar institutions. Michigan large pickle industry and the facil. ities available at the college for the type of work desired, led to the selection, it is said.

M. A. C. Gives Plans For Lime Spreader

Plans and specifications for the construction of a simple home-made lime spreader, known as the Simplex, have just been published by the agricultural engineering department at the M. A. C.

The spreader is designed to be attached to a wagon box or rack, and is simple enough to be built by the the local mechanic. It is not intended to take the place of the commercial spreader. but will answer where small acreage is to be spread.

The pamphlet, which is Circular Bulletin No. 62, Agricultural Experiment Station, M. A. C. may be had on request of the dean of agriculture, East Lansing, Mich.

"Clinch the Victory" at the Ballot Box

By Ida Wise Smith
National Director of Ch. Citizenship

"The common problem, your's mine and anyone's."

> "Is not to fancy, what were fair in life
> Providing it could be—but finding first
> What may be, then find how to make it fair
> Up to our means, a very different thing."
> —Robert Browning

These words are pertinant to woman's ballot and its exercise to make the world in all its reaches "fair" "What may be" has been done. The woman citizen possesses the power to "find how to make it fair."

The last general election was not a real test of the woman voter. But in the coming election she should face the issues of the time with an informed mind and a real understanding. This year is a real test. With manhood suffrage, the proportion of citizens voting has grown less every year. We are pledged to a "Get out to vote" campaign. That presupposes that we shall ourselves vote and secure like action on the part of others. While women may not have yet manifested themselves in the degree most desirable, yet no one can doubt that the woman voter is the source of much uneasiness in the inner circle of politicians, and is perhaps leading to a real study of governmental affairs. We have glibly spoken of the three divisions of government, legislative, executive and judicial. The electorate has not been considered but it is now being seen that this fourth division is a real factor in government that cannot be disregarded. Woman as a part of the electorate is finding herself. Olive Schreiner wrote: "She must help herself. Let her struggle until she is strong."

This being a government by political parties, it follows that each citizen must choose the political party most in accord with his or her ideals. To bring it up to a standard where "righteousness exalteth a nation" is a task that challenges strength of mind and purpose. One alone cannot do it but together women could clean both major parties of corruption, and place in office men whom "the spoils of party cannot buy" and give this nation an administration of government affairs that would make impossible the present lamentable scandals that cause all honest citizens to bow the head in shame before themselves and the world.

In the confusion of political pressure women must learn how to distinguish the main aim, and in an organized way enter the political field of the precinct first, and then go step by step to the highest reach. We have never heard of any evil interests threatening our democracy save in an organized capacity. The latest example is the beer bloc in Congress. First, those who had one approach of lawless attitude toward prohibition, organized themselves. Consolidation of groups into large associations was next effected; definite objectives were settled upon; plans, were made and the beer bloc with eighty-three bills asking of Congress the modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and wine, is the culmination of the efforts.

Against the efforts of combined Christian forces, and of good women everywhere, evil agencies will be powerless. But organization must meet organization. In Nehemiah's account of the building of the wall of Jerusalem this is pointedly illustrated—"So they strengthened their hands for this good work." They prepared to work when they saw it was needed. Result? 'They (the enemy) were much cast down in their own eyes; for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God." The task we face now in the resistance of these measures in Congress is an old story to the Women's Christian Temperance Union. It is history repeatedly repeating itself. Almost every state that has voted dry has had a beer and wine campaign forced upon it afterward. Did one ever yield? No! In Arizona state prohibition won by 3,144. Two years later in a beer and wine campaign prohibition triumphed by 12,000 Colorado adopted prohibition by 11,572 votes and verified it two years later in a beer and wine campaign by 85,792 votes. Kansas adopted prohibitlon by 7,998 votes. A wet candidate was snowed under a few years ago by 424,000 majority. Michigan adopted prohibition by 68,624 votes and held it against beer and wine by 206,926. Ohio voted for statewide prohibition by a majority of 25,759. The next year an amendment initiated by the wets for 2.75 per cent liquor was defeated by a majority of 29,781: in 1922 a similar measure was defeated by nearly 200,000 majority.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment has thrown the glove in ths faces of loyal patriotic citizens with whom we women are now counted. Let us accept the challenge and on November 4 forever silence disloyal citizens by electing a President; a Congress, and State Officials pledged to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment by the provisions of the Volstead Act Let us "Clinch the Victory" There are just two classes of people now—defenders of the Constitution and nulliflers. Every man and woman must be counted "on the good or evil side". And this counting must be at the ballot box—not in our meetings, in the churches, or in clubs, but on the altar of patriotism. No member of the W. C. T. U. that for a half century has walked the weary way of prohibition reform should stultify her work by casting her vote for a candidate not definitely pledged to the policies of the Eighteenth Amendment in both letter and spirit. The Congress must be pledged against modification of the Volstead Act and to vote for any additional legislation necessary for its enforcement.

The Christain patroit has a very definite duty this year. Party lines and friendly associations must be disregarded. Principle must stand before the party or men. Let me call for you from the lips of seers of our country the principles that should animate Christian voters this fall;

Looks Reasonable

Statistics of repairs, gasoline and oil consumption, depreciation and loads hauled, demonstrated that the average difference in cost in running a car or truck over good hard roads and poor roads is approximately 5 cents per mile.

The average mileage of all cars and trucks in this country exceeds 6,000 yearly.

There are 14,000,000 cars and trucks running in the United States.

A simple multiplication proves that if all the roads in the United States were poor roads, making them all into good roads would save more than 4 billions every year or more than five times as much as is spent annually in this nation for good roads.

Of course, all the roads are not poor roads, and more than 80 per cent of the travel of our vehicles is over good roads and not poor ones. But if we had good roads vehicles would travel over them. Vehicles are now forced from the many poor to the few good road miles in order to avoid loss of time and the tremendous cost of travel over poor roads.

Any individual, asking himself whether his share of a new road tax will pay him, has only to figure the number of miles he will travel in a year over the good road and see what he, personally, will save. This computation, of course, leaves out of the calculation any such factors as the saving he makes by the lowering of prices on goods he buys which travel the good road, and any increase in his assets due to the increase of land values on the good roads. With figures so plain and savings so obvious it is difficult to understand why anyone thinks that national highways, built and maintained by the National Government, will not more than pay for themselves in a very short period?

Come to Us

Clean Up! Polish Up! Paint Up! Pay Up!

Here we are again; its spring and the season of springing flowers and greening grass is almost upon us. There is a smell of sprouting vegetation in the air, (when it don't snow) and crows cry their messages from the hazy blue distances. Overhead the wild honkers in wishbone formation on tireless wing seek the marshes of northern lakes. Why not begin to think of the color scheme for the house and barn, the shade of wall paper for the parlor bedroom, and to search out rake and hoe? A town is just such a place as its inhabitants choose to make it. The inhabitants are the town—and the minute you drive into a well-kept village along the pike these little fix ups dart right out and jab you in the short ribs.

Instead of glaring sign boards we of the little burgs prefer to greet tourists with beautiful swards of the greenest grass, well painted yard fences and flower beds. Today the unsightly sign board is in bad repute—tomorrow it may be declared an outlaw and melt like a snowball on a hot stove. Then according to reformers we shall be rid of a nuisance and the newspaper men tell us anyhow that this form of publicity never did amount to anything and they know. But Dad has his optics on some nobby new iron fence for the front yard; Mother is daily planning for beds of pinks daffodils. tulips, zinnias, coxcomb candytuft, hollyhocks, verbenas, tiger lilies. fleur de lis, marigolds petunias, gladioli, wild peas, lady slippers, morning glorys, geraniums. pansies and asters right on the spot where the dead apple tree stood a month ago; Sister Nancy wants an easy bench under the spreading oak by the gate (wide enough for two); Bill, the oldest boy, swears the grape arbor has got to be cleaned up and rebuilt this spring and so there you are! The whole dod-gasted family including Baby Paul, are pledged to get going on high and make things step around lively before the middle of Jnne, so that when old Symposium Gotrocks in his $8.000 Packard comes sailing along in front of the farm about 4th of July, they'll see something that'll make them sigh and groan for the comforts of a poor man. You bet!

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital

Coolidge's Campaign managers have ceased worrying about the Cleveland nomination and are concentrating on patching up various factional differences within the Republican Party with a view to presenting a unit front at the polls in November. The nomination by acclamation may not be possible because of Senator LaFoilete's Wisconsin delegates and Senator Johnson's scattered following, but the first ballot should tell the story. The biggest job at Cleveland will be the writing of the platform, but this document will be short and to the point and will consume little time in drafting. Most of it in fact will be dictated by the President next month.

One of the Local papers prints a cartoon showing a solid ring of Senators, each with a magnifying glass spying into the affairs of the one just in front of him. It is a true representation of the Washington picture—not only is the town overrun with private detectives, prying here and there, rifling files and digging up records, but in the Senate itself, with one of its members under indictment, it is a case of the investigators investigating the investigators of the investigators.

An Investigation in Congress used to mean something. The word has lost its old time punch. There are so many so-called investigations going on here now that only a few have any importance. Ths rest are lost in the shuffle, and at least three or four which promised sensational stuff at the beginning of the session have drifted off into final sleep.

A few weeks ago it was pointed out in this column that Secretary of Labor James J. Davis is the only member of the Harding Coolidge Cabinet who has not been touched by some kind of scandal. Davis still holds that record, but no one knows when he will fall off. So far he has conducted his department in a high creditable manner, winning commendations from employers and labor leaders as well.

Harry Daugherty sits alone in his apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel here and plans what he will do to his opponents in the Senate and elsewhere. Daugherty's plan now is not one of attack, but he is quick to strike when anyone attacks him. His friends say that he has something on nearly every one in public life in the country. His program is to hold his fire until they show their heads and then to shoot quick. The first evidence of this was his revelation that the animosity of Senator Pepper toward him was caused by a refusal to recommend the Pennsylvania Senator for a federal appointment. As one newspaper remarked, a resignation from the Cabinet does not necessarily mean retirement to private life.

President Coolidge is expected to sound the keynote of the Republican campaign in his speech before the annual luncheon of the Associated Press in New York the latter part of this month. The speech will probably be an outline of the accomplishments of his Administration to serve as a sign-post for Republican spell-binders during the campaign. It was at this luncheon last year that President Harding launched his campaign for the world court.

Promises are being made that the tax reduction bill will get through the Senate by the middle of May. This does not mean final enactment, however even though the bill has passed the House. There will be so many differences between the House and Senate bills that at least three weeks will be required to strike a balance. This job will be delegated to the ranking members of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee. In the final analysis it will be they who will write the tax bill that goes to the President. Senator Smoot threatens to bring Congress back here in July if the job is not finished before the first of June.

Sentiment For Income Tax Amendment Sweeps State

The absolute necessity for securing tax relief for overburdened real estate and the justice and desirability of the proposed state income tax are daily winning an ever increasing host of friends for this progressive tax reform measure.

All Michigan farm organizations have united in support of this proposal and are working shoulder to shoulder to secure the enactment of this legislative, which they propose to get in the form of a constitutional amendment to be secured by initiatory petitions. The first step is to obtain at least 60,000 signatures to such petitions This will insure the placing of the proposed amendment on the ballot for the regular election next November.

Many Sign Petitions

A big drive for such signatures was made by the State Grange and the State Farm Bureau on "town meeting day," April 7th. A representative from each organization was in nearly every polling place on that day to secure signatures to these petitions. To date more than 40,000 names have been received at the central headquarters.

Taxation conditions have become so bad in this state that Michigan farmers do not need to be reminded that the present system of general property taxes no longer produces any degree of taxation justice. That system might have been all right 50 years ago when the main wealth of our state was represented by tangible property, but today we all realize that it is sadly outgrown.

For years Michigan farmers have been advocating a state income tax as the most just system to meet our present conditions. It has been pointed out that such a system would tax exery person exactly in proportion to his ability to pay. It would reach the income from tanigible investments and from salaries which is more than can be said of the present system.

Under the terms of the proposed tax, the first $4,000 from every income will be exempt from this form of taxation. This is not because of any desire to secure class legislation, but is prompted by the feeling that the little fellows are already paying far more than their share.

Put Limit On State Quota Of Sodatol

Announcement of a definite limit on the amount of Sodatol, war salvaged agricultural explosive which will be available for distribution in Michigan has been made by the federal government, the state's total being fixed at 1,430,000 pounds.

A half million pounds of the material was placed in the state last fall, according to L. F. Livingston, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the M. A.C and in charge of the distribution of Sodatol in the state. Orders this spring have totalled more than a half million pounds in the Upper Peninsula alone, with an almost equal amount listed from counties in the lower sections of the state.

Michigan's quota is, therefore, practically exhausted, according to men in chaage of the work. A few orders may still be taken where cars are being made up in counties, but Sodatol distribution is said to be virtually at an end.

Sodatol is called the cheapest agricultural explosive ever made available for Michigan farmers, and the tremendous volume of the material which has been ordered would indicate that they have taken advantage of the opportunity to secure low priced material for clearing new land or cleaning out rocks and stumps from older fields.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortgage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon; and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

Arbor And Bird Day Proclamation

Arbor Day signifies but one thing, the day on which a tree should be planted. In the past it has been the custom of many schools to observe the day by planting trees. Except the commendable observance of educational institutions, Arbor Day has meant but little to our citizenship.

Every human is a lover of trees. In the lands where trees do not grow naturally. tireless efforts are made by inhabitants to grow them because there is something about their sturdiness and beauty that appeals to every race.

In this wonderful State where trees grow without the slighest cultivation, why not make ArborDay of 1924 the beginning of an effort to plant a million trees in Michigan before the spring is over? If every school would not only plant one tree but many, if every home owner would plant both fruit and shade trees, if county highway officials would place along the roads young trees and if the various communities would make the day one of general tree planting, Michigan could easily have one million more trees growing when the spring gives way to summer sun.

Not only should we plant trees on Arbor Day and at every suitable time thereafter, but we should check the cutting of young pines. There are thousands and thousands of acres of land in Northern Michigan suitable only for tree growing. It is the purpose of the State as far as possible to replace the forests taken from this land but the State cannot accomplish the complete restoration it hopes for without the assistance of its loyal citizens. It is a duty this generation owes to the future to see to it that depleted forests are restored. The idle land of the north, now of little value to the commonwealth because of its non-production, can in another score of years again become a vast forest of untold value, providing the various units that go to make this great commonwealth join with the State in a great tree-planting campaign, beginning with Arbor Day.

Michigan has always been regarded as one of the scenic places of America because of its trees, lakes and streams. Let this generation not only restore the devastated forests but add to the natural attractiveness of the State by planting the right varieties of trees in the right places.

With forests and wooded places we associate the wild life that we are so energetically endeavoring to save and restore, so it is entirely proper that Arbor Day also be designated as Bird Day. Protect and save the feathered beauties. Nothing gladdens one more than the beautiful song of a tree-hidden bird.

It is with pleasure, therefore, that I hereby designate Friday May 2, 1924, as Arbor and Bird Day, and earnestly urge that the date mark the beginning of the greatest tree planting campaign ever conducted in any State.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this ninth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty four, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-eighth.

Alex J. Groesbeck
Governor.

By the Governor:
Charles J. Deland.
46t2 Secretary of State.

It Is Great Statesmanship

To say we are happy is not half strong enough, we are "de-lighted" over the stand taken by President Coolidge on the Arbor Day and Re-forestry situation. It is just like most of the sensible moves he has made since he was suddenly abducted into the presidential chair by the death of one whom the Nation sought to immortalize, but since the Teapot Dome Imbroglio has been relegated to the role of common politician.

Coolidge is not in our opinion angling for public approval or ballots when he hashes up the forestry question to the great American public. He is doing this because he feels our very heart blood is being drawn out in the magnificent timber which is being sacrificed every season to the cupidity of implement manufacturers and selfish speculators who would for a few millions convert the land to a treeless barren desert. Just like the destructive tendencies of a child these sharks want to destroy or mutilate the forests. We once had a neighbor with a few apple trees and a restful shady grape arbor in his back yard. In summer 'twas a delightful spot but so many clumps peeved this man. He had a large collection of ancient and honorable half-decayed farm implements to exhibit, so he cut down every standing thing and heaved a sigh of relief, supposing he had done a noble deed, until one day a half baked farmer lad strolled in and remarked; "Jim I heard you had cut down your wife thinkin' she wuz a tree, and I cum over to see about it."

Michigan being one of the timber states, is vitally interested in this matter and Gov. Groesbeck could do no better than place before the people of the state a manifesto calling attention to the criminal waste laid in the woodlands by timber pirates Thousands of acres of unproductive land in the northern counties lies today a wilderness of brush and scrub trees, practically worthless, which might with care be converted into a reservoir of wood supplies for the use of the next generation Right in this county not far from North Adams we can cite you to land which is worse than useless in its present state, which if taken in hand 12 years ago, and planted to proper species, would have been a promising timber lot now with grubs 8 and 10 inches in diameter.

What is the result? Fuel is rapidly depleting and the supply of available lumber material is about gone, in fact there is no primeval trees standing in this vicinity, the cultivated fields are suffering from a continued and increasing absence of necessary moisture in the middle of the summer, rolling lands are getting gullied and ravined until they are almost non-productive, game of all kinds is disappearing or completely extinct, and altogether the woes brought upon our citizenship by the loss of nature's own protective agency is pathetic. Few if any of our younger generation of farmers pay the least attention to a prudent pruning of the woodlot, in fact most of them no sooner get the old homestead in their hands until a regular massacre of the big timber is began, not sparing even the saplings—and if grand-father only knew what was going on he would turn in his grave—and curse the ways of his progenity. He would!

There is a punishment coming—a horrible nightmare of desolation coming to Michigan and it is galloping towards us—we have been prodigally extravagent; we have cut beautiful white oaks for the ignoble fence post—some of these trees three feet in diameter—and where can we find today a single white oak? The shameless filching has gone on and on; black oaks yellow and red oak, shagbark hickory, magnificent elms five feet in diameter with limbs scouring the heavens, have been snatched down for a piccadillo, and we almost feel lonesome without these natural plants. Our ambition has always been to someday own a field of primeval timber (first growth) and show some of these consciousless pirates what a real old-fashioned woodlot ought to be like.

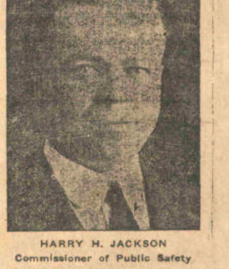
TO REORGANIZE DUTIES OF THE STATE TROOPERS

NEW PUBLIC SAFETY COMMISSIONER DRAWING UP PLANS FOR BROADER SERVICE.

SEEKS TO DIVIDE BUREAUS

Commissioner Harry H. Jackson, head of the Department of Public Safety of the state of Michigan, who was appointed to his present post in October, after fifteen years of meritorious service in the Detroit police department, has set himself to the task of further expanding the usefulness of the department. By nature and experience conservative, he has not hastened to make radical innovations, but has rather devoted himself to plans for developing the many lines of work now carried on by the department in the interest of law enforcement.

The Michigan State Police has been in existence since the days of the war, and was amalgamated with other state organizations to form the Department of Public Safety in 1921, under authority of an act passed by the legislature in that year. The period intervening since that amalgamation has brought out the greater economy of such a consolidated department and has made the way clear for clearer division of its functions in order to obtain still greater efficiency. It is this angle of the administration of the department that the new commissioner has chosen to take up first.



HARRY H. JACKSON
Commissioner of Public Safety

Division of Duties.

He is engaged in preparing a plan for out-lining clearly the duties of each bureau of the department and for fixing responsibility upon each division for its share of the work. This plan will be presented before the first of the year. In its preparation Commissioner Jackson has depended not only upon his experience with the Detroit police department, but also upon his knowledge of state conditions obtained through acquaintance with other peace officers during the past years.

"I find that the public does not yet realize the great variety of duties performed by the Department of Public Safety, nor its many ramifications," states Commissioner Jackson

30 Days' Free Trial Offer
12 Months to Pay

An Amazing Free Trial Offer

A plan has just been formulated whereby American farmers can try out on their farms the very latest model of the great SHARPLES Separator plant. This free trial plan, in the fewest words, is this:

You simply ask us to loan you a SHARPLES Allsteel Cream Separator for a free trial. You send no money and make no deposits. This SHARPLES Allsteel Separator will be sent to your express office, all charges prepaid. You try it for thirty days and we await your decision. The SHARPLES Allsteel Cream Separator that will be sent you is the last work of our Separator engineers and experts. It is of all-steel construction—sturdy and strong. It has a capacity of over six hundred (600) pounds of milk per hour; has the famous Tubular Suspended Bowl, Automatic Variable Feed at Any Speed; is distinguished for its advanced and modern construction features; for its compact, handsome appearance and for its phenomenal separating capacity, and the ease of turning it is almost unbelievable

Big Allowance Given on Old Separators

Send immediately for the details of this free trial offer and the twelve-months-to-pay plan.

THE SHARPLES SEPARATOR COMPANY
West Chester, Pa.

Following are some of the opinions expressed by various professors and teachers in noted agricultural schools regarding the SHARPLES Allsteel Cream Separator that we are lending to farmers on Free Trial.

At Kansas University—"Well, I like that; it is so easy to turn and clean," and Prof. ———— said "that is the biggest little separator I ever saw."

At Nebraska University — "That is some separator; I can recommend that to any one," while the Profs. ———— said, "It was the greatest separator they had ever seen."

At Missouri University—"That separator will crown the separator business in Missouri when people learn how easy it turns and what it does."

At Ohio University—"If we had not run it ourselves and tested it they would not believe it; sure have a wonderful machine."

At Ames — "You have made a big improvement in separators and are using the right methods, and want one as soon as possible."

Again at Illinois, Wisconsin, Purdue and other State Universities the Professors and authorities call the Allsteel Separator Wonderful.

The Art of Selling

"BE YE HIT?"

SYNOPSIS. — Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin. Binkus has received a letter from Washington to be carried across the ocean, and Jack sails with him. Arriving in England, Binkus is arrested, but Jack has the letter and proceeds to London. Jack delivers the papers to Franklin in London. Binkus is released and joins them in the great city. Jack orders fashionable clothes. Jack and Margaret meet and are more in love than ever, but Colonel Hare is not eager for the marriage. Franklin's efforts to obtain better treatment for the colonies are futile. He evades the attempt of the king's men to "tow him into port." War becomes imminent. General Clarke calls the Yankees cowards in Jack's hearing. The young American demands a retraction. Lionel Clarke, the general's son, and a suitor for Margaret's hand, takes up the quarrel.

Captain Preston went with Solomon Binkus next day to the address on the card of Lieutenant Clarke. It was the house of the general, who was waiting with his son in the reception room. They walked together to the Amack club. The general was self-contained. It would seem that his bad opinion of Yankees was not quite so comprehensive as it had been. The whole proceeding went forward with the utmost politeness.

"General, Mr. Binkus and John Irons, Jr., are my friends," said Captain Preston.

"Indeed!" the general answered.

"Yes, and they are friends of England. They saved my neck in America. I have assured young Irons that your words, if they were correctly reported to me, were spoken in haste, and that they do not express your real opinion."

"And what, sir, were the words reported to you?" the general asked.

Preston repeated them.

"That is my opinion."

"It is mine also," young Clarke declared.

Solomon's face changed quickly. He took deliberate aim at the enemy and drawled:

"Can't be yer opinion is wuth more than the lives o' these young fellers that's goin' to fight."

"Gentlemen, you will save time by dropping all thought of apologies," said the general.

"Then it only remains for you to choose your weapons and agree with us as to time and place," said Preston.

"I choose pistols," said the young Britisher. "The time and place may suit your convenience, so it be soon and not too far away."

"Let us say the cow wallow on Shooter's hill, near the oaks, at sunrise tomorrow," Preston proposed.

"I agree," the lieutenant answered.

"Whatever comes of it, let us have secrecy and all possible protection from each side to the other when the affair is ended," said Preston.

"I agree to that also," was the answer of young Clarke.

When they were leaving, Solomon said to Preston: "That 'ere gin'ral is as big as Goliar."

CHAPTER IX

The Encounter.

Solomon, Jack and their friend left London that afternoon in the saddle and took lodgings at The Rose and Garter, less than a mile from the scene appointed for the encounter. That morning the Americans had sent a friend of Preston by post chaise to Deal, with Solomon's luggage. Preston had also engaged the celebrated surgeon, Doctor Brooks, to spend the night with them so that he would be sure to be on hand in the morning. The doctor had officiated at no less than a dozen duels and enjoyed these affairs so keenly that he was glad to give his help without a fee. The party had gone out in the saddle because Preston had said that the horses might be useful.

So, having discussed the perils of the immediate future, they had done all it was in their power to do to prepare for them. Late that evening the general and his son and four other gentlemen arrived at The Rose and Garter. Certain of them had spent the afternoon in the neighborhood shooting birds and rabbits.

Solomon got back to bed early and sat for a time in their room tinkering with the pistols. When the locks were working "right," as he put it, he polished their grips and barrels.

Jack awoke suddenly and opened his eyes. The candle was lighted. Solomon was leaning over him. He was drawing on his trousers.

"Come, my son," said the scout in a gentle voice. "They ain't a cloud an' the moon has got a smile on her face. Come, my young David. Here's the breeches an' the purty stockin's an' shoes, an' the lily white shirt. Slip 'em on an' we'll kneel down an' have a word o' prayer. This 'ere ain't no common fight. It's a battle with tyranny. It's like the fight o' David an' Goliar. Here's yer ol' sling waitin' fer ye!"

Solomon felt the pistols and stroked their grips with a loving hand.

Side by side they knelt by the bed together for a moment of silent prayer.

Others were stirring in the inn. They could hear footsteps and low voices in a room near them. Jack put on his suit of brown velvet and his white silk stockings and best linen, which he had brought in a small bag. Jack was looking at the pistols, when there came a rap at the door. Preston entered with Doctor Brooks.

"We are to go out quietly ahead of the others," said the captain. "They will follow in five minutes."

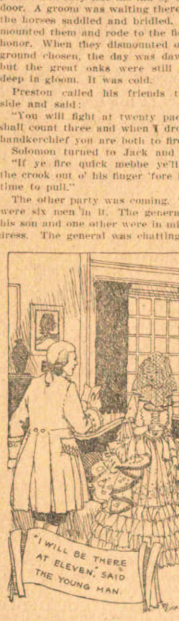
Solomon had put on the old hanger which had come to England with him in his box. He put the pistols in his pocket and they left the inn by a rear door. A groom was waiting there with the horses saddled and bridled. They mounted them and rode to the field of honor. When they dismounted on the ground chosen, the day was dawning, but the great oaks were still waist deep in gloom. It was cold.

Preston called his friends to his side and said:

"You will fight at twenty paces. I shall count three and when I drop my handkerchief you are both to fire."

Solomon turned to Jack and said: "If ye fire quick mebbe ye'll take the crook out o' his finger 'fore it has time to pull."

The other party was coming. There were six men in it. The general and his son and one other were in military dress. The general was chatting with a friend. The pistols were loaded by Solomon and General Clarke, while each watched the other. The Lieutenant's friends and seconds stood close together laughing at some jest.



"I WILL BE THERE AT ELEVEN," SAID THE YOUNG MAN.

"That's funny, I'll say, what—what!" said one of the gentlemen.

Jack turned to look at him, for there had been a curious inflection in his "what, what!" He was a stout, highly colored man with large, staring gray eyes. The young American wondered where he had seen him before.

Preston paced the ground and laid down strips of white ribband marking the distance which was to separate the principals. He summoned the young men and said: "Gentlemen, is there no way in which your honor can be satisfied without fighting?"

They shook their heads.

"Your stations have been chosen by lot. Irons, yours is there. Take your ground, gentlemen."

The young men walked to their places and at this point the graphic Major Solomon Binkus, whose keen eyes observed every detail of the scene, is able to assume the position of narrator, the words which follow being from a letter he wrote to John Irons of Albany.

"Our young David stood up thar as straight an' han'some as a young spruce on a still day—not a quiver in ary twig. The Clarke boy was a leetle pale an' when he raised his pistol I could see a twitch in his lips. He looked kind o' stiff. I see they was one thing 'bout shootin' he hadn't learnt. It don't do to deny it—'cause a gun don't allus have to be p'inted careful to kill a man.

"We all stood watchin' every move. I could hear a bird singin' twenty rod—'twere that still. Preston stood a leetle out o' line 'bout half-way betwixt 'em. Up came his hand with the han'kerchief in it. Then Jack raised his pistol and took a peek down the line he wanted. The han'kerchief was in the air. Don't seem so it had fell an inch when the pistols went pop! pop! Jack's hollered fust. Clarke's pistol fell. His arm dropped an' swung limp as a rope's end. His hand turned red an' blood began to spurt above it. I see Jack's bullet had jumped into his right wrist an' tore it wide open. The lieutenant staggered, bleedin' like a stuck whale. He'd 'a' gone to the ground, but his friends grabbed him. I run to Jack.

"'Be ye hit?' I says.

"'I think his bullet teched me a little on the top o' the left shoulder,' says he.

"I see his coat were tore an' we took it off an' the jacket, an' I ripped the shirt some an' see that the bullet had kind o' scuffed its foot on him goin' by, an' left a track in the skin. It didn't mount to nothin'. The Doctor washed it off an' put a plaster on.

"'Looks as if he'd drawed a line on yer heart an' yer bullet had lifted his aim,' I says. 'Ye shoot quick, Jack, an' mebbe that's what saved ye.'

"It looked kind o' neevarious like that 'ere Englishman had intended they was goin' to be one Yankee less. Jack put on his jacket an' his coat an' we stepped over to see how they was gettin' erlong with the other feller. The two doctors was tryin' fer to fix his arm and he was groanin' severe. Jack leaned over and looked at him.

"'I'm sorry,' he says. 'Is there anything I can do?'

"'No, sir. You've done enuff,' growled the old general.

"One o' his party stepped up to Jack. He were dressed like a high-up officer in the army. They was a cur'ous look in his eyes—kind o' skeered like. Seemed so I'd seen him afore somewheres.

"'I fancy ye're a good shot, sir—a good shot, sir—what—what?' he says to Jack, an' the words come as fast as a bird's twitter.

"'I've had a lot o' practice,' says our boy.

"'Kin ye kill that bird—what—what?' says he, p'intin' at a hawk that were a-cuttin' circles in the air.

"'If he comes clus' 'nough,' says Jack.

"I passed him the loaded pistol. In 'bout two seconds he lifted it and bang she went, an' down come the hawk.

"Them fellers all looked at one 'nother.

"'Gin'ral, shake hands with this 'ere boy,' says the man with the skeered eyes. 'If he is a Yankey he's a decent lad—what—what?'

"The gin'eral shook hands with Jack an', says he: 'Young man I have no doubt o' yer curidge or yer decency.'

"A grand pair o' hosses an' a closed coach druv up an' the ol' what-whatter an' two other men got into it an' hustled off 'cross the field towards the pike which it looked as if they was in a hurry. 'Fore he were out o' sight a military amb'lance druv up. Preston come over to us an' says he:

"'We better be goin'.'

"'Do ye know who he were?' asks Jack.

"'If ye know ye better fergit it,' says Preston.

"'How could I? He were the King o' England,' says Jack. 'I knowed him by the look o' his eyes.'

"'Sart'in sure,' says I. 'He's the man that was bein' toted in a chair.'

"'Hush! I tell ye to fergit it,' says Preston.

"'I can fergit all but the fact that he behaved like a gentleman,' says Jack.

"'I s'pose he were usin' his private brain,' says I."

This, with some slight changes in spelling, paragraphing and punctuation, is the account which Solomon Binkus gave of the most exciting adventure these two friends had met with.

Preston came to Jack and whispered: "The outcome is a great surprise to the other side. Young Clarke is a dead shot. An injured officer of the English army may cause unexpected embarrassment. But you have time enough and no haste. You can take the post chaise and reach the ship well ahead of her sailing."

"I am of a mind not to go with you," Jack said to Solomon. "When I go, I shall take Margaret with me."

So it happened that Jack returned to London while Solomon waited for the post chaise to Deal.

"Margaret, I want to take you to America—"

Careless Taxi Driver

A taxi was standing at a cabstand with the front of the cab almost on the crossing. The driver was sitting on the seat waiting patiently for a fare. He had been waiting two hours. A man was crossing the road deep in meditation, when he suddenly caught sight of the cab. He jumped, glared at the driver for a moment, and then exclaimed, "Why don't you blow your horn?"—The Tattler.

HOW SILVER IN INDIA HELPED TO WIN THE WAR

Silver fought another good fight in the World war. In 1918 the allied armies were battling desperately. Every available man was on the fighting line. One of the things the allies needed most was jute; gunny sacking is another name for jute. There is only one place in the world to get jute—India. Patiently the British government had taught the natives that silver certificates were as good as silver, but by 1918 the British government, by jute purchases, had withdrawn nearly all the silver used to back these certificates, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. Germany learned this and began propaganda in India. A run on Indian banks would have destroyed the confidence of the natives in Britain and thrown India into revolt.

Silver must be found somewhere to save India, and possibly to save the allies. Supplies of mined silver had been exhausted. There was only one big source of silver, the vaults of the United States treasury. Here great piles of silver dollars backed our silver certificates. Britain asked for that silver. The United States sold it gladly. More than 400,000,000 of silver dollars were melted and sent to India later to be replaced in the vaults by new purchases through the Pittman silver act. That's how silver helped win the war.

Finds "Tides" in Lava in Crater of Volcano

The discovery of daily and monthly "tides" in lava in the crater of Kilauea volcano in the Hawaiian islands was made recently by Dr. T. A. Jaggar, director of the Hawaiian volcano observatory of the United States weather bureau. The observatory is on Kilauea.

Dr. Jaggar says the observations might be valuable in predicting future eruptions. The liquid lava shows a twice-a-day fluctuation in level of from two to seven feet, a daily variation of three to five feet, and a monthly shifting of the time of maximum and minimum level. This would not be the case if the tides were due to weather conditions which change irregularly, but it might be due, Dr. Jaggar says, to control by the sun and moon.

The hard lava floor of the crater shows a daily change in level of about one foot, but the times of maximum and minimum are nearly opposite those for the liquid lava, the high level occurring in the morning in the case of the liquid and after midnight in the case of the solid lava during a period of two months when observations were taken.—Kansas City Star.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness are oftentimes symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Strong Bank-Note Paper

The secret of making the linen tissue for Bank of England notes has keen kept for 800 years by the trusted employees of one firm. Of a peculiar whiteness, the paper is so tough that a folded note can sustain the weight of 50 pounds without tearing. In the days before postal orders became common, it was customary, when sending money by mail, to cut a note in halves, inclose the first with the invoice and await acknowledgment before parting with the second.—Popular Mechanics.

Master

They were on their honeymoon and she regarded him as the most wonderful being in the whole world.

They strolled along the seashore. Suddenly he stopped and in a fine poetic frenzy declaimed: "Roll on, thou deep and mighty ocean, roll!"

"Oh, look, Georgie!" she cried in ecstasy. "It's doing it!"

Women, like the moon, can shine with borrowed light.

Nutten Is Being "Investigated"

Most of our citizens will remember Fred Nutten a native of Moscow township in his younger days, later of North Adams and Addison and finally of Adrian where he was elected to the responsible position of sheriff of Lenawee county some years ago. Nutten had a number of exciting experiences running down malefactors. He is now being sued by the board of Supervisors of Lenawee county for the sum of $641.80 which it is claimed he overcharged the county in 47 different cases during his incumbency. In the first place he was sued in Adrian courts but through some technicality Nutten asked for a change of venue, which was granted, hence the case is now in Monroe courts, probably to avoid some tinkering by outside parties So far 23 jurors have been drawn and the line of witnesses includes some very prominent people. Possibly the Supervisors would have better success in collecting this money if they began at the other end and levied a little more tax to supply the deficiency. That is the logical way according to modern ethics among officials.

we hear a good deal about investigations in Washington but to be investigated down here in the sandlots is certainly laughable. whether Nutten is guilty or he isn't.

Many new ideas were given after which the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Marian LaFollette Thursday afternoon May 1st. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Not a Local Problem.

"Crime is no longer a local problem; it is state-wide and even interstate, and the best police officers have long realized this. In a state department which is designed to give service they find an ally of the greatest value. Our records show that the volume of calls from local officers, with regard to every kind of crime, is constantly growing.

"Even on its police side, the Department of Public Safety operates in many ways that the public does not always know. A very large part of its work is done by plain clothes men and these may pursue their work in any community successfully without ever coming to the notice of the average citizen. This is particularly the case where state officers are called in to work with local ones.

"It will be my object to build up the investigation bureau of the department to the utmost of my abillity and to use it to assist the sheriffs and other peace officers in solving serious crimes and in giving to the smaller towns and the counties expert service of men familiar with all of the phases of crime detection."

Death of Jasper J. Wells

Jasper J. Wells son of Abel G. and Lydia J. Wells, was born August 3, 1847, in Adams township, Hillsdale county, Mich., and died April 20, 1924, having spent his life of nearly 77 years in this county. August 3, 1867 he was married t Alice L. Gowdy. who preceededhim to the better land by nine months.

To this union were born ten children, all of whom are living except one. Susie.

He is also survived by a sister, Miss Hattie V. Wells and an adopted sister, Mrs. Emma G. Pierce, both of Devils Lake, 23 grand-children and 7 great-grand children.

He was converted in young manhood and joined the Methodist church at West Wheatland where with his family he was a most faithful attendant for many years until with the few remaining members he was transferred to the Methodist church at North Adams. Mr. Wells may be counted as one of the fast passing away generation of pioneers being born upon the farm which his father took up from the government in early days.

Death of Levi Rickerd

Levi Rickerd who nad been ill about two weeks, passed away at his home here on Monday, April 28th. He was born in Wheatland township, Hillsdale county, Mich. May 11, 1843.

He was united in marriage to Mary O'Neil of Wheatland township August 30, 1865. To this union two sons were born, Frank, who died at the age of six years, L. G. Rickerd now of Wheatland. Mrs. Rickerd died Nov. 2. 1918.

He was remarried Aug. 14. 1920, to Mrs. Frances Wilson of North Adams.

He was a member of the Congregational church for 51 years and Supt. of the Sunday school for 15 continuous years and only missed two Sundays during the time.

Deceased was Past Master of Adams Lodge, F. & A. M. No.189 Past Patron of Alpha Chapter. No. 288, O. E. S., and N. G. of Rural Lodge No. 72, I. O. O. F. He was active in village affairs, having been President, Clerk and a councilman, also a veteran of the Civil war, enlisting in August 1862 and being discharged in July 1865.

We can also insure Fairs, or any public outdoor event against rain or wind. Remember at the sign of the Hartford in North Adams.

Another Pioneer Gathered to His Fathers

By the death of John O'Harrow Wheatland loses one of its earliest pioneer settlers. He passed away last week Thursday evening some time as he was found dead in the morning, He had attained the ripe old age of 86 years, and for 76 years had resided on his native soil in this township, coming to Michigan when the red men roamed at will over our plains and shot game in our woodlands. He bad often in an early day accompanied the Indian warriors on their hunting expeditions. Mr. O'Harrow and his father helped the government to build the old Michigan turnpike, earning the munificent sum of 50 cents per day!

When the Black Hawk war was hatched up he enlisted in Tecumseh and went forth to help conquer the savages. After Black Hawk surrendered at Prairie du Chien, Illinois, the subject of this sketch often saw him on horseback traversing the "Pike."

Those from away who attended the funeral services of Levi Rickerd on Wednesday were Geo. VanAllen and Forest VanAllen and family, James O'Neil and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Schelles of Jackson, Mrs. Charles Fairbanks and grand-daughter of Hillsdale.

See "The Stream of Life"

A really high priced film of the highest grade comes to the Congregational church next Sunday evening May 4th and it is hoped and believed the citizens of our town will see fit to patronize the venture—for venture it is—costing quite a sum of money to bring to us, Mr. Hunt, the pastor, has decided to give this new form of worship a try-out in our town, and as there is no regular moving picture, he hopes the interest shown will warrant a continuence of these monthly Sunday evening features. Members of the church have seen the film in Jackson and can vouch for its reliability. while it is customary to display these films in churches it is hoped no one will construe it to mean that regular worship is to be interfered with in any way. The Congregational church and society most cordially invites all to be present and enjoy an innovation that is being taken up everywhere, the large city church setting the example, as we suppose to keep abreast of the times See ad on the front page.

There will be no charge at the door but a silver offering will be taken to defray actual expenses, The future success of your Sunday evening services depends on how the public greets this new idea.

Mother's Day Proclamation

Custom has decreed that once each year a day shall be set apart from all others especially for observance as Mother's Day. The plan was brought forth so that every person might give more than ordinary attention to Mother, so that we might show to her our deepest oppreciation of her sacrifice, devotion, guidance and loving care.

In the rush and swirl of present day affairs and business one is inclined to forget for the moment the determination of Mother that we should have the blessings of life that she did not enioy, and that to bring about the realization of her ambition it deprived her of the very happiness she sought to bestow upon us. It has been this motherhood ideal that has raised the standard of American citizenship to its present exalted place.

By virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I do hereby designate and proclaim Sunday, May eleventh, 1924, as Mothers Day, and I call upon our people, both old and young, to gather in their several places of worship and take part in services appropriate to the day. And let absent sons and daughters take this occasion to visit the mother in the old home, or where such a visit is impossible. let them send a message of cheer and greeting.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this nineteenth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-four, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-eighth. ALEX. J. GROESBECK, Gov.

PLANTS YOUR GARDEN QUICKER and BETTER

The Harrison Garden Planter plants all garden seeds from beans to radishes in straight rows at the right depth and with even spacing. It does the work in one-half the time, eliminates scattered and bunchy, crowded growths which require laborious thinning and saves seed and temper. Cabbage, head lettuce and tomato plants grow strong and sturdy for early transplanting when hot-beds are seeded with the HARRISON.

THE HARRISON GARDEN PLANTER

is substantially made from steel and heavy gauge galvanized iron, and is most attractively finished. It holds one-half pint of seed—enough for any ordinary planting. It's easy to operate—no mechanism to break or get out of order. 4 spacing and measuring cylinders for various sized seeds and 15 feet of the best No. 1 chalk line are included with each planter.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Passes Bonus Bill After Rejecting the Cash Option Amendment.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

AT LAST the American ex-service man who fought in the World war seems assured of receiving a bonus, or as he prefers to call it, an adjusted compensation. The senate on Wednesday passed the bill essentially as it was adopted by the house, and in both cases the majority was so great that there is no doubt it would be repassed over a presidential veto. But the bonus provided for is not in cash, so it may be Mr. Coolidge can see his way clear to approval of the measure. He, like President Harding, was opposed to a cash bonus for the payment of which no special financial plan was offered.

According to the present measure, instead of cash the former service man will receive a twenty-year endowment insurance certificate on which he can obtain a loan after two years, equal to 90 per cent of the current cash value of the policy. This loan will be obtained through a bank which will be reimbursed by the government in the event of a default. The loan value of a $1,000 policy would be $87.93 at the end of two years, $153.52 in five years, and $589.19 in fifteen years.

Senator Copeland of New York, supported by a number of Democrats, tried to have the bill amended to provide for a cash option, but this was defeated, 37 to 48, because most of the senators felt it would mean the certain veto of the measure and perhaps its defeat. However, the Democratic leaders announced after passage of the bill that they considered it an unsatisfactory makeshift and that next winter they would make a fight for the cash option. If a Democratic administration is elected in the fall they believe they can so amend the law. With several minor amendments adopted on the floor, the bill was passed by a vote of 67 to 17. Eight Republicans and nine Democrats were recorded in opposition.

The cost of the bonus under the insurance plan is expected to be somewhere between $2,202,467,420, the figure given by the actuary of the veterans' bureau, and $3,631,047,691, the amount claimed by the treasury actuary. The cost the first year would be considerably in excess of $100,000,000.

Under its terms the basic rate of compensation is $1 a day for home service and $1.25 for overseas service, with maximums of $500 for home service and $625 for overseas service. The first sixty days of service are excluded from the computation. Enlisted men of the army, navy, and marine corps and officers up to and including captains in the army and marine corps and lieutenants in the navy are embraced within its scope.

Those entitled to $50 or less receive cash. Others receive no cash, but are given twenty-year endowment insurance certificates, the face value of which is the adjusted service credit plus 25 per cent plus interest at 4 per cent compounded annually.

Having thus disposed of the bonus, the senate turned its attention to the revenue bill, and the prospect was that the discussion of this measure would continue for several weeks. Even so, the leaders in congress now think it may be possible to adjourn early in June, before the opening of the Republican national convention.

EVEN the most enthusiastic prohibitionist will not deny the intense and widespread interest in the hearings started last week before the house judiciary committee which had under consideration fifty-nine bills to amend the Volstead act and legalize the manufacture, sale and consumption of 2.75 per cent beer and of light wines. First were heard those who argued for this liberalization of the law, and the most interesting and perhaps most influential of these was Samuel Gompers, who spoke for the 4,000,000 members of the American Federation of Labor. A few of his sentences were:

"You ask me what influence legalization of 2.75 per cent beer would have on general prohibition enforcement. I answer in one sentence: It would transform the people of the United States from a whisky drinking to a beer drinking nation."

"The dissatisfied man is the one who becomes the drunkard. The satisfied man becomes the good citizen. And I say that this prohibition of today has caused the utmost in dissatisfaction."

"No one wants the saloon. No one will be foolish enough to try to repeal the eighteenth amendment. What we who plead for 2.75 per cent beer want to do is to get the good that lies in temperance and rid ourselves of the evils of the present prohibition."

Several eminent psychiatrists told the committee of the great increase in insanity from alcoholism since prohibition, and at least one minister of the gospel stepped forward to declare that the Volstead act is unenforceable, unpopular and wrong ethically, morally and socially. A large number of samples of the poisonous stuff sold in Chicago for "hootch" comprised one of the exhibits.

OFFERS for Muscle Shoals were up before the senate agricultural committee and a delegation of Tennessee manufacturers appeared to argue against the Ford bid. Their statements may be thus summarized:

1. Expenditure of thousands of dollars made the South look on Ford as its savior if given Muscle Shoals.

2. Some $35,000 for this propaganda came from Ford friends in Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, and Memphis alone. How much more, and its source is unknown.

3. But the South now is waking up to the fact that Ford in Muscle Shoals means ruin and not salvation.

THE house committee on banking and currency, perfecting the McFadden bill revising the national bank act, approved city-wide branch banking proposals. The committee's decision in this is approved by Controller of the Currency Dawes.

TESTIMONY before the Teapot Dome committee lost its ex-parte character for a few minutes when James O. Lewis, a consulting petroleum engineer, upheld Former Secretary Denby's policy of getting the naval reserve oil out of Teapot Dome and into storage as expeditiously as possible. He said:

"If Teapot were rapidly developed today, the recoverable oil could be got out in two years. Otherwise, with the gas pressure exhausted, it would take twenty to fifty years and be very expensive. The loss of gas pressure would, in short, unfit Teapot for an emergency."

Mr. Lewis said the amount of oil in Teapot had proved "very disappointing"—12,000,000 to 24,000,000 of barrels instead of the bureau of mines' estimate of 135,000,000.

WHILE the Borah committee was hearing stories of the alleged plot to bring about the indictment of Senator Wheeler in Montana, the same topic was brought up before the Brookhart committee. John S. Glenn of Nashville, Tenn., told the latter committee the first move to "get" Wheeler was engineered by W. J. Burns and Mal Daugherty. Speaker Gillett of the house appeared voluntarily before the committee and exploded the sensational testimony of Capt. H. L. Scaife concerning a "trunk full of whisky" which Scaife had more than intimated was sent to Mr. Gillett's office.

Harry Daugherty, being now free to talk, made a red hot speech in Columbus in which he denied flatly much of the testimony heard by the Wheeler committee. His most significant statement was that he had given up his cabinet post rather than "contribute to a treasonable cause." Files of the Department of Justice, he said, contained "abundant proof of the plans, purposes and hellish designs of the communist internationale."

"Bear in mind," he added, "that the files which I refused to deliver to the Wheeler investigating committee at the time my resignation was requested were demanded by Brookhart and Wheeler, two United States senators who spent last summer in Russia with their soviet friends—those same soviet and communist leaders who preach destruction of constitutional government, destruction even of human life."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE traveled to New York last week and spoke at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press. The more important of his statements related directly to European affairs. He said he hoped France would accept the Dawes committee report and that American capital would join in the loan proposed for Germany. He thought that thus the reparations question might be definitely settled, and promised that he would then try to bring about another world conference on disarmament to carry on the work begun by the Washington conference and to take up the codification of international law with an attempt to establish the rules of warfare and to determine the rights of neutrals. He also indorsed the Harding proposal for American adherence to the world court.

The President touched on the desire for profits and the quest for easy money, revealed in current government investigations, as symptomatic of the morbid financial state of mind brought on by the war, and continued:

"From all of this sordidness the affairs of government, of course, suffered. In some of it a few public officers were guilty participants. But the wonder is not that this was so much or so many, rather that it has been so little and so few.

"The encouraging thing at present is the evidence of a well nigh complete return to normal methods of action, and a sane public opinion. The gravity of guilt of this kind is fully realized and publicly reprehended. There is an exceedingly healthy disposition to uproot it altogether, and administer punishment wherever competent evidence of guilt can be produced. That I am doing and propose to continue."

REALIZING that economic relations between Japan and America are far more vital to the former than to the latter, Japan's privy council is understood to have indorsed the government's conduct in the immigration exclusion matter. That is, continued protest against the American exclusion act but no retaliation. The Japanese were still hoping that President Coolidge would veto the measure, and this he was asked to do by a great mass meeting in Osaka. Ambassador Hanihara, meanwhile, explained to congress that the words "grave consequences" in his note were not meant to convey anything in the nature of a threat, but Representative Johnson, chairman of the house committee on immigration, replied with a statement that the action of congress had been assured before the note was written and that therefore the passage of the exclusion clause was not due to resentment against the ambassador's language.

BECAUSE of his "interference" in the senate investigation of the internal revenue bureau by suggesting the employment of Francis Heney as investigator, Governor Pinchot lost the chance to sit in the Republican national convention as delegate at large from Pennsylvania. Representative Vare and others turned on him for what they considered disloyalty to the administration, and Ralph B. Strassburger of Norristown defeated the governor by a large majority. Pinchot blamed the wets. Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware all elected delegates favorable to Coolidge and seemingly his nomination is an absolute certainty. Reports are that he wants Frank Lowden of Illinois as his running mate, and, failing that, wishes Lowden to be temporary chairman and to deliver the keynote speech. It is interesting to note that the Democratic national committee is considering the selection of a woman as temporary chairman of the national convention in New York.

AMONG the notable deaths of the week were those of Mme. Eleonora Duse, the famous Italian tragedienne, who passed away in Pittsburgh after an attack of influenza, and Marie Corelli, the popular English novelist. Doctor Helfferich, former minister of finance of Germany, was one of the victims of a railway wreck in Switzerland.

"Musher" in Arctic in Constant Peril

Nenana, Alaska.—The "musher" in the Arctic circle, where winter prevails about eight months out of the year, must never relax his vigilance if he would survive the perils peculiar to the region.

To the explorer, prospector, trapper or hauler of mail and supplies who must go north of the Yukon river basin, one of the greatest winter hazards is lack of timber for firewood. In some localities the only timber is aspen, commonly called poplar, scrub spruce and stunted brush.

When a man faces 50 degrees below zero in sleeping bag and canvas tent, he requires a big log fire and abundant fuel to keep it going. When the blizzard sweeps down, man and beast are compelled to seek shelter.

In the bitterest cold few lungs can withstand the "scorching" atmosphere that appears to sear them like a flame, while the blood is turning to ice. "Frozen" lungs are not uncommon.

Submission to the cold of the Arctic has a different effect than might be imagined. The man in danger of death from freezing is overtaken by a rather pleasant lethargy.

In stopping for rest the uninitiated often tarry too long, and on arising wonder why the limbs refuse to function with their wonted suppleness. After several such halts further progress becomes a struggle, and unless a fire is available immediately the chances are very great that the man will be frozen.

THIS BRIGHT BABY GIRL

Brought Joy to Home. Mrs. Price's Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scootac, Pa.—"I never felt like working, and when I would try to do any work standing on my feet, I would just drag around all day long. At times I would have terrible pains and would be in bed three or four days. I was in this condition about a year when I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the papers. I had heard different women say it was good for women's troubles, and my aunt thought it would help me as it had helped her. So I took the Vegetable Compound and it brought things right, and I was in good shape before I became a mother again. I believe it helps at birth, too, as with both my other babies I suffered a great deal more than with this one. I thank you a thousand times for the good your medicine has done me. It has surely made our home a happy one."—Mrs. ROBERT PRICE, Scootac, via Lockhaven, Pa.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use.

"Done!" Why, cat-fetch it, he's lived here all his life."—Kansas City Star.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

U. S. GOVERNMENT BUYS IT

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Mt. Clemens—John G. Clark, of Toledo, visiting his daughter, Mrs. Richard Wilkins, at her apartment in the Barron block, fell down the stairway and died soon after of a broken neck.

Ionia—For the first time in the history of this city, dancing parties will be permitted in the schools. The two new buildings, the Emerson and Jefferson, have gymnasiums which will be utilized in that manner.

Manistee—An analysis of oil found at the 1,100-foot level of the Michigan Oil Development Co. well No. 2 by the company's geologist shows it to be about 47 per cent petroleum, it was said at the company's offices.

Detroit—Automobiles took a toll of 69 lives for the first three months of 1924, six more than during the same period of 1923, according to a report made by the accident and investigation department bureau of the police department.

Chelsea—The village of Chelsea was threatened by fire, but with the assistance of fire fighting equipment from Ann Arbor and Jackson, the flames were halted after two warehouses, valued at $10,000, and $2,500, and a barn placed at $1,500, had been destroyed.

Battle Creek—The city commission here has acquired 46 acres of land adjoining 100 acres already owned just north of the city, on the Battle Creek-Bellevue road, and plans are under way for the establishing of an 18-hole public golf course. The purchase of the land was made primarily to protect Battle Creek's water system.

Lansing—The Michigan training school at Lapeer will have four new units to take care of the 500 feeble-minded children now on the waiting list. This will bring the population of the Lapeer school up to nearly 3,000. The State administrative board has asked for estimates on cost of construction of the four housing and school units.

Lansing—Filling-in of the north shore of Grand river, just west of Lansing's municipal power plant and dam, by Charles W. Foster, was stopped by an application in district court for a restraining order on behalf of the city. D. G. F. Warner, city attorney, declares Foster by filling in the river bed at that point, would seriously impair the flowage and reduce the capacity of the power plant.

Ann Arbor—Men sentenced to jail in Washtenaw county will be put to work on the highways of the county under an arrangement between Judge George W. Sample and the county board of supervisors. The men will be returned to jail here each night and sent out to the road work each morning under the control of deputy sheriffs. Prisoners in the past have been sent to the house of correction in Detroit.

Three Rivers—One hundred black walnut trees and several Norway spruces have been received by the Abiel Fellows Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution from the State Conservation Department. The trees will be planted along the route of M-13, the Kalamazoo-Grand Rapids trunk line, in St. Joseph County. Each of the trees will be named for some of the county's gold star veterans of the World War.

Petoskey—Crooked Lake has yielded the body of Daniel Bonishing, drowned Oct. 28, 1923, as he was attempting to rescue Hobart Park, his companion in a duck hunting expedition. Park and Bonishing, the latter a 22-year-old Indian, were thrown from a boat as they were attempting to recover two ducks they had shot. Bonishing reached shore safely but plunged in again when he noticed Park was having difficulty. Both were drowned.

Lansing—The State has rounded out its highway finance program for the current fiscal year by placing a $2,000,000 bond issue with the Detroit Trust Co. The bonds were awarded for a premium of $100 and an interest rate which will cost the State an average of 4.36 per cent. The issue brings the total highway bonded indebtedness to $40,050,000, leaving $9,950,000 of the $50,000,000 issue to be expended in the next fiscal year starting July 1.

Ann Arbor—Student supervision of college social affairs was held to be better than the chaperone system, by the deans of men of more than 25 colleges throughout the nation, in their session here. The general consensus of opinion appeared to be that no matter how hard the chaperones might try, they were not as capable as the students themselves, who were learned in such affairs and thereby better able to detect any undesirable influences.

Grand Rapids—Highway construction records for Michigan are being smashed by G. P. Scharl, Muskegon, in his construction of the Grand Rapids-Lansing concrete road. Scharl's objective is to grade, cut and fill the new right-of-way, prepare portions of the old roads and to lay a 20-foot pavement 47 miles long within 12 months. Operations are being carried on 24 hours of the day. For 14 miles, the stretch upon which work is now concentrated, high-candled electric lights illuminate the place at night.

Sault Ste. Marie—The U. S. government is losing approximately $2,000,000 per year at the Sault Ste. Marie ship canal alone, as a result of the lowered water level resultant from the Chicago drainage canal, Superintendent L. C. Sabin of the Saint Mary's Falls canal has stated. Under a permit from the government the Chicago canal is allowed the use of 4,167 cubic feet of water per second, but it is using nearer to 9,000 cubic feet, Mr. Sabin said. This has lowered the level of water from 4 inches to 4 1/2 inches.

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital

President Coolidge has a real problem on his hands in deciding what the Administration's attitude should be towards the Japanese. If he signs the exclusion bill passed by Congress he may lose his Secretary of State and if he vetoes the bill he may lose the electoral vote of California and a number of other western states. Even if the President should veto the bill Congress in all probability would write it on the statute book for the legislators, for once at least in half a century of talking about it, are all riled up on the question of Oriental immigration. As far as any serious consequences are concerned as the result of barring the Japanese, no one familiar with the situation expects anything more alarming than the loss of one or two diplomatic heads.

Hiram Johnson is clear off the reservation. Although he has abandoned all hope of getting the Renomination, he is still driving away at Coolidge and there is no limit to his assaults, The California Senator still calls himself a Republican but it will be hard for him to find a place in the party again after the storm and stress of the presidential campaign has passed into history.

Talk, Hardly rising above the level of murmurs, is heard now and then concerning a possible formidable third-party movement, having its inception in the agricultural states of the middle west, but the long and serious illness of Senator LaFollette makes it difficult for the movement to gain much headway. And if LaFollette should regain his health before the middle of the summer, not even he would attempt to lead the third party into action unless he was more than reasonably sure of success.

The New York musicians who are fighting the Dill bill, which would permit musical compositions to be broadcast by radio regardless of the copyright laws, have a good press agent, from all indications. When they arrived in Washington en masse to appear before a Congressional committee they lost no time in assembling at the Press Club and giving the correspondents their fill of music. Among the visitors were some of the best known composers in America. Needless to say their Congressional appeal resulted in ample publicity.

Speaking of Press agents, one of the best of these in the capital is Ben Marsh, connected with the Farmers' National Council. His greatest feat is the pending investigation of charges that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, by alleged maladministration of the packers control act, has helped to wipe out competition in the packing industry. Real scandal is promised before the inquiry is completed. In Boise Penrose's day as Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Marsh once appeared as a witness. After telling Penrose, who he represented that is, the Farmers' Council, the Senator asked: "How many members has it?" "One million", replied Marsh. "Name them," commanded Penrose, and that ended the hearing.

For the time being Harry Daugherty has transferred his headquarters from Washington to Asheville, S. C., where his invalid wife is living. The most interesting news that has come through from there that the former Attorney General has consented to help the owners of the Marion, Ohio, Star prosecute their damage suit against Frank A. Vanderlip, former New York Banker, who they charged cast aspersions upon them and the late President Harding. His appearance in court against Vanderlip will give Daugherty one of the chances he has been waiting for.

The Republican platform for 1924 has been written. Approved by President Coolidge, it was carried to New York by Secretary of State Hughes and delivered as an address before the Republican State Convention. From the Hughes speech the platform writers at Cleveland will turn out the finished product. For one thing it was revealed that the record of the Harding administration will be gone back to again and again in helping Calvin Coolidge to get elected in November.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

Roads Are Built by The State

"The Nation indeed, has no business "helping" states to build roads; road building is for the state and county." This is quoted from a contemporary. We should perhaps be half way polite and say "esteemed contemporary"only we don't esteem such a paper which states an axiom it cannot prove.

Why has the nation no business building roads or helping the individual states? Why is road building for the state and county only? Who ordained that the National Government which is all of us, should not help several groups of us, which are the states, to solve their problems? Who made the law that the nation should not own and build its roads? There is much question in many minds as to the advisability of Federal aid in road building; whether the policy of the Nation aiding the states to build roads will work in the long run, to any better advantage than that of the States aiding the countios to build roads, is yet to be demonstrated. But we can see no reason for the flat-footed statement that the Nation "has no business" to do this, inasmuch as it is good judgment the other way. Whoever builds these roads the State and Government should see to it that a standard of requirements are established, that the gravel which goes into the roadbed shall be real gravel and not a spurious mixture which becomes a quagmire when the frost leaves the ground. The state at all times should employ a force of experts who know the real material, to pass upon the quality of gravel pits which the contractors open from time to time, and no gravel should be allowed unless passed by goverement experts.

As for road building being properly a State or county function, the government has already made rail and water transportation a matter of national concern. The Nation, not the States, built the Panama Canal. The great beauty spots of the continent are national, not State, parks. Railroads, waterways, Panama Canal parks, are for the Nation, built by or with the assistance of the Nation.

Down With Signs

With the campaign to remove unsightly advertising signs from America's roads well under way, attention may well be turned to the character of signs and sign posts marking roads to show their destination and distances.

The historic "sign post" is of wood, with a board nailed to the side, ending in a rude representation of a pointing hand. The board bears upon its face, usually in weather-obliterated letters, the name of the next town.

Such a marker was all right for a trail, or a wagon road, but is as much out of place on a fine, hard road as an ox cart among automobiles. Modern practice dictates that road signs and posts should be permanent, sightly, plain as to information conveyed, sturdy, and artistic.

For national highways, a beautiful bronze sign post has already been designed by a famous sculptor. Road associations interested in some particular road have adopted distinctive markers, in many cases of a high degree of art and beauty as well as utility. The Old Oregon Trail, for instance, which it is proposed to improve from the Missouri to the Columbia, is now in process of being marked with signs of real beauty and significance. Professor Fairbanks, of the University of Oregon, designed the marker, showing a typical covered wagon and pioneer family of early western days. Such a sign is particularly appropriate for this trail, which is the route followed by early-day pioneers in their ox team emigration from the Eastern States to Oregon and Washington in the late forties and early fifties.

It is not necessary to wait for some large association to design or place markers. Every town can help by seeing to it that the sign posts along its entering and leaving roads are plain as to intent, yet handsome and distinctive. Placing such markers embodies the spirit of welcome to the tourist, which is "good business" for any town, and is most excellent work for local civic organizations to take up and follow through.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortgage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, Count of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said county house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction,or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

Select Eggs Now For Winter Home Supply

This is the time of year to select eggs to be preserved for next winter's supply, according to E. C. Foreman, head of the poultry department at the M. A. C.

Water Glass (sodium silicate) is is recommended as a preservative, the old and well known method of "putting down" eggs for the winter being considered the most practical and effective.

Prices naturally reach their lowest mark in the spring when production is greatest, thus affording the most apparent reason for laying away the winter supply at this time.

Another advantage of spring selection which is brought out by Professor Foreman concerns the quality of the eggs. It seems that the so-called grain-produced eggs, those of March, April and early May, keep better than those produced later in the season.

Michigan eggs are improving in quality, it is said. High standards are being set by the commercial egg farmer, and the individual farm producer of eggs is falling in line. The old days of a few "bad" eggs in every dozen are said to be gone.

Asa result of this higher standard, the consumption of eggs is steadily increasing. With greater confidence in the product, the consuming public is steadily increasing its demand for eggs.

Bean Variety Test Shows Robust Best

That Robust beans are the highest yielding variety grown in Michigan is indicated by results of variety tests carried on in four counties of the state last year by the farm crops department of the M. A. C.

Forty other varieties were planted in the tests, which were staged in Shiawassee, Sanilac, Isabella, and Eaton counties, but the Robust stood well out in the lead for average production.

Four of the 40 check varieties outyielded Robust in individual instances, but the average was very much in favor of the Robust strain. Robust has been generally credited with being Michigan's highest yielder, the 1923 tests substantiating this belief.

"High yield is essential in securing low cost per bushel", says D. F. Rainey, of the M. A. C. crops department, "and Robust beans have proved that they have quality which enables them to get this high yield, and consequently to make for economical production."

County agricultural agents, or the secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, East Lansing, can give information on securing reliable seed stocks of certified Robust beans.

Medicated Salt

That simple goiter will become a thing of the past in Michigan when the new iodized table salt comes into general use throughout the state is the prediction of health authorities. The salt, manufactured especially for Michigan use by all of the salt companies of the state, is already on sale in the cities, and wholesale grocers promise that by May 1 it will be in the hands of all retail dealers.

"The introduction of iodized table salt is one of the most important events in Michigan's public health history", says Dr. R. M. Olin, Commissioner of Health. "Michigan, like Switzerland, is coming to be internationally known for the prevalence of thyroid enlargement. It is one of our most urgent, and yet simplest public health problems, and we believe that the solution has been found in iodized salt."

Simple goiter is generally conceded by health authorities to be a nutritional rather than a medical question. The enlargement of the thyroid gland is due to a deficiency in the diet of an element—iodine essential to its normal functioning. Michigan soil, unlike that of most states, lacks iodine, and therefore Michigan water and Michigan grown vegetables show the same deficiency, and a high percentage of thyroid enlargement is the result.

The iodized salt looks exactly like ordinary salt, tastes the same, and costs only a trifle more. It differs in just one important particular, it contains .02 of one percent of sodium iodide, the element that is lacking in Michigan's food and water supply. Health authorities emphasize the fact that the salt is a preventive and will not take the place of medical treatment for the diseased thyroid.

quires the President to consider the public interest. Public interest is not a synonym for money."

In this relation Judge Morris quoted from President Coolidge's message to Congress on the Muscle Shoals problem, that "while the price is an important element, there is another consideration even more compelling. * * * If this main object (low-priced nitrates for farmers in peace and the Government in war) is accomplished, the amount of money received for the property is not a primary or major consideration."

Referring to German-owned property, the court said:

"Much of this property was not innocently held or held solely for trade and commerce. Information acquired by German-owned companies had been transmitted to Berlin, and there indexed and made available to German competitors and the German Government. The files of one company were filled not with business papers, but with pan-German literature. It was a distribution centre for propaganda in this country."

Upholds Confiscation of Patents

Judge Morris pointed out that when America entered the war she adhered to the international convention forbidding poison gas, "but it soon became apparent that America would be fighting on disastrously unequal terms unless she should make use of all the dread weapons being used against her by the foe. When Germany persisted in her attempts to destroy her opponents with poison gas in contravention of all international agreements, she made it manifest that America's future safety lay in America's chemical independence. The amendment to the act was passed in the darkest days of the war (allowing the sale of seized properties). It was thought Paris was about to fall and the Channel ports be taken." These were the circumstances, said the opinion, "which impelled Congress to grant the President the broad powers of almost absolute ownership. It was the intent of Congress to subordinate mere property rights to the welfare of the nation."

Of the value of the patents sold, Judge Morris held, in accordance with the testimony, that while Dr. Carl Holderman, a German, asserted the Haber patents were worth $17,000,000 to the Germans, "the evidence is overwhelming that they were and are without substantial affirmative value to American citizens. Had these patents been sold to Americans at public rather than private sale and only the net proceeds paid to their former enemy owners these owners would have suffered an almost total loss in the value of their property."

Praises Work of Foundation

As to allegations that the sale was not to obtain a fair value, but to promote the interests of the chemical and dye industries and that the transaction was in legal effect granting a subsidy to private industry, the Court commented, "this challenge to the motives of the officers making the sale is supported, I think, neither by the facts nor the law. Mr. Polk determined the public interest would be best served by a wide use of the inventions covered by the patents. If the property was sold under terms and conditions that assured its being devoted to the public use it matters not what benefits or detriments may have flowed as incidents therefrom.

"The property is in the keeping of men who have in its management no selfish interest to serve and whose devotion to the public interest has been established," continued the opinion. "No better plan for devoting the property to public use has been suggested. The plan has stood the most severe of all tests—actual trial. The defendant has kept the faith. This it has done, not only by granting licenses in furtherance of the purposes for which it was charatered, but also at its great expense, by distribution of books and pamphlets showing the national necessity for practical development of chemical science in America. If, perchance, those heretofore engaged in the industries have derived an incidental advantage from the plan, that incidental result cannot invalidate a transaction lawfully consummated in the public interest. The same charge would lie against the validity of every tariff act * * * The sale was in effect to America and its citizens, not to those then engaged in chemical and allied industries."

Judge Morris ruled that if the executives entrusted by Congress with power of sale acted within the scope of that power "their acts are not subject to judicial nullification or review. Invasion by the courts to determine whether the public interest required the property be sold otherwise than under the statutory conditions prescribed and to set aside the sale should the judgment of the court be different from that of the President would be a judicial nullification not only of the President's act but also of the act of Congress conferring on the President the power to determine what the public interests required. What the public interest requires depends upon the conditions existing in the nation. Courts do not understand the 'state of the Union' and as, I apprehend, are not equipped to ascertain it. * * * The statement of the reasons actuating the President does not make his act any the less an act of discretion. It is conceded the President cannot be brought into court to substantiate his reasons The statute does not require him to disclose to the purchaser the evidence upon which his reasons were based The statute does not limit the Executive in the assignment of reasons to such as may be supported by legal evidence or by facts available to the public."

State Police, and to consider it only as it functions as a uniformed force. But this is not a true view of the department or its duties.

"In addition to its straight-out police work, which is very important in itself, the department serves to aid and back up the efforts of local police officers in every part of the state. It is the purpose of the department to co-operate with and assist these officers, not to supersede them. This fact is becoming more generally known among the sheriffs, chiefs of police and other local officers and their growing co-operation with the state department is bringing splendid results.

The Moving Picture Craze

It has been remarked that "eye education" is the only kind that endures, and we are beginning to see the logic of it. Most of our high schools in the state are working on that theory and have installed the very best moving picture outfits obtainable, knowing full well that what you succeed in impressing upon the retina of the eye stays there through life, but lessons verbally given often fleet away like the white winged gulls of Lake Michigan.

Science has added her discoveries to the realm of cinema and pictures of to-day are a vastly different proposition from ten years or less ago. Instead of the flutteryflut—flut vibration on the screen which used to tire the eye and confuse the brain, we have the smooth, evenly moving film that travels with the speed of an express train, yet so quietly you can hear a pin drop anywhere in the room. To add to the startling reality of the thing inventors have been digging into mechanics until the cinema not only moves, but it talks.

The magnitude of the film industry is far and away larger than any other form of amusement, as the great studios at Hollywood, California will attest. Some are located in the east but owing to congested conditions in the east far more of this work is done in the California district where each year hundreds of the best films are turned out by high salaried actors. The old profession of the stage is almost wiped off the map and the actual expense of creating a film like "The Birth of a Nation" is hardly creditable to the novice. Literally thousands of people are employed in the profession of movie-craft and it costs millions of dollars before a single penny is returned on these films. Screen celebrities rise and fall with the tides of popular approval but the cinema goes on forever. When we think of the succession of screen favorites whom we have known about during the past five years it is difficult to prophesy the future of the industry.

Men like Douglas Fairbanks, Harold Lloyd, William Hart, Charlie Chaplin, "Fatty" Arbuckle, Tom Mix, have come into prominence. Some have worn like a buckskin gauntlet, others have been demolished by their own licentiousness. Arbuckle made a desperate attempt to "come back" but the public would have none of him!

Mable Normand, Gloria Swanson, Poli Negri, Mary Pickford, all have their day but the roles assumed by them will be the thermometers of their rising fame, which in some cases is already in the descendency.

Charlie Chaplin and Jackie Coogan will sooner or later reap the returns of a profligate life from which their millions wont save them. So to sum it all up, the invention of the cinema while a blessing to humanity, brought its excrescence of immorality and the unrestricted use of the film in houses of religious worship might bring a stigma, a condition which will be avoided we trust.

"Clinch The Victory" At The Ballot Box

Washington: "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair. The event is in the hand of God."

Lincoln: "I am bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to the light I have. Stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right, and part with him when he goes wrong."

Roosevelt: "If a candidate be corrupt, then refuse, under any plea of party expediency, under any consideration to refrain from smiting him with the sword of the Lord of Gideon."

Charles Sumner: "Where principle is, there is my party."

The women of the W. C. T. U. are accustomed to standing alone. We would hardly know how to go with the majority. H. J. W. Longley, attorney general of Nova Scotia sounds a clear call to action in such a time as this:

"It would be the greatest blessing in life that could be conferred upon our institutions if in every one of the two hundred and fifteen constituents of Canada, there were a hundred men who did not care a button about party, and voted as they thought was right and proper in the interests of the country. Some of those in public life would get hurt, and it would not always work right for the machine, but it would influence those high in the councils of the nation to pursue a course that would command the respect of the best and truest elements in the country."

Oh, comrades of the organization that proudly calls itself "Organized Mother Love" will you stand the test now, though you may stand alone in your views? Will you see to it that we have officers whose "habits of life should be an example safe and beneficent for every man to follow?" We are on trial, the W. C. T. U. as an organization, and every member as an individual.

In the days of long ago, a queen was called upon to interfere in governmental affairs. Her action meant possible death for her, but it meant life or death for all her people. So for the sakes of those she knew not, yet whose welfare depended upon her, she went fearlessly to her duty saying: "If I perish, I perish." God's purposes will be wrought out. "I will be exalted in the Earth" He says. I confidently believe that God calls the stabilizing force of women conservators of the home, "to the Kingdom for such a time as this." "If thou altogether holdest Thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place." Oh, consecrated women of the nation, let not the Lord turn from us to have His will done in the earth.

Never has the nation been confronted with graver problems. "Look to yourselves that we lose not those things which we have wrought but that we receive a full reward." The future must hold more of victory than even the past before we obtain world prohibition and the full protection of the home.

We have a glorious past. But we must not live in it. "Wherefore seeing, we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses; let us run with patience the race that is set before us." When Napoleon's army was passing the Pyramids he said: "Soldiers remember that fory centuries are looking down upon you." So the witnesses of all the ages call upon us to finish their task and begin others, that after us there shall be those who will rise up and call us blessed because we have illumed their way.

Nutten Gets The Worst of The Suit

In the caso of Lenawee County Supervisors vs. Fred Nutten of Adrian for recovery of monies over charged the county for various criminal case costs while Nutten was Sheriff, has been decided by a jury in favor of the county, and Nutten will have to dig up $802.25 unless he can appeal to a higher court and get a reversal of the verdict. Ths attorneys for the defence were given 20 days in which to file a motion to set aside the verdict. In 1918 forty or cases were prosecuted in the Lenawee court in which fines were imposed by the Judge and collected by Nutten. He divided these fees with the deputies and these fees were audited and passed by the Board of Supervisors at the time. Attorneys for Nutten contended that inasmuch as these bills had come before the board and been allowed, the matter was settled and the Sheriff owed nothing. The results are the case has dragged along and been postponed and adjourned. It has been fought bitterly for three years.

Nutten was known as a fearless officer who carried his policies against liquor violators to a finish and he usually got his man.

Edwin Denby Is Trying To Explain

Former Secretary of Navy Edwin Denby is touring Michigan in an effort to explain away his recent dismissal at Washington. It is said that at Adrian his speech proved a wonderful drawing card and huge prices were paid for a seat. Denby takes the ground that his leasing of the Teapot Dome reserve was for the purpose of obtaining something from it for the Government while it lasted and his principal argument is that great numbers of surrounding wells are daily pumping the Teapot Dome reservoir to death. And in a few years at best there will be no oil in this preserve at all. There never was a deed done in Washington nor there never will be but there is found an excuse for it, even the assassination of Abraham Lincoln had its reasons. It is too bad this country is so honeycombed with telegragh, telephone and Daily papers—so difficult don't you know for an official in Washington to put over any kind of a lucrative deal without the whole nation knowing it—Denby may be the victim of slanderous tongues, and he may be the best Sunday school man we know of so its best not to criticise. In fact the men who head our government should be handled as they handle T. N. T.—with gloves on and a long distance away. The time has arrived when Political gamesters are in nefarious business at Washington—that of blackening each other's character, and its only a stage of our progress in civilization. The rise and fall of Ancient Rome reads just this way. After the commonwealth of Rome became all powerful jealousy and treason undermined it. The people became fickle just as our citizens are fickle. It's down with the old and up with the new—regardless of right or wrong. All this we presume and more, will be trumped up by the defenders of Mr. Denby and we are sorry to say some of the Catholic newspapers are taking up his cross. Yet the fact remains that right or wrong, the Senatorial investigations showed Denby up to the American people in a mighty poor light.

Seek Information On Bean Fertilization

Information on fertilization and soil treatment for the bean crop, a field in which it is said that but little is known in comparison with the facts available on fertilizing other standard Michigan crops, will be sought during the coming season in a series of experimental tests to be carried out over the state by the soils department of the M. A. C.

Beets and potatoes, other important state crops, will also come in for special attention in the year's experimental soils work, according to Prof. C. E. Millar, of the M. A.C. staff.

Problems concerning the purity and sugar content of beet, as effected by fertilization, will be worked out. The amount and kind of fertilizer best suited to the particular soil type will be studied, as well as the effect of location in relation to the plants in applying the fertilizer.

Development of farming systems to maintain fertility of the soil lies at the bottom of the soils experimental work, according to Professor Millar. The use of green manuring crops, to supplement applications of fertilizer, and other features of a generam will be included in the test plan.

The experimental plots are scattered all over the state on individual farms, as well as on the various station plots on M. A. C. property.

It's Easy to Pay For a Chevrolet

Everybody wants an automobile.
Everybody can pay for a Chevrolet.
Everybody can afford to own a Chevrolet.

You can buy a Chevrolet just as you buy any other important necessity. Not one family in a thousand pays cash in full for a home. They make a substantial down payment, then pay off the mortgage with what they used to pay for rent, plus other savings.

A Chevrolet can be bought just as you buy a stationary home. It earns its own way and you ride while you pay.

It is the best paying investment any family can make because it provides transportation, saves time, and makes all outdoors your playground, bringing health and happiness to the whole family.

There is a Chevrolet dealer near you. Ask him to show you the different models and explain how easy it is to get, use and pay for the one you want.

CHAPTER X

The Lady of the Hidden Face.

Next morning at ten, the door boy at his lodgings informed Jack that a lady was waiting to see him in the parlor. The lady was deeply veiled. She did not speak, but arose as he entered the room and handed him a note. She was tall and erect with a fine carriage. Her silence was impressive, her costume admirable.

The note in a script unfamiliar to the young man was as follows:

"You will find Margaret waiting in a coach at eleven today at the corner of Harley street and Twickenham road."

The veiled lady walked to the door and turned and stood looking at him. Her attitude said clearly: "Well, what is your answer?"

"I will be there at eleven," said the young man.

The veiled lady nodded, as if to indicate that her mission was ended, and withdrew.

Jack was thrilled by the information, but wondered why it was so wrapped in mystery. Not ten minutes had passed after the departure of the veiled lady when a messenger came with a note from Sir Benjamin Hare. In a cordial tone, it invited Jack to breakfast at the Almack club at twelve-thirty. The young man returned his acceptance by the same messenger, and in his best morning suit went to meet Margaret. A cab conveyed him to the corner named. There was the coach with shades drawn low, waiting. A footman stood near it. The door was opened and he saw Margaret looking out at him and shaking her hand.

"You see what a sly thing I am!" she said when, the greetings over, he sat by her side and the coach was moving. "A London girl knows how to get her way. She is terribly wise, Jack."

"But, tell me, who was the veiled lady?"

"A go-between. She makes her living that way. She is wise, discreet and reliable. There is employment for many such in this wicked city. I feel disgraced, Jack. I hope you will not think that I am accustomed to dark and secret ways. This has worried and distressed me, but I had to see you."

"And I was longing for a look at you," he said.

"I was sure you would not know how to pull these ropes of intrigue. I have heard all about them. I couldn't help that, you know, and be a young lady who is quite alive."

"Our time is short and I have much to say," said Jack. "I am to breakfast with your father at the Almack club at twelve-thirty."

She clapped her hands and said, with a laughing face, "I knew he would ask you!"

"Margaret, I want to take you to America with the approval of your father, if possible, and without it, if necessary.

"I think you will get his approval," said the girl, with enthusiasm. "He has heard all about the duel. He says every one he met, of the court party, last evening, was speaking of it. They agree that the old general needed that lesson. Jack, how proud I am of you!"

She pressed his hand in both of hers.

"I couldn't help knowing how to shoot," he answered. "And I would not be worthy to touch this fair hand of yours if I had failed to resent an insult."

"Although he is a friend of the general, my father was pleased," she went on. "He calls you a good sport. 'A young man of high spirit who is not to be played with,' that is what he said. Now, Jack, if you do not stick too hard on principles—if you can yield only a little, I am sure he will let us be married."

"I am eager to hear what he may say now," said Jack. "Whatever it may be, let us stick together and go to America and be happy. It would be a dark world without you. May I see you tomorrow?"

"At the same hour and place," she answered.

They talked of the home they would have in Philadelphia and planned its garden, Jack having told of the site he had bought with great trees and a river view. They spent an hour which lent its abundant happiness to many a long year and when they parted, soon after twelve o'clock, Jack hurried away to keep his appointment.

Sir Benjamin received the young man with a warm greeting and friendly words. Their breakfast was served in a small room where they were alone together, and when they were seated the baronet observed:

"I have heard of the duel. It has set some of the best tongues in England wagging in praise of 'the Yankee boy.' One would scarcely have expected that."

"No, I was prepared to run for my life—not that I planned to do any great damage," said Jack.

"You can shoot straight—that is evident. They call your delivery of that bullet swift, accurate and merciful. Your behavior has pleased some very eminent people. The blustering talk of the general excites no sympathy here. In London, strangers are not likely to be treated as you were."

"If I did not believe that I should be leaving it," said Jack. "I should not like to take up dueling for an amusement, as some men have done in France."

"You are a well-built man inside and out," Sir Benjamin answered. "You might have a great future in England. I speak advisedly."

Their talk had taken a turn quite unexpected. It flattered the young man. He blushed and answered:

"Sir Benjamin, I have no great faith in my talents."

"On terms which I would call easy, you could have fame, honor and riches, I would say."

"At present I want only your daughter. As to the rest, I shall make myself content with what may naturally come to me."

"And let me name the terms on which I should be glad to welcome you to my family."

"What are the terms?"

"Loyalty to your king and a will to understand and assist his plans."

"I could not follow him unless he will change his plans."

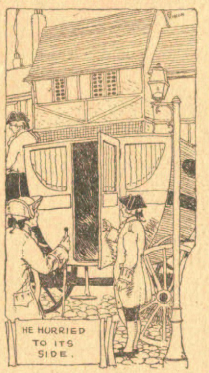
The baronet put down his fork and looked up at the young man. "Do you really mean what you say?" he demanded. "Is it so difficult for you to do your duty as a British subject?"

"Sir Benjamin, always I have been taught that it is the duty of a British subject to resist oppression. The plans of the king are oppressive. I cannot fall in with them. I love Margaret as I love my life, but I must keep myself worthy of her. If I could think so well of my conduct, it is because I have principles that are inviolable."

"At least I hope you would promise me not to take up arms against the king."

"Please don't ask me to do that. It would grieve me to fight against England. I hope it may never be, but I would rather fight than submit to tyranny."

The baronet made no reply to this declaration so firmly made. A new look came into his face. Indignation and resentment were there, but he did not forget the duty of a host. He began to speak of other things. The breakfast went on to its end in an atmosphere of cool politeness.



HE HURRIED TO ITS SIDE.

When they were out upon the street together, Sir Benjamin turned to him and said:

"Now that we are on neutral ground, I want to say that you Americans are a stiff-necked lot of people. You are not like any other breed of men. I am done with you. My way cannot be yours. Let us part as friends and gentlemen ought to part. I say good-by with a sense of regret. I shall never forget your service to my wife and daughter."

"Think not of that," said the young man. "What I did for them I would do for any one who needed my help."

"I have to ask you to give up all hope of marrying my daughter."

"That I cannot do," said Jack. "Over that hope I have no control. I might as well promise not to breathe."

"But I must ask you to give me your word as a gentleman that you will hold no further communication with her."

"Sir Benjamin, I shall be frank with you. It is an unfair request. I cannot agree to it."

"What do you say?" the Englishman asked in a tone of astonishment, and his query was emphasized with a firm tap of his cane on the pavement.

"I hate to displease you, sir, but if I made such a promise, I would be sure to break it."

"Then, sir, I shall see to it that you have no opportunity to oppose my will."

In spite of his fine restraint, the eyes of the baronet glowed with anger, as he quickly turned from the young man and hurried away.

Jack turned his steps toward Franklin's door.

"I am like the land of Goshen amid the plagues of Egypt," said Franklin, when the young man was admitted to his office. "My gout is gone and I am in good spirits in spite of your adventure."

"And I suppose you will scold me for the adventure."

"You will scold yourself when the consequences have arrived. They will be sure to give you a spanking. The deed is done, and well done. On the whole I think it has been good for the cause, but bad for you."

"Why?"

"You may have to run out of England to save your neck and the face of the king. He was there, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"The injured lad is in a bad way. The wound caught an infection. Intense fever and swelling have set in. I helped Sir John Pringle to amputate the arm this afternoon, but even that may not save the patient. Here is a storm to warn the wandering linnet to his shade. A ship goes tomorrow evening. Get ready to take it. In that case your marriage will have to be delayed. Rash men are often compelled to live on hope and die fasting."

"With Sir Benjamin, the duel has been a help instead of a hindrance," said the young man. "My stubborn soul has been the great obstacle."

Then he told of his interview with Sir Benjamin Hare.

Franklin put his hand on Jack's shoulder and said with a smile:

"My son, I love you. I could wish you to be no different. Cheer up. Time will lay the dust, and perhaps sooner than you think."

"I hope to see Margaret tomorrow morning."

"Ah, then, 'what Grecian arts of soft persuasion!'" Franklin quoted. "I hope that she, too, will follow the great star in the West!"

"I hope so, but I greatly fear that our meeting will be prevented."

CHAPTER XI

The Departure.

That evening Jack received a brief note from Preston. It said:

"I learn that youig Clarke is very ill. I think you would better get out of England for fear of what may come. A trial would be apt to cause embarrassment in high places. Can I give you assistance?"

Jack returned this note by the same messenger:

"Thanks, good friend, I shall go as soon as my business is finished, which I hope may be tomorrow."

Just before the young man went to bed a brief note arrived from Margaret. It read:

"Dearest Jack. My father has learned of our meeting yesterday and of how it came about. He is angry. He forbids another meeting. I shall not submit to his tyranny. We must assert our rights like good Americans. I have a plan. You will learn of it when we meet tomorrow at eleven. Do not send an answer. Lovingly, MARGARET."

He slept little, and in the morning awaited with keen impatience the hour of his appointment.

On his way to the place he heard a newsboy shouting the word "duel" and "Yankee," followed by the suggestive statement: "Bloody murder in high life."

Evidently Lionel Clarke had died of his wound. He saw people standing in groups and reading the paper. He began to share the nervousness of Preston and the wise, far-seeing Franklin. He jumped into a cab and was at the corner some minutes ahead of time. Precisely at eleven he saw the coach draw near. He hurried to its side. The footman dismounted and opened the door. Inside he saw, not Margaret, but the lady of the hidden face. "You are to get in, sir, and make a little journey with the madame," said the footman.

Jack got into the coach. Its door closed, the horses started with a jump and he was on his way whither he knew not. Nor did he know the reason for the rapid pace at which the horses had begun to travel.

"If you do not mind, sir, we will not lift the shades," said the veiled lady, as the coach started. "We shall see Margaret soon, I hope."

She had a colorless, cold voice and what was then known in London as the "patrician manner." Her tone and silence seemed to say: "Please remember this is all a matter of business and not a highly agreeable business to me."

"Where is Margaret?" he asked.

"A long way from here. We shall meet her at The Ship and Anchor in Gravesend. She will be making the journey by another road."

She had answered in a voice as cold as the day and in the manner of one who had said quite enough.

"Where is Gravesend?"

"On the Thames near the sea," she answered briskly, as if in pity of his ignorance.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Make Their Marmalade From Large Red Roses

Rose flower marmalades are of two kinds. The Turks use the choice Damascens white rose, the Orientals the large red rose corresponding to our American beauty. The vehicle of preservation may be virgin honey, common in China, or the date of the palm or limi sirups in vogue from the Bosphorus to the Nile delta.

The fragrance of the rose marmalade is not that of the freshly plucked rose, but resembles more the modified fragrance from a blossom a day or two old. It comes in sealed containers or crocks holding approximately five pounds, which on opening are found to be sometimes little more than two-thirds full. This is due to the contents having been steam-sterilized at a minimum of heat, after the sealing of the container; it is purposely never filled, so as to allow for heat expansion of the contents and thus prevent fracture of the container. Also, the rose fragrance is thus retained in almost all its exquisiteness.—Detroit News.

Non-Stop

The nervous passenger approached the captain timidly.

"What would happen, sir," she asked, "if we struck a large iceberg?"

"The iceberg would pass along as if nothing had happened," replied the captain.

And the old lady was very much relieved.

He Is Gone!

The Man who hesitates is lost! He fs a back number in the category of trade. Cobwebs lattice his front door and settle on the goods. There are no customers coming in and inquiring to be shown this or that which they saw advertised in the local paper. He is gone out. We mean a merchant who quits advertisieg of course. He has severed his connection with the outside world and expects to go alone in an unlighted condition down the periious paths of business while all round him competitors are blazing a trail with readable ads every week. They quote something new each week, if it is no more than a different brand of soap. The results are not hard to guess at. We imagine such a condition would place the non-advertiser in about the some shape as a motorist would be in on a dark night driving without lights—due for a wreck right speedily. The exceeding great competitton to-day in any mercantile line will drive the non-advertiser into the wall with amazing swiftness. There are one or two firms in town who do not realize this but they will soon.

Chief Long Wolf of Hillsdale and his troupe of Indians were in North Adams Tuesday afternoon and evening and entertained the populace with music and speeches. Incidentally the Chief sold some of his Kan no-tak and gave the audience a very good insight into the making of an Indian Medicine Man. He claims to be a graduate of more than one western medical school, besides his rough and ready training on the reservation.

At a recent Teachers' examination conducted in Hillsdale out of 96 candidates for certificates 67 only are entitled to their sheepskins. Those from this vicinity who obtained them are as follows: North Adams: Rosene Baker. Geraldine Cox, Mrs. Olive Day, Margray Hayhoe, Pauline Wells; from Moscow Margaret Baker; from Jerome, Leta Baker; from Osseo, Ruth Gilbert, Eleanor Sturtevant, Imo Sturtevant from Hillsdale Florence Getter, Frances Sears, Helen Snyder.

It may interest you to know that 141 high schools throughout the state are on the accredited list at the University of Michigan which means that graduates from any one of these schools can enter the University without taking any examination. North Adams is included in this list and we are glad to note the progressiveness of our institution. The next thing which the district will be forced to consider is a new school building as the present building is in a bad state of repair and inadequately arranged for modern methods of instruction.

The Brooklyn Exponent tells us that two gangs of steam shovel men are just finishing their labors on the 15-mile stretch of pike east oi Somerset having only about one more week to work. It is now expected with the speed that has been made on the job through the Irish Hills that July 1st will see the road finished and accepted by the state of Michigan. After this the construction of concrete will begin. News of the opening of this important stretch will be received with joy by a large concourse of sojourners in these parts since the road is used coustantly by them.

Rev. Fred C. Church who graduated from Hillsdale College in 1900 will be remembered by some of our citizens, having spent his boyhood days on the old farm not far from the Nethaway school has been for more than five years pastor of Tompkins Ave. Congregational church in Brooklyn, N. Y. His son who graduated trom Columbia College 2 years ago, is teaching in Honolulu. Fred still honors Will Carleton's memory to the extent of reciting "Over the hills to the poor house" which he used to do when in college. No doubt he is the same jolly old scout of former days.

Lillian Allen of Onsted visited over Sunday with Jean Young.

Daring Robbery

One of the most daring robberies ever perpetrated in Michigan was pulled off sometime early Sunday morning April 27th, at Maple Rapids when a gang of thieves entered four of the business places and ransacked them, carrying of valuable goods to the extent of $1,000. Two safes were blown open and wrecked, a couple of cash registers smashed and goods thrown helter skelter. It is positively known that one woman was in the gang as her shoe marks are plainly visible.

How these crooks could work at this business for an hour and a half, blow two safes and get away with a truck loaded with goods right in the heart of a town is one of the puzzles the police have not been able to unravel.

Cut off Roads Around Cities

In the days of the horse main arteries of travel naturally entered cities at the most convenient point and travel along the highway passed down Main street withou slowing up. The horse drawn vehicle could get through the city as fast as it could travel the country road. With the advent of the swift moving truck conditions have changed. Through traffic on roads is greatly slowed up in the city due to crossings, congestion, narrow streets, one way streets, stopping for street cars, pedestrians, etc. In addition through traffic brought into a city adds greatly to the city's traffic problem. The modern idea is to divert through traffic around large centers, The few few additional miles thus traveled are more than made up for in the decrease of time.

Pittsford Store Has New Manager

N, P. Benjamin, former drayman here. and who has been with the Frost Gear and Forge Co. at Jackson for nearly a year, resigned his position this week and will move his family to Pittsford where he will manage the department store of Bowditch & Eldredge, Mr. Benjamin will take over the new business next Wednesday, May 14th, and will live in the J, H. Church residence opposite the New York Central station, Geo. Foltz and family will occupy the Benjamin home here as soon as vacated.

He Found The Wad

Ward Lindsey (lucky dog) an oil truck driver of Quincy, while driving on a cross road near Jonesville picked up a lady"s purse containing $4.000 (but Alas, 'twas another's). His first thought was to get to Hillsdale and advertise his find and he chose another road as being the quickest to get there and while en route met an old couple driving a team of horses and searching along the road. He asked if they had lost something and they stated they had and described their property so well the money was returned to them. This represented a life's savings and they were on their way to Hillsdale to pay off the mortgage on their home when they lost it,

Mother's Day Proclamation

Custom has decreed that once each year a day shall be set apart from all others especially for observance as Mother's Day. The plan was brought forth so that every person might give more than ordinary attention to Mother, so that we might show to her our deepest oppreciation of her sacrifice, devotion, guidance and loving care.

In the rush and swirl of present day affairs and business one is inclined to forget for the moment the determination of Mother that we should have the blessings of life that she did not enioy, and that to bring about the realization of her ambition it deprived her of the very happiness she sought to bestow upon us. It has been this motherhood ideal that has raised the standard of American citizenship to its present exalted place.

By virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I do hereby designate and proclaim Sunday, May eleventh, 1924, as Mothers Day, and I call upon our people, both old and young, to gather in their several places of worship and take part in services appropriate to the day. And let absent sons and daughters take this occasion to visit the mother in the old home, or where such a visit is impossible. let them send a message of cheer and greeting.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this nineteenth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-four, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-eighth. ALEX. J. GROESBECK, Gov.

OVER 68 YEARS OF SUCCESS

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Hillsdale—Five farmhouses were either destroyed or damaged by fire in this neighborhood within 48 hours, according to reports.

Saginaw—Saginaw Kiwanis club has adopted unanimously resolutions seeking to make Edgar A. Guest, of The Detroit Free Press, poet laureate of Michigan.

Shelby—Francis Osman, 5 years old, darted around an automobile in the path of a truck in a chase for a ball in the business section here and was instantly killed.

Flint—Ill health is said to have caused Ivor Watters, 33 years old, of Flint, to throw himself in front of a moving freight train at the Belsay yards of the Grand Trunk railroad here. He was ground to pieces.

Lansing—Frank F. Rogers, State highway commissioner, has announced that all State roads are in such condition that it is no longer necessary to enforce the reduced load order, which now stands rescinded.

Sault Ste. Marie—James Gordon, 18 years old, was drowned at the head waters of Garden River, the third drowning of the present season. He slipped from a log on which he was working. Gordon was employed by the Hope Lumber Co.

Grand Rapids—Damage caused by fire which attacked a million-dollar stock of choice furniture and costly furnishings in the four-story Klingman Furniture Co., retail store, may reach $300,000, officials of the firms occupying the building said.

Detroit—The Common Council has directed George A. Kelly, corporation counsel, to proceed to collect $27,000 in special assessments from the Michigan State Fair Association, which is a State institution. The items are: Sidewalks, $1,316.35; lateral sewers, $503.07; street paving, $25,343.78.

Lansing—A free-for-all contest in which every householder in the city is invited to participate is that announced by the Zonta club, composed of local business and professional women, in which prizes are to be awarded for the most beautiful lawns developed here this summer. The aim of the club is to make Lansing a "city beautiful."

Monroe—Mrs. Amelia Rabideau Schinevarre, 84 years old, wife of Joseph Schinevarre, pioneer resident of the village of Erie, was killed instantly while atempting to cross the tracks of the Detroit, Monroe and Toledo short line electric railroad, when hit by a limited car. The fatality occurred near her home. The motorman made a stop within 50 feet.

Ann Arbor—In this county 72 ex-husbands are paying alimony for the support of former wives and for their children. During the month of March alone a total of $1,628.10 was paid to the county clerk's office here for distribution. The sums varied from $3 to $30 per week. At the present time there are 543 children under 16 years of age being supported by this means.

Pontiac—Police are investigating the fire which wiped out the four-story block occupied by Whitfield Macotte, wholesale grocers, and other stores, with a loss of $200,000. A. R. Westberger, of Royal Oak suffered a fractured pelvis in an automobile crash while hurrying a fireman to the scene. Birmingham and Royal Oak fire departments both aided in preventing spread of the blaze.

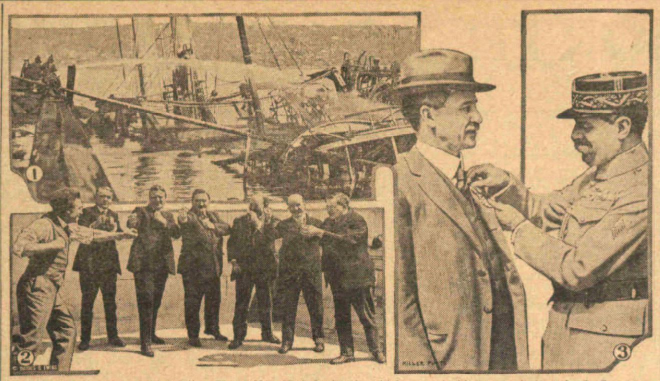
Lansing—That Lansing will have a population of 130,000 in 15 years was the prophecy made by Albert J. Peckham, commercial manager for the district office of the Michigan Bell Telephone company, addressing a meeting of local merchants. He declared that this population forecast was the basis upon which his company was expending $1,500,000 for improvement work in this district.

Port Huron—Police Justice P. H. Kane has put into effect a new rule in dealing with automobile speeders. Two young men were ordered not to drive cars within the limits of the city for 20 days under penalty of serving five days in jail. Another driver was given one day in jail, with instructions that he be released at 6 p. m. Judge Kane says that what he terms his "walking club" will have more effect on speeders than fines.

Sault Ste. Marie—George Tourcotte, 4 years old, died, and his brother was fatally burned when the family home in Sault Ste. Marie was destroyed by fire. A fireman carried the two boys from the fire in their bedroom shortly before the house collapsed. George, however, was dead, and Roy burned badly. The mother, upon finding the house on fire, ran for help. When she returned the stairway had collapsed and it was impossible to reach the children except by a window.

Ypsilanti — Plans indicate that ground will be broken this month for the new $450,000 Normal Training high school to be built at the corner of Forest avenue and Brower street. The building will be of the same construction as the administration building and Pease auditorium and will be strictly modern. There will be an auditorium with a seating capacity of 600, a large gymnasium, swimming pool, showers, cafeteria, special music and art rooms, and a large library and study hall. The new school will accommodate 500 pupils.

Battle Creek—Battle Creek city employes must be on the job every day in the future if they hope to draw their full salaries, according to a resolution passed by the city commission. No time will be allowed off without reduction of pay unless the employe shall furnish a medical certificate to prove that loss of time is due to sickness. The resolution, however, provided for a day off each week and 15 day annual vacation. The action was aimed at members of the police and fire departments, who have taken "promiscuous vacations"



1—Scene during million-dollar fire in New York harbor in which several ships were destroyed. 2—Senators and representatives taking lessons on how to keep fit from Bernarr MacFadden. 3—Orville Wright, inventor of the airplane, receiving from G. A. E Dumont, military attache of the French embassy, the medal of the Legion of Honor.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Al Smith Jumps to Fore in Race for Nomination by the Democrats.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S nomination by the Republicans in the Cleveland convention being conceded, as it must be, the country is turning its political attention mainly to the race among the Democratic aspirants. Who of that numerous company has the best of it depends on where your news comes from. In New York it is Al Smith, in Indiana it is Senator Ralston, in the southeast it may be Senator Underwood, and so it goes.

The death of Charles F. Murphy, chief of Tammany, was thought at first to be a blow to Smith's chances for the sachem was managing the governor's campaign. But last week the Smith cohorts in New York went forward with a rush and placed their candidate in the strategic position. George Brennan of Chicago, leader of the Illinois Democracy, was there and was hailed as the man to succeed Murphy as the national boss of the party, and while he did not come out openly as leader of the Smith forces, it became evident that he would be the director of their tactics. The governor announced that Franklin D. Roosevelt had been selected as chairman of his campaign committee, which includes representatives of all states. Mr. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy in the Wilson administration and candidate for the vice presidency four years ago. He was always known as an anti-Tammany man, so his selection may take from the Smith candidacy what sections remote from New York might regard as the curse of Tammany favor.

Of course the supporters of all other Democratic candidates continue to assert that Smith's nomination, or his election, is impossible because he is a Roman Catholic and because he is an open advocate of the legalizing of light wines and beer. His friends insist that the South will vote for him as for any Democratic nominee, despite the great strength of the Ku Klux Klan down there. Some other politicians are not so sure of this; and they call attention to the apparent growth of the Klan elsewhere, too. Only a few nights ago it held a meeting on Long Island which was attended by many thousands and 900 new members were initiated.

Indiana Democrats are, perhaps prematurely, pushing Senator Samuel Ralston toward the front as the logical choice of the New York convention. As one correspondent puts it: "The home-grown Democrats of Indiana say Ralston is well liked by both wets and drys, by conservatives and progressives, by Kluxers and anti-Kluxers, by capital and labor. No hatreds are focalized on him. Besides, Indiana and Ohio may be the key to the strategy in the western campaign this year, and Ralston is the one centralized candidate."

Chicagoaons who went to New York for the funeral of Murphy returned with the impression that their favorite son, Mayor Dever, really has a chance to win the nomination for the presidency. Stranger things have happened in national conventions. New Jerseyites believe Governor Silzer is the man of destiny, and it is said Brennan has him on his list of possibilities.

OHIO, Massachusetts and Missouri having added their delegates to the Coolidge column, William M. Butler, the President's national campaign manager, announced that Mr. Coolidge now has a total of 825 pledged delegates. Only 556 are needed to insure nomination. The Republican executive committee, in session in Cleveland, selected Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, representative and former senator, as temporary chairman of the convention, he being Mr. Coolidge's choice. The temporary organization for the big meeting was completed by the committee. There was a lot of talk among Republicans last week about the possibility of nominating Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes for the vice presidency. He has just returned from Europe, and the added fame he gained by his fine work as head of the reparations expert committee makes him a strong party asset. His only comment was that he had no intention of going into politics.

W. M. Butler, it is announced, will succeed Mr. Adams as chairman of the national committee after the convention.

In the Ohio primaries Coolidge beat Hiram Johnson about 6 to 1, and in the landslide Harry M. Daugherty was carried to victory as a delegate at large. He was last in the Coolidge list of seven, but ran far ahead of the leading Johnson candidate.

MUSCLE SHOALS was a leading topic of the week, the hearings held by the senate agricultural committee developing some interesting features. First of these was a telegram sent October 12 last by James Martin Miller, who claims to have been a Washington representative of Ford, to Ernest Liebold, Ford's confidential secretary. It read: "In private interview had with President Coolidge this morning he said incidentally: 'I am friendly to Mr. Ford, but wish some one would convey to him it is my hope that Mr. Ford will not do or say anything that will make it difficult for me to deliver Muscle Shoals to him, which I am trying to do.' While President didn't say so, am sure Weeks has been consultation with President this morning in view Mr. Ford's reported interview today's papers."

President Coolidge, from whom a denial was unnecessary, promptly issued a statement reiterating his position concerning Muscle Shoals, quoting from his message on the subject, and added: "I have never said I was trying to deliver Muscle Shoals to Mr. Ford or to anyone else. I do not think his favor is for sale. I wanted him to have his proposal fairly considered, just as I wanted any other proposals fairly considered." Mr. Liebold denied that Miller was an employee of Ford. Miller said his telegram quoted the President correctly. The most generous conclusion is that Miller's memory failed him.

Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania pointed out to the committee jokers in the Ford bid for Muscle Shoals which, he said, would enable the automobile manufacturer to "hamstring" the entire South, industrially and agriculturally. Then appeared Maj. E. B. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner, who urged the committee to "just give Henry whatever he wants; he will do the right thing." He was backed up in this by his counsel, W. B. Waldo, but right there Senator Norris of Nebraska, chairman of the committee, broke loose. Part of what he said to Mr. Waldo was:

"You're a Ford man, coming here in the guise of disinterested counsel of an improvement association. The minutes of your society show it organized just to boost Ford. Now answer this: Why is it you Ford people are always prating about the great things Ford will do, but when some one wants to amend the bill to specify those things, you refuse? Why is it that Ford people in congress are controlled by such as you, just as a mother hen controls her chicks?

"Why do you misrepresent everything to your people with the thousands of dollars you spend in pro-Ford propaganda? Why do you make it appear to be a fight between Ford and trusts, when it isn't, when the greatest trust of all would be the Ford power trust if he's given Muscle Shoals?

"I wouldn't vote for Muscle Shoals for Ford if every voter in my state told me to, for I think more of the country's welfare than I do of my own re-election to office—and that's more than some pro-Ford senators can say."

THOUGH the senate investigations in Washington have become a good deal of a bore, some mention must be made of them in a review of the week. Brookhart's committee dipped into a "scandal" concerning the conviction and pardon of a Chicagoan who violated the prohibition law, and a number of witnesses were subpoenaed to tell more about it. These included Kenesaw M. Landis, who was on the bench at the time and whose testimony was expected to be lively. The committee also heard considerable talk about failure or delay by the federal law department under Mr. Daugherty in prosecuting lumber manufacturers and the International Harvester company under the anti-trust statutes.

Senator Walsh and his Teapot Dome committee didn't seem to be doing much, but the special grand jury began its work of investigating criminal charges growing out of the oil inquiry. Former Secretary of the Navy Daniels was the first witness.

THE senate made considerable headway with the tax bill, and at this writing the principal parts of it to be decided on are the normal and surtax rates, over which the biggest fight is being waged. Senator Simmons of North Carolina proposed, as a substitute for the Mellon plan, a schedule calling for reduction of the maximum surtax rate to 40 per cent and for a 50 per cent cut in the normal taxes on incomes below $8,000. The Democratic senators in conference formally approved of this schedule.

LAST winter's maneuvers of the American fleet demonstrated seemingly that it is far below the ratio provided by the Washington conference treaties, according to the report made by Admiral Coontz, its commander. The two main lessons learned were that the fleet is unable to maneuver as a unit at a speed of even ten knots, because of the slowness of the auxiliary vessels, and that the submarines completely failed to function for fleet work. The admiral makes many recommendations designed to remedy conditions, these including construction of airplane carriers, submarine and destroyer tenders, new cruisers, modern submarines, destroyer squadron leaders and airplanes for use with the fleet. The report also advises that eight of the older battleships be modernized, including an increase in the elevation of the turret guns on these and several other ships, to reduce the disparity in range that now exists between our fleet and those of Japan and Great Britain.

WARREN T. M'CRAY last week lost his position as governor of Indiana and his liberty for a decade. Convicted of using the mails in a scheme to defraud, he was sentenced by Federal Judge Anderson to ten years in the penitentiary at Atlanta and to pay a fine of $10,000. The judge in pronouncing sentence arraigned the culprit scathingly, declaring that if McCray "lived to be as old as Methuselah, I could not mete out enough punishment." McCray within a few hours was on his way to his cell.

TERRIFIC storms that reached the proportions of tornadoes swept across the Southern states last Wednesday, killing 113 persons, injuring a thousand others and doing vast property damage. In South Carolina the dead numbered 66, in Georgia 13 and in Alabama 11. The American Red Cross instantly went to the relief of the sufferers and was aided by many other organizations.

AFTER being delayed for days at Chignik, Alaska, by storms, Major Martin, commander of the world-circling squadron, left Wednesday to rejoin his comrades at Dutch Harbor, but up to the time of writing this he had not been heard from, and it was feared he had come to grief in a new storm. Fishing boats were searching along the route for his plane.

EFFORTS of the United States to bring peace to Honduras are bearing fruit. The Central American governments united in a conference which has agreed that Gen. Vicente Tosta shall be provisional president of Honduras pending the holding of new elections. Meanwhile one faction of Hondurans has captured Tegucigalpa, the capital, after twelve hours of bloody fighting.

GREAT BRITAIN, Belgium, Italy, Japan and Yugoslavia have accepted the Dawes report on Germany, but France still is jockeying for alterations. However, the prospects are bright if Germany makes a prompt start to carry out its provisions. Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium are in England discussing the matter with Prime Minister MacDonald. American bankers stand ready to furnish half of the $200,000,000 loan to Germany.

Fear New World Race in Warship Building

London.—America's naval program and the whole subject of disarmament were discussed in the house of commons when Prime Minister MacDonald was asked if his attention had been drawn to a bill introduced in the house of representatives at Washington authorizing the construction of eight cruisers of 10,000 tons at a total cost of £20,000,000 (roughly $88,000,000).

He was also asked as to whether, considering these and the British cruisers outside the limitation of the Washington convention, the British government would approach the United States as to the possibility of another naval conference with the object of preventing a new race in the construction of this powerful type of warship.

Mr. MacDonald replied that the bill had not yet passed the house, and with regard to the rest of the question he referred the questioner to the speech of President Coolidge on April 22, in which the American executive said it appeared impracticable under the present conditions to attempt any further move in the way of limitation of armaments.

"The attitude we have always taken, and with which I am glad to think President Coolidge is in agreement, is that before discussing the limitation of armament we first must remove all or some of the difficulties in the political situation of Europe," Mr. MacDonald replied.

"Queen of Fruits" May Find New Throne Here

The mangosteen, reputed "queen of fruits," and long thought to be impossible of cultivation outside the Asiatic tropics, is to be thoroughly tested in tropical America, according to plans of the United States Department of Agriculture. Seeds from this fruit, which are among the most difficult in the world to transport long distances, have after years of failure finally been successfully brought to Washington. Plants grown from these seeds will be kept in the greenhouses there for two years, when they will be ready for the testing.

The mangosteen is a tree which grows about twenty feet high and produces a delicate fruit of a reddish brown color about the size of an apple.

Swamp-Root a Fine Medicine

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Goodrich Tires are Rugged

The high degree to which production efficiency has been brought about in the plants of B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, is particularly noticeable to a visitor who calls at the plant at this season of the year.

Production of Goodrich Tires is being accomplished through the elimination of lost time and waste at a saving which was undreamed of five or six years ago. And the fact remains that probably the most astonishing thing about this economy is that with the advance of efficiency in manufacture has come a steady improvement in the product. The result is that the standard of service for tires has been considerably raised over what it was a few years ago.

In the old days one of the biggest items of waste in tire manufacture came in the fabric that the tire builder trimmed off. This item was also a very important gauge to the quality of the tire, for the tire builder who had a large trim was stretching his plies too much making the tire carcass too tight and susceptible to breakage under strain. On the other hand the tire builder whose trim was practically negligible was not stretching his plies tight enough and the result might show in a wrinkled ply which in the end would weaken the carcass.

Since the advent of mechanical tire building means the product becomes more uniform and labor is not such a factor governing tire quality. Today in the Goodrich factory detailed records are kept of the number of ounces of fabric trimmed from each tire by each building machine operator. These figures are constantly checked by inspectors and waste specialists who are able to correct the machine or builder when the slightest variation occurs. In this way the high standard of quality that is so consistently shown in long mileage records is maintained in every tire produced.

President Coolidge has vetoed the suggested raise in widow's pensions and the House now is figuring on passing the law over his head which in our opinion can't be done. We are of the opinion the treasury looters in Congress will find out that Coolidge is quite determined on some matters and one of them is cutting down the expenses of this government, He will be severely criticised by the "old vets" and widows but reasons are evident which make two sides to the question. As a matter of fact these old soldiers are getting from the government now one dollar per day, and we should calculate they were pretty well taken care of. One would surmise from reports that most of them could not live upon this sum but we find upon investigation many of them have been able to gain a competency yet they are perfectly willing to draw upon Uncle Samuel each month. Of course it is true a large number pass away each week which in a measure lessens the drag upon our government yet the raising of pensions to the fifty dollar mark per month would mean a terrible drain upon the treasury.

Annual Clean-Up Day

The Village Council has designated Saturday, May 10th, an annual clean-up day in this town, a privilege of which every citizen and citizeness should avail themselves with gratitude. Webster does not furnish such words as "citizeness" so we made the term to suit ourselves and at the same time appeal to the 13 old maids of the straw hat brigade who are always conspicuous this time of year in North Adams. When we look upon the dear old left-overs in Cupid's autograph album we feel like the young minister did who was preaching his first funeral sermon—that of a worthy spinster, closing his remarks something like this: "Not many live to attain the beautiful crown of our dead sister. I wish there were more of them."

We mention old maids because the straw hat brigade usually does most of the cleaning about door yards and the village dads see to it that the rubbish is carted away. Bear in mind that small stuff like metal scraps and broken glass must be in barrels or boxes. The barrels or boxes will however if desired, be left.

There comes a time however to all villages, when the clean spotless walks, the well-trimmed lawns and newly-painted residences serve as a thermometer of the reputation of the citizens and citizenesses, and we can't afford to let the mercury drop much below sixty. We told you before that the whole family each had a hobby for spring fixing and the rich auto tourist who drives through won't catch us in "unclean nakedness" as it were.

They Got "Nipped"

Again it is our unpleasant duty to announce that the small-town newspapers of Michigan have been "camouflaged" to the tune of many hundreds of dollars by means of free advertising which has been posted for the Michigan Industrial Exposition at Detroit which opened Saturday. The manager of this publicity for the exposition played his hand in a very cunning though not by any means original manner. This stunt has been pulled off time and time again yet the small papers always fall for it.

He sent out nicely printed clipsheets stating if the papers wanted to use the little stories of the coming exposition it would be appreciated—and it was. He at once followed with others. Now of course without being dubbed obtuse, we might say a mention or two as a news item would not be out of place nor bad policy but to keep whacking up free reading notices week after week about the great displays which would eventually come from all over the state and even to advertise that famous old-time fakir, Bernarr McFadden, and his incomparable daughter, would seem a little preposterous.

This same publicity artist asked a number of papers for their display rate cards, promising a fat series of ads which never came. So far as we know not even the big dailies of Detroit have been able to collect much publicity money, so that most of the wind-puffs had to be donated to the up-building of Detroit or charged to profit and loss.

The mere mention of the notorious Bernarr McFadden, naked gymnast, ought to have been sufficient evidence of the clap-trap nature of the whole thing but it wasn't strong enough, so our country friends, including the Advocate, kept on featuring the Exposition. As a matter of fact the promoters of the enterprise in all probability clean up a nice bunch of tin from the show—shady tho' it may be and the country press as usual will receive a kick, not a comp ticket being offered the editors. So much for the exposition As for McFadden, after being run out of Eastern cities on account of his publications such as "Physical Culture" he is still at large and playing up the naked gladiator stuff and always finds a bunch of "boobs" of both sexes who try to imitate his shadowy theories about building muscle. He is on par with Lionel Strongfort, Sandow, Earl Leiderman, Alois Swoboda—all fakirs of the same class as "Drs. K & K" and a host of others we might name. These fellows are so close to the letter of the law and yet so far from it that it is next to impossible to "get them." No doubt the McFadden family will prove a good drawing card for the show as many thousands who have read or heard of them, will want to get a glimpse of the celebrities.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortgage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said county house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows: all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital

Disagreements among officials of different Government Department as to the method of procedure is as much to blame for difficulties in prohibition enforcement as anything else. Evidence in most cases is gathered by federal prohibition agents, under the Treasury Department, and the prosecutions are carried on by the Department of Justice. Whenever the assistants to the Attorney General fail to make a case against a bootlegger they blame the Treasury Department for not furnishing the proper evidence. The bickering back and forth has gone to the extent of Department of Justice officials protesting even against seizures of liquor because they are afraid they would not be able to convict those charged with violation of the law.

Exposures and scandal in connection with the various investigations of the members of her husband's Cabinet have not caused any change in the personal friendship of Mrs. Florence Kling Harding for the men involved. This was indicated when she telegraphed to Columbus, O., on occasion of the Harry Daugherty home coming, expressing her friendship and affection for the former Attorney General, who was virtually driven out of the Cabinet because of the attacks made upon him.

Governor Pinchot's defeat in Pennsylvania for election as a delegate to the Republican National Convention is apparently pleasing to Republicans and Democrats alike. The Republicans who are supporting Coolidge interpret it as an indication of the President's strength and a disposition upon the part of the voters to steer away from those who assault the Administration. The Democrats, however, say that the elimination of men of Pinchot's type from the Republican leadership will make it easier for a Progressive Democratic candidate to win in November. Pinchot himself says that the liquor interests beat him.

Government clerks leaving their offices on these warm spring afternoons are likely most anytime to come upon a small thin man walking briskly down the street accompanied by two keen eyed young men, one on either side. It is the President of the United States taking his daily walk. Every afternoon that the press of official business permits, Mr. Coolidge can be found walking about the streets and parks in the vicinity of the White House. He has found horse-back riding too strenuous and has gone back to walking for his exercise.

Threats of a continuation of the 68th Congress after the national conventions in June are heard now and then from Administration leaders, but it begins to look like the legislative slate will be swept clean of important matters by June 1, in accordance with the wish of the President. The House, of course, is far ahead of the Senate, but leaders in the upper chamber are cracking the whip and pushing things alone at a greater speed. The tax reduction bill is the Senate's chief business but it will be laid aside occasionally so that other measures may be acted upon.

Secretary of State Hughes is being urged on every side for the temporay chairmanship of the Republican National Convention. His New York speech outlining the Republican platform has been so well received that Republican leaders think it would be impossible to find anyone better qualified to make the "kepnote speech" at Cleveland. The final decision in the matter will be up to the President, however, and he may conclude that it would be more suitable to pick a keynoter from the Middle West. Among the Democrats, Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana appears as the likely selection for temporary chairman of their New York convention.

General John J. Pershing plans to retire from public life simultaneously with his retirement from the Army this fall. He has declined to stand as a candidate for the Republican Vice-Presidential nomination and intends to devote considerable time to the writing of his memoirs, which will deal extensively with his part in the world war.

CURED BY STARVING

Epilepsy and Diabetes Cured by Going a Month Without Any Food Whatever

Starvation is the latest cure for two of the worst incurable diseases which have puzzled the medical world for centuries. Epilepsy and diabetes are the diseases. The discoverer is Dr. Hugh W. Conklin of Battle Creek, Michigan, President of the Michigan State Board of Registration in Osteopathy and former President of the American Osteopathic Association.

Free treatment is being given to poor children afflicted with epilepsy in the Battle Creek Clinic of which Dr. Conklin is the head. Special research work is being conducted along the lines of his theory at Harvard Medical School and at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York City. Dr. Stanley Cobb is in charge of the investigation at Harvard, and Dr. Rolland Geyelin is at the head of the research work in New York.

DR. HUGH W. CONKLIN
Discoverer of New Cure for Epilepsy

Dr. Conklin's discovery does not conflict in any way with the discovery of insulin, which has attracted so much attention. Insulin does not cure diabetes, but it does save many lives by preventing or averting death from diabetes. The patients, however, are not cured and have to keep on taking the preparation. The Conklin fast, however, does cure these cases permanently, if accompanied by the Conklin method of osteopathic adjustment.

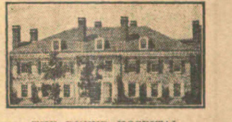
To the astonishment of the investigators it is found that most patients grow stronger instead of weaker during the fast. Dr. Conklin does not keep the patients in bed but has them up and about and they walk to the Clinic for their daily osteopathic adjustment.

A MILLION MADMEN

There Will Soon Be More Than That Number of Insane in America at the Present Rate of Increase

Cancer is not the only disease which is rapidly increasing in this country in spite of every effort of the medical profession to combat it. The rate of increase of insanity is fully as great as that of cancer, and no medical or surgical cure has yet been found for either.

Insane asylums, house and care for maniacs, but they do not administer any treatment to cure the disease because old school medicine recognizes no cure for it.



THE DUFUR HOSPITAL
Scene of the Neewly Discovered Cure for Insanity

The medical world has recently been startled, however, by the announcement of the discovery of a cure by Dr. J. Ivan Dufur, President of the Dufur Hospital at Ambler, Pennsylvania. Dr. Dufur is also professor of nervous and mental diseases at the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy and at the head of that department in the Philadelphia Osteopathic Hospital.

No medicine or surgery is used in the newly discovered method of Dr. Dufur. He and his associates subject the body machinery of the patient to the most minute examination in an attempt to discover some mechanical cause for its faulty mental or nervous expression. When they finish overhauling it, they subject it to a series of osteopathic adjustments supplemented by rest, diet, exercises and correct living. The results have been astonishing in a large percentage of cases.

Autointoxication is the cause of much insanity, according to the discoveries of Dr. Dufur. He clears up the autointoxication by getting the body machinery into such condition that it eliminates the toxins. Faulty action of the ductless glands is the cause of another group of mental diseases, according to Dr. Dufur's researches. These mysterious glands can be speeded up or slowed down by osteopathic treatment by the newly discovered method.

Dr. Dufur has just accepted an invitation to make a tour of the Pacific Coast, addressing scientific organizations and holding clinics for the demonstration of his methods.

To Abolish Old Age

"Old age is entirely unnecessary," declares Dr. Eva Kate Coffey of Los Angeles. Health, strength and efficiency of middle life may be prolonged into the period now known as old age by means of an osteopathic treatment recently devised by Dr. Coffey, which she will describe at the National Osteopathic Convention in Kirksville, Mo., May 25.

THE TIMID BORROWER

"I'd like to borrow $50 to buy a cow I saw yesterday," said a farmer to the cashier of a country bank.

The cashier hesitated. "No, I can't lend you $50 for a cow, but I'll let you have $100 or $125."

Astonishment was written all over the face of the man seeking funds. "Why, I can't afford to pay that amount for a cow. I'm rather hard up just now."

If All Citizens Were Like Me!

"No, I don't think I'll vote at the primaries," replied a woman citizen to a visitor. "I'm in the midst of my housecleaning and I'm going to entertain our Current Events Society Thursday afternoon. I postively can't take the time. I guess," laughingly, "the republic will get along all right without my vote."

"Perhaps," replied the visitor, "but how would you like to live in a republic where all the decent citizens were like you, where they were all too busy to attend to the business of voting for the right kind of candidates?"

The woman gasped, "Why it would be dreadful, wouldn't it? The government would soon be turned over to men who would manipulate it for their own selfish interests. We would soon face chaos. The possibility frightens me." Then, more seriously, "I guess I am not too busy to vote after all. I will stop right off in my housecleaning and make a study of the candidates to be voted for at the primaries and I will turn our Current Events class into a meeting for the consideration of the matter."

It would be time well spent in these pre-election days to picture in our imagination the fate of the nation if every decent citizen were to be "too busy to vote" or "couldn't find time to go to the polls." Remembering that over fifty per cent of the men and women entitled to cast a ballot at the last presidential election declined to interest themselves sufficiently to go to the polling booth, one is forced to the conviction that unless there is a marked revival of interest on the part of the electorate, the time is not far distant when the government may be controlled by vicious interests. Make "Get out the Vote" your slogan from now until election day next November!

State Jersey Sale for May 14

Selected animals from Michigan's leading Jersey cattle herds will go over the auction block in the M. A. C. livestock pavilion on Wednesday May 14, in the first state Jersey Cattle sale ever held.

The sale is being managed by the Michigan Jersey Cattle Club. Fifty picked females, two of them imported animals, will be sold. These have been selected from the best herds in the state, according to H. E. Dennison, field man for the Jersey club.

Among the prominent breeders who have consigned cows to the sale are: B. H. Bull and Son, Brampton, Ontario; A. H. Goss, Ann Arbor; H. F. Probert, Jackson; John Barron, Fennville; Corwin Silver Fox Farm, Hart; Joseph Forney, Saginaw; C. E. George, Union City, and Alvin Balden, Capac.

A special feature of the sale will be the giving away of three outstanding bulls to the men who guess the nearest the average sale price for the animals sold.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITO

What The Volstead Act Did for the Farmer

That "the farmer fathered prohibition and in turn was devoured by his offspring" is the statement which appears on the cover page of a recent issue of The Minute Man, published by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and headed "What the Volstead Act Did to the Farmer". The article attempts to show that by taking away the right of the farmer to make alcohol for denaturation tax free, the Volstead Act has worked gross injury to the farmer. The A. A. P. A. works itself into a fine frenzy in defense of the poor farmer, and asks, "Can he be convinced of the mighty truth (that he is being devoured by prohibition) and take the means necessary to save himself, or will he be content to remain in his chains?

Naturally, we were interested to know how this defense of the farmer would appeal to the National Grange, which is the acknowledged spokesman for the residents of the rural districts and those engaged in agriculture. We, therefore sent a copy of the screed to Mr. S. J. Lowell, president of the National Grange and this is his reply:

"The farmers of America are the base of all temperance movements, and I know you will not be misled into believing there is any truth in this kind of literature. "Whom the gods wish to destroy, they first make mad very aptly applies to these people (the A. A. P. A.) A sick dog whines. The more you hear of that stuff the more you may be certain they don't know what else to do. Never be discouraged. Keep at it. The farmers are all right!"

Then, to refresh our memory on the response to a questionnaire sent out to the heads of the state granges a few months ago, we turned to our files, and found there statements from representatives of the farmers, to this effect: Prohibition has most assuredly proven beneficial to the people on the farm and in the country towns, and they approve of it," The farmers approve of prohibition and would vote for it again," etc, and we are forced to the conclusion that not by the Association Against the prohibition Amendment or any one else "can the farmer be convinced of the mighty truth" that he is being "devoured by prohibition."

May Festival at Ann Arbor

The Thirty First Annual May Festival consisting of four evening and two afternoon programs will be given in Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor, May 21, 22, 23, and 24. The University Choral Union under Musical Director, Earl V. Moore, will present two monumental choral works both of which will be heard in Ann Arbor for the first time, "La Primavera" by Respighi, and "Seadrift" by Delius. The Children's Festival Chorus of 500 voices under the leadership of George Oscar Bowen will appear in the Friday afternoon program. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Frederick Stock, will provide in addition to accompaniments for the choral, solo and instrumental numbers, symphonic and other selections.

The following artists will participate: Emmr Kruger (Munich, Berlin and Madrid Operas), Dusolina Giannini (American Italian Concert Star), and Claire Dux (Chicago Civic Opera), sopranos; Sophie Braslau (Metropolitan Opera), contralto Tito Schipa (Chicago Civic Opera) and Forrest Lamont (Chicago Civic Opera), Tenors: Vicente Ballester (Metropolitan Opera) and Royal Dadmun, Baritones; Cesare Baromeo (Chase Sikes—La Scala Opera), Bass; Sylvia Leni, Violinist; Alberto Salvia, Harpist; Harold Bauer, Pianist; Palmer Christian, Organist. Booklet announcements and detailed information may be secured by addressing Secretary Charles A. Sink.

The Modern Husband's Job

Being a husband has not been any lazy man's job since the cost of living went up. Any normal wife demands a fair share of life's benefits. Legs of lamb, bread, butter, carpets and other essentials cost money. The means for a happy home can not be gained simply by reporting to some office at 9 a. m. and "holding down" the desk until closing time.

But the demands of the Emancipated Woman go beyond mere physical comfort. Some people may think the women want "cave man stuff," or forceful and dominating control. Those who think so would better reflect on the very great independence of the girls of today. They will not put up with many things that their mothers used to endure without complaint.

If the young married men of today do some things that were formerly done by many husbands, these independent girls are likely to flounce out of the house and go home to Mother, or set out to earn their own living. Their capacity for self support makes them independent, and they won't spend much time arguing about it either. They often regard their marriage vows too lightly, but the husbands may be even more to blame.

The wives of former years feared a separation so much that they often put up with neglect and even infidelity. Husbands got the idea that their wives would stand for anything. They know better now after a little while.

Even the man who does nothing very wrong, but is just inconsiderate and selfish, may find that no woman will live with him. Perhaps she ought to overlook more in view of her pledges to husband and children, but the husband should be careful to keep his part of the obligation.

The modern husband would better wake up to the fact that the home is a partnership in which the wife has an equal voice, also that his courting days were only begun when the minister said those brief but fateful words in the church.

Find New Cure For Children's Disease

A new method of preventing rickets, a children's disease due to faulty nutrition, and of overcoming certain general malnutritional difficulties, has been announced by two members of the chemistry staff at the M. A. C., R. C. Huston and H. D. Lightbody.

After experiments which have covered many months, Professors Huston and Lightbody have given information which promises to have far reaching effects upon future human and animal nutrition control measures. Hydroquinone, a compound of simple chemical composition, has been found to be remarkably effective in offsetting certain tendencies which are caused by a diet low in phosphorus and calcium, or by a failure of the body to assimilate these elements properly.

Codliver oil, certain other fish oils, and cocoanut oil have long been favorite remedies for malnutrition. Use of a mercury lamp (ultra violet rays) has also been known as a measure of prevention for rickets. The Hydroquinone treatment, as announced by the M. A.C. men, is a third method which may according to specialists who have studied it, develop into one of far reaching importance.

Rats were used in the M. A. C. experiments, being fed on a diet low in phosphorus in order to produce experimental rickets. Addition of a very small fraction of one percent of Hydroquinone to the diet resulted in normal development, while the rats which did not receive it invariably died in the experiments

Hydrquinone is a chemical compound used commonly as a developer in photography. "It is too early", says Professor Huston, "to recommend it as a substitute for codliver oil in the treatment of rickets, but those who have taken codliver oil will be interested to know that Hydrquinone is slightly sweet and not hard to take."

M. A. C. Announces Finish Of Sodatol

Sodatol, war salvage explosive which has been available for Michigan farmers during the past year, is a thing of the past, as far as new orders are concerned.

Word has been received this week from L. F. Livingston, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the M. A. C., and in charge of Sodatol distribution in the state, indicates that the Michigan quota has been taken and that no more orders for Sodatol can be booked.

Michigan farmers have ordered a million and a half pounds of the explosive since it was made available last fall.

NO TROUBLE WHEN BABY CAME

Mrs. Crossan Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Dakan Also Tells What This Medicine Does

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I decided to try it as I had had such a hard time with my first child. I took nine bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I never felt better in my life than the day my baby girl was born. I will be glad to tell what it will do, to any woman who will let me know her address."—Mrs. ROSA DAKAN, 2227 S. 11th St., St. Joseph, Missouri.

Back To Normal Health

New Orleans, Louisiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while I was carrying my child and I must praise it highly because I never suffered one day during that time and could do all my housework and had a very easy confinement. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound because I have a weakness due to working around the house too soon after my baby was born. But thanks again to the Vegetable Compound I am getting back to normal health once more. I advise any woman to take it."—Mrs. A. MEYN, JR., 2019 Touro St., New Orleans, Louisiana.

Not A Bit of Trouble

Wilmington, Delaware.—"I was nervous and weak and not at all regular. I worked in a factory at the time and could not work very much. I was sick over a year, then a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started to pick up as soon as I began taking it. Then I took it again before my first baby was born and I never had a bit of trouble. I recommend it highly."—Mrs. JANE CROSSAN, 612 Pine St., Wilmington, Delaware.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped many other women just as it has helped Mrs. Dakan, Mrs. Meyn and Mrs. Crossan.

Consider the statements of these women. They give you the benefit of their actual experience with the Vegetable Compound.

A nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of the Vegetable Compound reports that 98 out of every 100 have been benefited by its use.

This is a remarkable record and proves the dependability of the medicine for the relief of the troubles women often have.

For weak and run-down conditions so common after child-birth it is well adapted. It strengthens and tones up the system and restores normal health.

The Vegetable Compound contains no harmful drugs or narcotics and can be taken in safety by the nursing mother. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Simple Explanation

"One summer I spent my vacation on a farm with two old maids," observed a story teller the other night. "The corn season had just opened and we had corn every day. I observed that when Mary ate corn Lizzy didn't; when Lizzy did, Mary didn't. I couldn't figure it out; so one day I asked: 'Mary, how does it happen when you eat corn Liz doesn't, and when Liz does you don't?'

"'Ho, ho,' said Mary, a little hot under the collar, 'we hain't only one set of teeth, you idiot.'"—Exchange.

He saw the plan now—an admirable plan. They were to meet near the port of sailing and be married and go aboard the ship and away. It was the plan of Margaret and much better than any he could have made, for he knew little of London and its ports.

"Should I not take my baggage with me?"

"There is not time for that," the veiled lady answered. "We must make haste. I have some clothes for you in a bag."

She pointed to a leathern case under the front seat.

From that time forward they rode in a silence broken only by the creaking of the coach and the sound of the horses' hoofs. Darkness had fallen when they reached the little city of Gravesend. The Ship and Anchor stood by the water's edge.

"You will please wait here," said the stern lady in a milder voice than she had used before, as the coach drew up at the inn door, "I shall see if she has come."

His strange companion entered the inn and returned presently, saying: "She has not yet arrived. Delayed by the fog. We will have our dinner, if you please."

From this point the scene at the inn is described in the diary of the American.

"She drew off her hat and veil and a young woman about twenty-eight years of age and of astonishing beauty stood before me."

"'There, now, I am out of business,' she remarked in a pleasant voice as she sat down at the table which had been spread before the fireplace. 'I will do my best to be a companion to you until Margaret arrives.'

"She looked into my eyes and smiled. Her sheath of ice had fallen from her.

"The waiter came with a tray containing soup, glasses and a bottle of sherry. We sat down at the table and our waiter filled two glasses with the sherry.

"'Thank you, but self-denial is another duty of mine,' she remarked when I offered her a glass of the wine. 'I live in a tipsy world and drink—water. I live in a merry world and keep a stern face. It is a vile world and yet I am unpolluted.'

"I drank my glass of wine and had begun to eat my soup when a strange feeling came over me. My plate seemed to be sinking through the table. The wall and fireplace were receding into dim distance. I knew then that I had tasted the cup of Circe. My hands fell through my lap and suddenly the day ended. It was like sawing off a board. The end had fallen. There is nothing more to be said of it because my brain had ceased to receive and record impressions. I was as totally out of business as a man in his grave. When I came to, I was in a berth on the ship King William bound for New York. As soon as I knew anything, I knew that I had been tricked. My clothes had been removed and were lying on a chair near me. My watch and money were undisturbed. I had a severe pain in my head. I dressed and went up on deck. The captain was there.

"You must have had a night of it in Gravesend," he said. "You were like a dead man when they brought you abroad."

"'Where am I going?' I asked.

"'To New York,' he answered with a laugh. 'You must have had a time!'

"How much is the fare?"

"'Young man, that need not concern you,' said the captain. 'Your fare has been paid in full. I saw them put a letter in your pocket. Have you read it?'"

Jack found the letter and read:

"Dear Sir—When you see this you will be well out of danger and, it is hoped, none the worse for your dissipation. This from one who admires your skill and courage and who advises you to keep out of England for at least a year.

"A WELL WISHER."

He looked back over the stern of the ship. The shore had fallen out of sight. The sky was clear. The sun shining. The wind was blowing from the east.

He stood for a long time looking toward the land he had left.

"Oh, ye wings of the wind! take my love to her and give her news of me and bid her to be steadfast in her faith and hope," he whispered.

CHAPTER XII

The Girl He Left Behind Him.

After Jack had been whirled out of London, Franklin called at his lodgings and learned that he had not been seen for a day. The wise philosopher entertained no doubt that the young man had taken ship agreeably with the advice given him. A report had been running through the clubs of London that Lionel Clarke had succumbed. In fact he had had a bad turn, but had rallied. Jack must have heard the false report and taken ship suddenly.

Doctor Franklin went that day to the meeting of the privy council, whither he had been sternly summoned for examination in the matter of the letters of Hutchinson et al. For an hour he had stood unmoved while Alexander Wedderburn, the wittiest barrister in the kingdom, poured upon him a torrent of abuse. Even the judges, against all traditions of decorum in the high courts of Britain, laughed at the cleverness of the assault. That was the speech of which Charles James Fox declared that it was the most expensive bit of oratory which had been heard in England, since it had cost the kingdom its colonies.

It was alleged that in some manner Franklin had stolen the letters and violated their sacred privacy. It is known now that an English nobleman had put them in his hands to read and that he was in no way responsible for their publication. The truth, if it could have been told, would have bent the proud heads of Wedderburn and the judges to whom he appealed, in confusion. But Franklin held his peace, as a man of honor was bound to do. He stood erect and dignified with a face like one carved in wood.

The counsel for the colonies made a weak defense. The triumph was complete. The venerable man was convicted of conduct inconsistent with the character of a gentleman and deprived of his office as postmaster general of the colonies.

But he had two friends in court. They were the Lady Hare and her daughter. They followed him out of the chamber. In the great hallway, Margaret, her eyes wet with tears, embraced and kissed the philosopher.

"I want you to know that I am your friend and that I love America," she said.

"My daughter, it has been a hard hour, but I am sixty-eight years old and have learned many things," he answered. "Time is the only avenger I need. It will lay the dust."

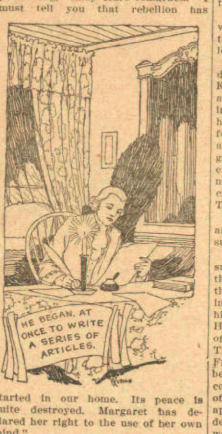
The girl embraced and kissed him again and said in a voice shaking with emotion:

"I wish my father and all Englishmen to know that I am your friend and that I have a love that cannot be turned aside or destroyed and that I will have my right as a human being."

"Come let us go and talk together—we three," he proposed.

They took a cab and drove away.

"You will think all this a singular proceeding," Lady Hare remarked. "I must tell you that rebellion has started in our home. Its peace is quite destroyed. Margaret has declared her right to the use of her own mind."



HE BEGAN, AT ONCE TO WRITE A SERIES OF ARTICLES.

"Well, if she is to use any mind it will have to be that one," Franklin answered. "I do not see why women should not be entitled to use their minds as well as their hands and feet."

"I was kept at home yesterday by force," said Margaret. "Every door locked and guarded! It was brutal tyranny."

"The poor child has my sympathy, but what can I do?" Lady Hare inquired.

"Being an American, you can expect but one answer from me," said the philosopher. "To us tyranny in home or state is intolerable. They tried it on me when I was a boy and I ran away."

"That is what I shall do if necessary," said Margaret.

"Oh, my child! How would you live?" her mother asked.

"I will answer that question for her, if you will let me," said Franklin. "If she needs it, she shall have an allowance out of my purse."

"Thank you, but that would raise a scandal," said the woman.

"Oh, your ladyship, I am old enough to be her grandfather."

"I wish to go with Jack, if you know where he is," Margaret declared, looking up into the face of the philosopher.

"I think he is pushing toward America," Franklin answered. "Being alarmed at the condition of his adversary, I advised him to slip away. A ship went yesterday. Probably he's on it. He had no chance to see me or pick up his baggage."

"I shall follow him soon," the girl declared.

"If you will only contain yourself, you will get along with your father very well," said Lady Hare. "I know him better than you. He has promised to take you to America in December. You must wait and be patient. After all, your father has a large claim upon you."

"I think you will do well to wait, my child," said the philosopher. "Jack will keep and you are both young. Fathers are like other children. They make mistakes—they even do wrong now and then. They have to be forgiven and allowed a chance to repent and improve their conduct. Your father is a good man. Try to win him to your cause."

"And die a maiden," said the girl with a sigh.

"Impossible!" Franklin exclaimed.

"I shall marry Jack or never marry. I would rather be his wife than the queen of England."

"This is surely the age of romance," said the smiling philosopher as the ladies alighted at their door. "I wish I were young again."

CHAPTER XIII

The Ferment.

On his voyage to New York, Jack wrote long letters to Margaret and to Doctor Franklin, which were deposited in the post office on his arrival, the tenth of March. He observed a great change in the spirit of the people. They were no longer content with words. The ferment was showing itself in acts of open and violent disorder. The statue of George III, near the battery, was treated to a volley of decayed eggs, in the evening of his arrival. This hot blood was due to the effort to prevent free speech in the colonies and the proposal to send political prisoners to England for trial.

Jack took the first boat to Albany and found Solomon working on the Irons farm. In his diary he tells of the delightful days of rest he enjoyed with his family. Solomon had told them of the great adventure but Jack would have little to say of it, having no pride in that achievement.

Soon the scout left on a mission for the committee of safety to distant settlements in the great north bush.

"I'll be spendin' the hull moon in the wilderness," he said to Jack. "Goin' to Virginny when I get back, an' I'll look fer ye on the way down."

Jack set out for Philadelphia the day after Solomon left. He stopped at Kinderhook on his way down the river and addressed its people on conditions in England. A young Tory interrupted his remarks. At the barbecue, which followed, this young man was seized and punished by a number of stalwart girls who removed his collar and jacket by force and covered his head and neck with molasses and the fuzz of cat tails. Jack interceded for the Tory and stopped the proceeding.

"My friends, we must control our anger," he said. "Let us not try to subdue tyranny by using it ourselves."

Everywhere he found the people in such a temper that Tories had to hold their peace or suffer punishment. At the office he learned that his most important letters had failed to pass the hidden censorship of mail in England. He began, at once, to write a series of articles which hastened the crisis. The first of them was a talk with Franklin, which told how his mail had been tampered with; that no letter had come to his hand through the post office which had not been opened with apparent indifference as to the evidence of its violation. The Doctor's words regarding free speech in America and the proposal to try the bolder critics for treason were read and discussed in every household from the sea to the mountains and from Maine to Florida.

The young man's work had set the bells ringing and they were the bells of revolt. The arrival of General Gage at Boston in May, to be civil governor and commander-in-chief for the continent, and the blockade of the port twenty days later, compelling its population who had been fed by the sea to starve or subsist on the bounty of others, drove the most conservative citizens into the open. Parties went out Tory hunting. Every suspected man was compelled to declare himself and if incorrigible, was sent away. Town meetings were held even under the eyes of the king's soldiers and no tribunal was allowed to sit in any court house. At Salem, a meeting was held behind locked doors with the governor and his secretary shouting a proclamation through its keyhole, declaring it to be dissolved. The meeting proceeded to its end, and when the citizens filed out, they had invited the thirteen colonies to a general congress in Philadelphia.

It was Solomon Binkus who conveyed the invitation to Pennsylvania and Virginia. He had gone on a second mission to Springfield and Boston and had been in the meeting at Salem with General Ward. Another man carried that historic call to the colonies farther south. In five weeks, delegates were chosen, and early in August, they were traveling on many different roads toward the Quaker city. Crowds gathered in every town and village they passed. Solomon, who rode with the Virginia delegation, told Jack that he hadn't heard so much noise since the Injun war.

"They was poundin' the bells, an' shootin' cannons everywhere," he declared. "Men, women and children crowded 'round us an' split their lungs yellin'. They's a streak o' sore throats all the way from Alexandry to here."

Families Live in Cave Hewn Out of Solid Rock

Healthy and thriving families are living comfortably and happily in caves hewn out of the solid rock which overlooks the pretty Worcestershire village of Kinver, near Stourbridge.

In this wonderful cave colony about thirty people dwell as contentedly and as happily as people do in garden cities.

Of four or five families, the largest, with eight or nine bright, healthy-looking children, occupies a three-caved dwelling.

One cave is the kitchen-sitting room and the other two are bedrooms. The dwellings are at all heights, and are approached by narrow pathways winding round and up the rock.

One dwelling, regarded as the "mansion" of the colony, contains seven rooms, and has glazed windows back and front.

The floors, walls and ceilings are rough-hewn rock. The front door is approached by a roadway, and a cheery fire burns in a kitchen stove, cemented into one corner of the front sitting-room. A well-made chimney, carved out of the rock, carries away the smoke.

The squire of the community owns the freehold of his rock dwelling, whilst the majority of the others are let at a rental of a few shillings a week.

The local authority recognizes these cave dwellings, which are assessed in the rate books.—London Tit-Bits.

A Condition

The stern parent was interviewing his daughter's suitor who was asking her hand in matrimony.

"She tells me she loves you," returned the girl's father, "but that is not all. Do you think you can afford to pay for all the little luxuries that she is accustomed to?"

"Why—er—yes—that is, if she'll do without the necessities, I can," replied the young man reflectively.

Memorial Day Proclamation

"Our country, the proudest, the most mighty of Nations, sovereignity of righteousness. is again called upon to manifest its gratitude to the few remaining members of the Grand Army of the Republic, and to pay tribute to the memory of the fallen. Memorial Day was created in order that the deeds of sacrifice and devotion to freedom in the Civil War might forever live But time has brought a new and vast army of living and fallen heroes for us to honor. In deepest reverance we pay tribute to the few veterans of the Civil War still living. Soon the Grand Commander of All will issue His final order to these proud and faltering comrades of '61 and there will be no living Grand Army veteran to honor. May his memory always be sacred to us. The boys of yesterday who freed from tyranny a suppressed people and who extended righteous American rule to the other side of the world. are fast passing into another realm. Soon the ranks of the Spanish war veterans will be as thin as those of the Civil war. Let America never forget the glorious deeds and sacrifice of those fighting lads of yesterday. With flowers by land and sea, with every human token let us give honor, not only to the veterans of the Civil and Spanish war, but the young men of to-day who gave freedom to the world through battle on foreign soil.

Therefore, I. Alex. J. Groesbeck, Governor of Michigan, proclaim and urge a proper observance of Friday, May 30, 1924, as Memorial Day.

These Sunday evening studies of South America are most interesting, and everybody is invited to attend.

The County Federation of Women's Clubs will meet in North Adams May 23. The program begins in the morning. Mrs. G. G. Hunter of St. Johns Vice President of the M. S. F. U. C., will be the principal speaker. Miss Armstrong of Hillsdale the capable President of the County Federation, has recovered from her recent illness and will preside at this meeting. All interested in club work whether members of the Federation or not are most cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Last Friday evening the W. C. T U. gave one of their incomparable silver medal contests which is calculated to exercise the oratorical ability of the younger class of students. The program was greeted by a crowded house and appreciation of the efforts of those in charge was manifested strongly. There were seven contestants; music was furnished in the shape of duets solos and instrumental. The speeches were all considered very good but Miss Muriel Shambaugh of near Hoxie won the prize. Judges acting on this occasion were Miss Ethel Clement, Mrs. Jennie Othoudt and Geraldine Cox. The contest was held at the Bross school house

The big gravel screen of the Crater-Hoffman company was this week removed from the gravel pit at Addison and taken to Nashville, Mich., by John Fitton and Will Parish. Work at Nashville will be finished in about three weeks, providing nothing unusual happens. The screen weighs 8 tons and progress is necessarily slow.

The Epworth League will hold a baked goods sale in Wertz's store Saturday. The money raised is to be used in improving the grounds at the E. L camp at Pleasant Lake All members are requested to help this sale and they will appreciate it very much if each member of the L. A. Society will contribute something for this sale. Saturday May 17th.

Mrs. Minnie Robinson of Bloom, Colorado who used to reside near the Bross school and later in Hillsdale for a number of years, recently left for the west after visiting at the home of Mrs. S. F. Purchase and son for some weeks. Mrs. Robinson went to Colorado to improve the health of her son, John Robinson, who graduated from Hillsdale High school a few years ago. The latter is now entirely well and is agent for the Santa Fe road at the town of Bloom.

Edd Piper handed us an English paper this week published at Letchworth, England each week. It is called "The Citizen" 12 pages. 6 columns and is a real creditable sheet. Among the unusual oddities we see is an advertisement of an English made automobile called the "Standard" with 11 and 13-h. p. engines respectively and selling for £235 or right around $1,142.10 American money. The average American, even though he were a ditch digger would turn up his double-eagled nose if he had to pay $1,142.10 for a car of only 11 h. p, On the front page in a very conspicuous position appears an ad for ales and beer. The curse of liquor lies heavy on England and there is not much hope of ameliorating the condition. Prohibition advocates are mobbed in short order.

State's Champion Debaters

As a fiual wind-up of the High School debating contests held all over the state of Michigan the past winter by the Debating League, C. E. Densmore who is Director, says that the contest has simmered down to just two schools—Romeo vs. Saginaw, the last debate having been between Romeo and Pontiac, resulting in a victory for Romeo.

This leaves the issue up to Romeo and Saginaw and these teams will battle for supremacy on the boards at Ann Arbor next Monday evening May 19th.

The Romeo team consists of three members chosen for their ability in this line who are coached and fitted under the supervision of Superintendent George Combs, Jr., formerly of Moscow township. He has been the head of Romeo schools for some years and finds time apart from a busy curriculum to supervise the debating team. Being a polished and fluent speaker himself there is no reason why these pupils should not clean up the championship, and it means something too, since more than 400 debates have been pulled off around the state preceeding this event.

In Memoriam

Dated May 10, 1924

The C. J. Dickerson Post, No 6, G. A. R. is making a strenuous effort to get all the veteran soldiers of the Civil War in Hillsdale county to come to Hillsdale for a big Decoration Day program on Friday, May 30th.

In honor and memory of Hillsdale county veterans who fought in '64, E. C. Shupp of Hillsdale, is donating a large conglomerated rock with a bronze tablet upon it which will be in place at the corner of North and Broad streets before Memorial Day. The trees are now planted for the occasion. This will be a county memorial.

The Civil war veterans of the county are asked to be in the city on May 30th to help make the day's program a success and be present to participate in the dedicating and unveiling of the monument. Yours very truly
Fred Wolf, Post Commander

MARRIED TWELVE YEARS BEFORE BABY CAME

Gladly Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Nebraska.—"I was married twelve years before my boy was born. I had a lot of female troubles and had been treated by a physician for them but they continued much the same. Then I read your advertisement in the newspapers and thought I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a good trial, for if it had helped others, why not me? I have taken 36 bottles of the medicine and am never without it in the house. My baby boy is three years old now and I sure am happy since I got relief from my troubles. When any one has troubles like mine, or any ways like mine, I am always glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound so that they will get the right kind of medicine."—Mrs. JOE NOVAK, Box 662, Louisville, Neb.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Detroit—The city council has voted to increase the number of "boulevard stop" streets in Detroit by including all streets upon which car lines are located, and also 15 others.

Calumet—Eli Ojala, 38 years old, and John Hannenen, 40 years old, were killed instantly at a grade crossing at Highway, near here, when their automobile was hit by a locomotive.

Grand Rapids—Pursuing a ball which was batted into the street, Katherine Kiszka, 4 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kiszka, was killed instantly as she ran in front of a street car.

Hillsdale—Hog cholera has appeared in two herds in this county and Dr. W. J. Madell, Federal officer, is co-operating with local veterinarians in an effort to prevent further spread of the disease.

Ypsilanti—Chief of Police John Connors has asked city officials for permission to enlarge the local police force, declaring that the work done by the department during the last year was nearly double that of 1922.

Saginaw—Michael Augurre, 28 years old, Mexican farm hand, is dead as a result of injuries received when a wagon from which he fell ran over his body. Augurre was working on the Ralph Leach farm in Taymouth township.

Pontiac—William A. Putnam, 42 years old, head of Oakland County's motorcycle squad, was seriously injured in his back, when his motorcycle collided with a truck on Woodward avenue in Bloomfield Township, throwing him to the pavement.

Adrian—Grace Scott, seven years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Scott, of Medina 15 miles southwest of here, died from injuries suffered when she was struck by an automobile. The child had just hung a May basket on a neighbor's door and stepped into the path of the car as she ran from the house.

Detroit—Frances Duda, 8 years old, was instantly killed when she fell to the sidewalk in front of her home. The child was jumping a rope and it caught the heel of her shoe, throwing her to the sidewalk, where she struck her head. When playmates reached her she was dead. Doctors from Receiving hospital said she died of a fractured skull.

Owosso—A jury in Circuit Court denied damages to Mrs. Rosella Swihart, in her suit against Samuel Thompson, of Owosso, for injuries suffered last fall when Thompson's automobile hit her as she stood in the middle of the street. She admitted that she looked neither way for cars, and the jury found her guilty of contributory negligence.

Lansing—John Schaible, of Lansing, who has a state-wide reputation among Michigan builders as an artistic builder of ireplaces, is dead after a short illness. Examples of Schaible's handicraft are to be found in fine homes in all parts of Michigan. He has made his home in Lansing for 35 years, but his mastery of his craft has taken him to many other cities.

Grand Rapids—Leslie Carlson and Walter Paulson, both 29 years old and of Greenville, were injured seriously when an automobile in which they were riding was wrecked in a headon collision with a street car here. Police said they found a bottle of liquor and a pair of crutches in the car, the latter being used by Paulson, who was recovering from injuries to his foot.

Cadillac—A new method of discipline for truant high school girls is being tried out here. Seventy-five girls "skipped" one afternoon and when they appeared at school again were sentenced to report at 7:15 a. m. for an indefinite period. "It does no good to make them stay after school, they like it," said Principal B. C. Shankland, "as they escape helping with the housework."

Almont—W. F. Hammond, 42 years old, manager of the Almont branch of the Michigan Bell Telephone company, was killed when his automobile was struck by a Detroit United Interurban car, one mile south of Almont. Hammond's car stalled as he was crossing the rails. The impact threw the front trucks of the interurban car from the rails and several passengers were slightly injured.

Kalamazoo—High school students make good police. So say the student council and faculty of Central High school following a tryout of the "patrol" system in the halls. One student is on duty for an hour at a time, his job being to watch the lockers and maintain quiet. In a recent fire at the school, the student cops displayed ability and efficiency in guiding 1,400 pupils out of the building.

Battle Creek—Mrs. Lycurgus McCoy, who, with her husband, Elder Lycurgus McCoy, not long ago celebrated her sixty-eighth wedding anniversary, died here. She was 91 years old. For 40 years, Elder and Mrs. McCoy have been members of the sanitarium family, the former serving as chaplain. Mrs. McCoy was well known for charitable work, until age and an accident in which she broke her arm last July, made her a semi-invalid. The sudden death of her only grandson, C. MacSheridan, in April, also was a shock to Mrs. McCoy.

Detroit—Vaclav Simek, 26 years old, who says he is a graduate of the University of Prague, was sentenced to from one to two years in Ionia by Judge Frank Murphy on a charge of malicious threats to extort $1,050,000 from Edsel B. Ford, auto magnate. Mrs. Anna Hladik, at whose home Simek roomed, is awaiting trial on a similar charge. Simek told the court that the letters threatening the life of Mr. Ford's children were written by Mrs. Hladik and copied by him after a group of 20 men had threatened his life if he failed to do so.

Senate Changes Tax Bill to Accord With the Views of the Democrats.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IT LOOKS as if the Republicans must go before the country in the Presidential campaign with a tax reduction law mainly of Democratic fashioning. This if the changes in the house measure made by the senate are sustained in conference and if the bill is not vetoed by Mr. Coolidge. The Democrats then would have gained one of the big political advantages for which they have been striving.

With the aid of the radical Republican senators and the two Farmer-Laborites, the Democrats in the senate last week forced the acceptance of the Simmons substitute tax bill by the committee of the whole, in place of the Mellon plan. It fixes the surtax maximum at 40 per cent, and the normal tax rates at 2 per cent on net income up to $4,000, 4 per cent between $4,000 and $8,000, and 6 per cent above $8,000.

Under the Simmons surtax schedule a rate of 1 per cent applies on income between $10,000 and $14,000, instead of 1 per cent between $10,000 and $12,000, as in the Mellon plan, and 1 per cent between $6,000 and $10,000, as in the present law. The rates then advance by 1 per cent in intervals of $2,000 and $4,000 until 36 per cent is reached on income in excess of $96,000 and not in excess of $100,000. A rate of 37 per cent applies between $100,000 and $200,000, 38 per cent between $200,000 and $300,000, 39 per cent between $300,000 and $500,000, and 40 per cent on that portion of income in excess of $500,000.

Next the Democratic-radical Republican combination put into the bill the Democratic graduated corporation tax and the Democratic substitute for the estate tax. The former provides that corporation earnings be subject to a normal tax of 9 per cent, and undivided earnings in excess of specified exemptions would be subject to surtaxes ranging from a fourth of 1 per cent to 40 per cent. This would be a substitute for the 14 per cent flat tax already approved by the senate in lieu of the present tax of 12½ per cent on corporation earnings, and the present capital stock tax, which is to be repealed.

The estate tax is changed to an inheritance tax, and provides that on a transfer to a husband, wife, child, adopted child, parent, or grandchild of the decedent a tax of 1 per cent up to $25,000 shall apply, with a graduated tax on larger amounts up to a maximum of 36 per cent of the amount in excess of $5,000,000. These rates shall be increased by 25 per cent in the case of a transfer to a brother, sister, nephew, or niece of the decedent. The rates are increased by 50 per cent in the case of a transfer to any other person. Exemptions are $25,000 for husband or wife, $10,000 for a parent, child, adopted child or grandchild, and $5,000 for others.

It is said in Washington that while President Coolidge strongly disapproves of the changes in the bill made by the senate, he is not likely to veto it. He hopes some of the objectionable features will be removed in conference, especially the corporation tax substitute and the amendment providing for full publicity of tax returns.

SENATE and house conferees on the immigration bill agreed upon the feature providing complete exclusion of Japanese immigration after July 1 next, and then, yielding to the earnest arguments of President Coolidge, changed their minds and decided to recommend postponement of exclusion until March 1, 1925. This would give the State department time to negotiate with Japan for exclusion by treaty, which would mollify the citizens of the island empire considerably. The provision for exclusion as agreed on is in the following language:

"This subdivision shall not take effect as to exclusion until March 1, 1925, before which time the President is requested to negotiate with the Japanese government in relation to the abrogation of the present agreement on this subject."

Senator Shortridge of California declared his intention of raising a point of order against the conference report when it comes to the senate on the ground that the senate conferees had exceeded their authority.

SENATOR NORRIS' expressed intention of contining his efforts to save Muscle Shoals and other valuable resources of the country for the people will win wide approval, but it isn't likely he is doing the cause any good by his vicious attacks on President Coolidge in that connection. The senate agriculture committee heard James Martin Miller, correspondent, declare again that he correctly quoted the President, in his telegram to Ford's secretary, as saying he was "trying to deliver" the Muscle Shoals project to Ford—which Mr. Coolidge has specifically denied. Norris then said some very nasty things about the Chief Executive.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE vetoed the Bursum bill increasing the pensions of veterans and widows of the Civil war, on the ground of economy, but it is asserted it will be repassed by both houses. Secretary Mellon is said to have recommended that the President veto the soldiers' bonus measure.

SENATOR COUZENS and Governor Pinchot gained a big point in their fight on Secretary Mellon when the senate passed the Jones resolution empowering its committee to go ahead with paid counsel in the investigation of Mellon and the bureau of internal revenue. Presumably Francis J. Heney will get the job, and the inquiry will be broadened to include the conduct of the bureau in prohibition enforcement.

Operations of the Department of Justice in connection with liquor cases in Chicago were detailed to the Daugherty committee. These included the notorious Grommes & Ullrich liquor "split" and more about the conviction and pardon of Grossman. Former Judge Landis had testified vigorously concerning the Grossman matter, and last week C. W. Middlekauff, assistant attorney general, appeared before the committee and said Landis had told lies. This may develop interestingly later.

CALIFORNIA Republicans in their primary election deserted Hiram Johnson and gave their preference to Coolidge by a majority of something like 50,000. Johnson bore up under the blow bravely, declaring the result was not a tragedy. In the Democratic primaries McAdoo ran against an uninstructed slate and won an impressive victory.

Indiana Republicans also decided for Coolidge as against Johnson by a huge majority. The chief interest there was in the race of Ed Jackson for the gubernatorial nomination. He was backed by the Ku Klux Klan and obtained a clear majority over all his five opponents combined. The Democrats were solid for Ralston, and Dr. Carleton McCulloch was in the lead for the gubernatorial nomination.

Mr. Coolidge has now defeated Senator Johnson in all the direct primary states except South Dakota, and veteran politicians believe the Californian is eliminated for all time as a Presidential possibility. The President and his close advisers are now formulating a platform for presentation to the Cleveland convention, devoting themselves at present especially to planks dealing with international matters. According to one veracious correspondent the tentative program embodies these features:

1. The United States shall join the World court if it is divorced from the League of Nations.
2. The court shall be maintained in connection with The Hague tribunal, as originally advocated by the United States.
3. An international conference on land and further naval armament limitation shall be called by President Coolidge, contingent upon the acceptance of the Dawes reparations settlement by the European powers.

Senator Lodge, in a resolution introduced in the senate, has proposed that the President be asked to call a third Hague conference of all nations for the purpose of divorcing the world court from the League of Nations, and that the United States join the court on that condition.

NEARLY a dozen political parties or groups were active in the recent elections in Germany, and the results are that in the next reichstag certain groups favoring the acceptance of the Dawes committee report probably will be able to combine and control the vote of that body. Their majority, however, will not be large, and unless some of the groups change their views, the necessary two-thirds vote cannot be mustered for a change of the constitution so that the Dawes railroad plan can be accepted. The Nationalists claim 105 seats in the reichstag, making them the largest single party, and they assert the government of Chancellor Marx must resign and the chancellorship must be given a Nationalist. The Communists will play a big part in German politics, for they polled almost four million votes and have 60 members in the reichstag. They have revived their threat of a Red revolution and already have incited numerous strikes, both in the Ruhr and in unoccupied Germany. The Nationalists are said to be combining with the People's party and with some of the Catholics, Fascists and Bavarian People's party members to form a monarchist bloc with a total of 234 votes, which is a majority. It is believed this bloc will gradually work toward a restoration of the monarchy. Its success depends on the stand taken by the Catholics, who may prefer a coalition with the Socialists.

GERMAN police not long ago raided the Berlin office of the soviet Russian commercial delegation in search for some suspect, and seized a lot of documents. Russia protested strongly against what it asserted was a violation of her extraterritorial rights and demanded satisfaction, which Berlin refused to grant. All trade relations between the two countries were suspended and Krestinsky, soviet ambassador, was summoned to Moscow.

As was predicted some time ago, the negotiations in London between the British and Russian government are not getting along well. The soviet delegates presented an extraordinary list of damage claims to offset the old debts to the British. If allowed, they would leave Britain largely in the debt of Russia. But there is no chance that the English will allow them.

ARGENTINA'S extraordinary old age pension law will be enforced with great difficulty. Both employers and workers are fighting it and last week there was a combined strike and lockout throughout the country. The workers refuse to pay their part of the pension fund, and the employers refuse to collect from their employees. However, the government is determined and the opposition is gradually weakening, and the federation of labor ordered the strike discontinued.

COAST guard cutters, trappers, fishermen and Indians are continuing the search for Major Martin and Sergeant Harvey, the lost aviators of the army's globe-circling squadron, and an offer of reward has spurred the Aleutian islanders to renewed effort. Various reports indicated that the missing plane flew to the north coast of the islands. The other three planes of the squadron proceeded to Atka island and were awaiting favorable weather for the flight to Attu island and thence to Japan.

THE general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in Springfield, Mass., by a vote of 802 to 13, accepted in full the plan of unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The union cannot be formally consummated for two years, but apparently the breach which has existed since 1844 is now healed. The bishops of the Church South will vote for the unification and the question will then be submitted to all annual conferences of both church organizations.

PEACE in Honduras was seemingly assured when on Monday the warring factions and representatives of the other Central American governments signed a treaty on board a United States cruiser. A temporary president of Honduras was selected pending new elections.

Opens Up Question as to Britain's Position

London.—The Irish Free State's representative in Washington, when appointed, will have the title minister plenipotentiary, but not envoy extraordinary, according to the Daily Telegraph's political correspondent, who says the scope of his activities will be limited to economic and financial questions. Prof. Timothy A. Smiddy is being considered for appointment to the post.

The imperial government, in acceding to the Free State's request for such a representative, was influenced by former Premier Lloyd George's agreeemnt to appoint a Canadian minister in Washington, the correspondent adds, but the international status of the autonomous dominions to which the Free State now belongs is virtually difficult to define, since their participation in the League of Nations as very independent units has obscured the position.

The writer points out that when appointment of the Canadian representative was approved it was agreed that he should remain in permanent contact with the British embassy, but no suggestion is made as to what status the Free State minister will have in this respect. If it becomes a practice for the dominions to appoint their own representatives abroad with the right of negotiating directly with foreign states, the whole question of the position and right of the imperial government and its relations to the dominions must be clearly reconsidered

Explains High Farm Cost

This sub-committee recently reported back to the general committee. Their report, which comprised more than a score of typewritten pages, explains why the use of electricity on the farm is bound to be more expensive than in the city and recommends that the rates for farms be the regular rates of the adjacent and supplying city town, plus the cost of the transformer loss and an additional service charge of 10 per cent of the cost of the extension, erection of the poles, wire, etc.

The report declares that "this business, being new and of a different class, must support itself and be nondiscriminatory." It continues:

"The cost of rendering service to the rural consumers is greater than the cost of rendering the same kind and amount of electric service to the urban consumer. This excess cost is almost entirely due to the fact that the distance between adjacent rural consumers is greater than that between adjacent urban consumers. This requires a greater number of poles and a greater amount of wire per rural consumer, resulting in a greater investment per consumer, and in addition the condition of the roads at certain times of the year causes a higher maintenance expense than is incurred per urban consumer.

Expensive Power Losscs

"Every transformer connected to the lines causes a continuous loss of energy, known as transformer core loss, which continues whether or not energy is being used by the consumer. On rural lines the distance between consumers is usually so great as to require an individual transformer for each consumer, while in urban communities 40 or more consumers may be served from one transformer. Because of this and the further fact that the small transformer used for individual consumers on the rural lines is less efficient than the larger size used in the urban communities, the transformer core loss per rural consumer is about ten times that of theurban consumer."

The Michigan State Farm Bureau was representated at the recent hearing by Mr. M. L. Noon, its president, and by Stanley Powell, ass't secretary and legislative representative. Grange leaders present were A. B. Cook, Master. Mrs. Dora Stockman, Lecturer, and Miss Jennie Buell, secretary.

In the meantime, the pro liquor press has heralded far an wide the admiral's reported declaration, and little attention is paid by the press to the explanation.

In an article in the country gentleman, A. B. MacDonald, who has made it his business to run down reports about illegal liquor selling and drinking under prohibition, says that on one occasion the editor of a country paper in Minnesota said to him, "The farmers around here are all making moonshine. They peddle it about the town as they would milk". "Come on now," said Mr. Ma Donald," lets get down to brass tacks on that", and before he was through, the editor had to admit that he did not know of a single farmer who was making it. "I have just heard so much of that talk that I believe it was so," he was fair enough to admit.

Cross qnestioning may not be the pleasantest of convesational accomplishments, but it is justified in these days when unfounded assertions about prohibition are being made. The next time any one insists that drunkenness in your community is greater than before prohibition, make him prove it by naming individual cases, giving the place and date, and then force him to a comparison with the occurences of similar character before prohibition. In nine cases out of ten the individual who is speaking without knowing the facts will close the conversation with an apology for his carelessness of sneech. In any event, he will exercise greater caution the next time he discusses the subject.

Seek Electricity For Mich. Farms

While between 4,000 and 5,000 of the 190,000 farms in Michigan already have some system of electrical light and power, there are thousands of farm homes where such service is desired when the proper arrangements can be made with the power companies.

To meet this situation a committee was formed some months ago composed of representatives of the Grange and the Farm Bureau and the commercial interests producing electricity which might be used for light and power on the farms. A sub-committee on rural extensions was appointed and set to the task of making a thorough study of the situation. Its duty was to recommend what general plans and policies should be established to regulate the furnishing of electrical energy to rural communities.

We Confess We Don't Like the Signs

Evidently the leading army men and others in a position to know whereof they speak are seeing the hand-writing on the wall and reading it with an unmistakeable accuracy. We hope this will not prove fatally correct, but the substance is far from pleasant to contemplate.

Chaplain W. W. Edel af the U. S. N., in speaking before the great Methodist gathering in Springfield, Mass., made some deductions which are startling if you should stop to consider them. He especially urged all good, bad or indifferent Methodist members to stand by the army and navy, and he pushed it right at them in the barbed style; underneath the surface there is a still current which seems to murmur that the Methodists, Congregationalists, Baptists, Presbyterians Universalists, Episcopalians, Advents and every other Protestant denomination will be needing to stand by this great mailed fist of the government ere many seasons have flown. Right here let us remark that a real red-blooded Methodist chaplain is a rara avis. Not because the Methodist boys are not in the ranks. Oh no! the appointment in 85 cases of 100 usually goes to a Catholic! Another index finger which points toward Washington.

But we understand that the good Catholic brothers all over this land and within 40 miles of North Adams make menacing statements as to what they intend to do if their plans are interfered with. We used to hear a lot a few years ago concerning the sly demeanor and privacy of the Catholic institutions; we heard they built those thick stone walls for a purpose and we thought it all bunk. But how bunky is it? Is there a good Protestant who has ever seen the inside of those dark vaulted basements under Catholic churches and seminaries and knows their import? Thsre is not. Can you inform us just how these great iron doors became a part of the system and why?

Why those ponderous locks and hinges? We want to warble a few notes to the class of ultra-fashionable rakes (not Catholics) who consider it quite proper to have sheir son's and daughter's education polished off in a Catholic seminary. We should like to ask them if that idea is patriotic and if it is American. Do they feel it is doing a duty of good citizenship to the country? Is it not a slap in the face of our public school system?

The Hon. Knights of Columbus are still on the job making this country safe for Catholicism. At the time of the Parochial Amendment scare the Advocate came out with strong articles favoring the amendment and we got a real knife thrust from the Knights in the shape of an auto load who drove over from Adrian to see about the Pope"s business. They wanted to know why we thus abused the followers of Rome!

Some devout Klansmen have accused us of lukewarmness probably down in the lodge room of their hearts and have guessed we didn't know the gravity of the situation and what the church of Rome would like to establish, but we do. There is a class of "Jingoists" who are always crying something dolorous. We believe they are perfectly right in everything except the date.

The man who has been prophesying the world's end for the last 20 years at least once each year has nothing on them. But we confess we don't like the Handwriting on the Wall. The bottom of the Ku-Klux is somewhere grounded deeper than just a lodge for a little diversion. Something or somebody has come out of the Pope's private council which sounds the alarm, and by the way men and women are flocking to the standard all over this state and in adjoining states a crisis is approaching. W don't claim to know when this crisis is due whether in 5 or 95 years but its coming. And we would not wonder if the "Jingos" had brought it on by ballyhooing too loud.

Recommend Soy Beans

Soy Beans are being recognized as one of the best "short season" hay crops available for Michigan farmers, specialists at the Agricultural College recommending them to those who must plant this spring and secure a satisfactory crop soon.

"An instance where Soy Beans are one of the best crops the farmer can plant," says the extension specialist at the College. "In cases where clover seedlings have failed to come through the winter Soy beans fit in splendidly."

Planted at or just after corn planting time soy beans will yield a good crop of high protein hay, comparable to alfalfa for feeding value. If the land is reasonably free from weeds a more satisfactory crop will be secured by drilling the seed in 28-inch rows, using about 35 pounds of seed per acre and giving the crop the same cultivation you would give navy beans.

Soy beans under good conditions will give one and one-half to two tons of hay per acre. They are ripe to cut for hay when the pods are nicely formed and the first lower leaves begin to brown.

"Of the most desirable varieties for forage purposes, tests at the Michigan Agricultural College show that the Manchu variety is in the lead. Many local elevators and Michigan Seed companies and the Seed Department of the Michigan State Farm Bureau have Manchu Soy Bean seed for sale.

Leghorns Lead State in Egg Production

The half-way point in this year's International Egg Laying Contest at the Michigan Agricultural College finds White Leghorns well in the lead among the different breeds, and Michigan pens topping the competition in all breeds. W. C. Eckard of Paw Paw, VanBuren county agent, holds high honors among all entrants for the first half of the year. Eckard not only has the high pen in the contest, Leghorns with a total of 1282 eggs for the six months, but he also has the second high pen, another group of ten Leghorns with a production mark of 1180 eggs for the same period. L. F. Heasely of Dorr, Michigan, owns the third place pen. His Leghorns have a mark of 1173 eggs, only 7 behind Eckard's second placers.

High pen among the White Wyandottes is entered by the Evergreen Poultry Farm at Greenville (1042 eggs in 6 months) The Milan Hatchery of Milan, stands first in Rhode Island Reds (1018 eggs for ten birds in the six months period.) J. N. Sheap of Owosso, tops the rocks. C. M. Beckwith of Ortonville is first in Anconas and Lindsley Brothers of Saline lead in miscellaneous breeds. There are 100 pens of 10 birds each in the International Test which is now in its second year. Total production for the first half of this year exceeds first year's record by more than 3,000 eggs.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said courty house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vandue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon; and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

SEE PROSPECT OF LOW EXPENSE FOR ELECTRIC POWER ON FARMS

Investigation in Many States of Theory That Use of Electricity in Every Possible Farming Function Will Reduce Cost for All Farmers.

Electricity for all the farms of the nation, by means of transmission lines to be extended from existing electric power systems, supplied by the big generating stations of the approaching super-power age, is the ambitious proposal put forward by several co-operating agencies which are making an investigation of the application of electricity to agriculture in its economic aspects. Already it has been declared that electric power service to farms can be put on a par with such service to city dwellers, so far as expense is concerned, if farmers use it for as many operations on the farm as possible, instead of merely having electric lights or electric fans, and stopping there.

Electric Lights on Farm Not Enough

This point has been emphasized with the utmost earnestness by those seeking to make electric energy available for the farms of America through the transmission lines of the power companies. The interested agencies are several. They include the National Electric Light Association, the United States Department of Agriculture, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, professors of prominent universities and conspicuous manufacturers of farm implements.

What Makes the Cost Greater

Statements as to the general purpose and scope of the study undertaken by these interests have been made recently by Dr. G. E. Neff of Wisconsin University, chairman of a joint committee on the relation of electricity to agriculture, and by Merlin H. Aylesworth of New York, managing director of the National Electric Light Association. They have discussed particularly the factors which make it difficult to furnish the farmer with electric energy as cheaply as it can be provided for the city and town user.

"One mile of city distribution line ordinarily serves from thirty to one hundred customers," said Dr. Neff. "But one mile of distribution line in farming districts usually serves only three customers. It can be readily seen, therefore, that a power company can serve city customers more cheaply than rural customers.

"But if farmers can use electricity for every possible farming purpose it seems likely that rural rates can be made so cheap that no farmer can afford to be without electric service, and every farmer can afford to have it. It is to prove or disprove this fact that the present investigation is being made."

To Put Theory to Test

This theory of securing electric service for farmers on a reasonable cost basis by electrifying the entire farm at the outset has many supporters. They are seeking, by the survey now proposed, to take the proposition out of the realm of theory and to establish it as a fact.

If their theory is upheld then it will be demonstrated that by applying electric energy to all farm operations in which electricity can be of service, and to all possible duties in the farm household, the use of electric current will be so great that the power company will find it profitable to make the rates low. Otherwise, as already stated, the number of customers per mile of transmission line is so small in the country, as compared to the city, that the expense, and hence the rates, are much greater.

Solution Rests With Farmer

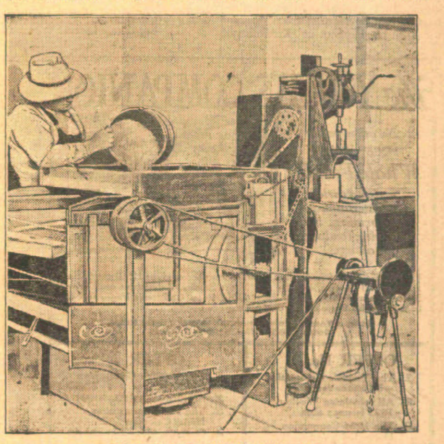
This puts the whole matter upon the shoulders of each individual farmer. Contrary to what the farmer might suppose, the more electricity he uses the cheaper he gets it—provided that every other farmer follows the same procedure. While it might cost every farmer in a given territory 25 cents a killowatt hour for electricity if each of them used the electricity merely for electric lights in the farmhouse and the barn (because of the expense of building and maintaining the transmission line with only three customers per mile, compared to ten times that number in the city) it might cost each farmer only 10 cents a killowatt hour if each of them used electricity, not only for lights, but also for washing machines, electric ironers, vacuum cleaners, water systems, wood cutting, ensilage cutting, thrashing, milking, feed grinding, churning, cream separating and any other farm work possible.

If this idea is found to be correct it will perhaps prove one of the biggest possibilities ever placed before the modern farmer. It will show a way out of the present dilemma—how to provide power line electric service on the farm at a cost which would make it economically justifiable to both farmer and power company.

Great Co-operative Enterprise

The co-operating interests making the present investigation propose to operate experimental rural transmission lines in about thirty states.

Assistance in developing new methods of using electricity on the farm and of improving present devices will be rendered this undertaking by research laboratories, such as that of the General Electric Company. This will aid in solving the main problem from another approach, if the fundamental principle set up by the theory described is found to be sound.



There Must Be Electric Power Also

SERMON BY RADIO WAS THEIR FIRST

"Down on the farm," to C. E. Brown, of Perry, Maine, means "down on the jumping-off place." He is located twelve miles from Eastport, Me., on the shore of a lake in a locality made very much isolated during the winter because of impassable roads, with snowshoes as the only means of travel for weeks at a time.

To that family, almost cut off from outside communication for part of the year, the voice of WGY, the radio station of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y., reaches regularly, taking profitable words and entertaining music. Voices and music come to their ears clearly and pleasantly, be the snows ever so deep, or the weather ever so stormy.

Thre are several children in the family, and on a recent Sunday night the younger children heard a sermon for the first time. It was a WGY church sermon. "Not that they are neglected," writes Mr. Brown, "but they have never been to church."

THE TIMID BORROWER

"I'd like to borrow $50 to buy a cow I saw yesterday," said a farmer to the cashier of a country bank.

The cashier hesitated. "No, I can't lend you $50 for a cow, but I'll let you have $100 or $125."

Astonishment was written all over the face of the man seeking funds. "Why, I can't afford to pay that amount for a cow. I'm rather hard up just now."

University Men Are Rough

As a sample of what the students at the University of Michigan will do when they go on the rampage it stands paramount that the faculty take some means to protect property on the grounds of the University. The spirit of funnism is carried to such an extent that these ruffians go out like a lot of drunken sailors and nothing is safe from their depredations. An item from Ann Arbor says; "Special precauton is being taken here this week by the buildings and grounds departments of the U of M to prevent either of the two underclasses from raising their colors on the campus flagpole, as has been the practice during the week of the underclass battles. The rope is always cut after class colors are pulled up, and an expense of more than $300 is entailed in removing the colors and replacing the rope, according to the department."

Western Normal

The summer school of Western State Normal at Kalamazoo, with which Hillsdale county is affiliated opens this year June 30 and continues until August 8, according to information just received here.

About 2,000 people attended the western normal summer session last year, iucluding 55 from Hillsdale county. The summer school is administered by a faculty of about 100 instructors, has its own athletics and special activities, including a seven day Redpath chautauqua, and has the advantages of the regular Normal buildings and equipment.

Special summer courses are offered and also courses toward degrees and life certificates. Catalogs are being mailed to all Hillsdale county high school graduates. Any information can be secured from Registar John C. Hoekje at Kalamazoo Normal or Mrs. Viola Moore, county school commissioner, at Hillsdale.

How Large Can Hailstones Be?

The Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture is frequently asked what is the maximum known or possible size of hailstones. According to its records and documents in the Weather Bureau library, the maximum possible size of a single hailstone can not be positively stated, but stones larger than a man's fist and weighing over a pound have several times been reported on good authority. During a hailstorm in Natal, on April 17, 1874, stones fell that weighed a pound and a half, and passed a corrugated iron roof as if it had been made of paper. Hailstones 14 inches in circumference fell in New South Wales, February 1847. At Cazorla Spain, on June 15, 1829, houses were crushed under blocks of ice, some of which are said to weighed four and a half pounds. In October, 1844 a hailstorm at Cette, France, wrecked houses and sank vessels.

Authentic reports of the finding of hailstones much larger than those above mentioned undoubtedly refer in all cases to masses of ice resulting from the coalescence, after falling, of a number of smaller hailstones closely packed together on the ground.

Roads! Who Pays For Them?

That the Nation needs good roads is admitted by all.

That the Government should build and maintain national highways, to which the States can and will build State trunk roads, they in turn to be fed by county and township roads, is agreed to by most students of the problem.

That they can not afford additional road taxes is contended by many farmers, already overburdened with expense and with prices of farm products below their proper levels.

What is not generally understood is that any campaign of national highway building must inevitably be paid for by the richest section of the country, by the localities where the greatest amount of tax money can be raised.

It is a fact that although national highways are built and paid for, very largely, by the northeast part of the United States and the large cities. yet 90 per cent of all the road traffic in the country will go over them. The farmer will pay about 10 per cent and industry and cities will pay the rest.

The most ardent advocates of national highways in the northeast sections of the land know this. It does not frighten them. They already pay the larger part of the Nation's bills. Why shouldn't they? If 100 people live in a small town and wish to build a quarter of mile road to a nearby lake, on the shore of which lives one man, do the hundred people stop because the one man will benefit 100 per cent and pay but 1 per cent? They do not. They build the road. The north eastern section of the country, the thickly populated, filled with factories localities, will benefit immeasureably from national highway They will benefit, because the farmer will benefit, and they are happy that he will benefit.

The farmers can not afford not to have national highways when they get 90 per cent of the good and pay but 10 per cent of the cost!

Roads Are For the Common Folks

It is apparent that the world was not made safe for democracy by waging war. It should be apparent that roads can not be made safe for pedestrians or motorists by waging war against the latter by prohibitive speed regulations or drastic police rulings.

The motor car and truck have come to stay. They have come to stay because they save time, make speed. Eliminate the speed and the time saving from motor cars and men would go back to horses.

If the speed and time saving ersult in maimings and killings; if accidents and injuries follow the use of trucks on highways, then some other remedy must be found that will destroy the very facts of these instruments of transportation which make them vital to our modern life.

The answer is plain; most people who have studied the question see it, and many acknowledge it. But it is not much talked about, because forsooth, the politician dreads to say anything which may be construed as advocating more taxes, spending more money. Had the politician of twenty years ago advised farmers to spend five hundred or a thousand dollars for a new "team" to save time, he would have been defeated for office.

But the answer must be made, and we, as a people, must see it, approve it, pay for it. The answer is wider roads; roads with high and low speed divisions; roads which can carry modern traffic!

Not all roads of course. But the main roads, the well-traveled roads connecting State with State, and county with county these, either now or later, must be made wide enough to carry the present and the future traffic safely, assure the pedestrian of his life and whole limbs, the motorists of freedom from accident, and traffc the possibility of making time without danger to anyone.

When the automobile was news people cried out against hard surface highway appropriations a "class legislation for speeders." Now the people know that hard surface highways are for them, first, for the "speeders" afterwards But we all want to make time, save time, go fast enough to get the benefit of our cars. Let us stop crying out against the added expense of the wide highway, which alone can make motor transport safe for us all!

The Old Days

When you and I were young Marguerite, men wore boots, let their whiskers grow and chewed tobacco like old folks; women wore long dresses and bustles and underclothes; butter sold for 10 cents and eggs could be had for less than the price of a hen; steak was 8 cents and liver was free for the asking, and most of us asked; a work day was ten hours and the hired girl got $2 without a limousine; if you complained of a pain on the right side, south of the meridian, you were told to go soak your head and eventually died full of days and appendixes, and the monkeys roamed unafraid; men voted straight; boys took girls buggy riding and often attained a speed of eight miles an hour, but did their sparking in the parlor before 10 o'clock.

Thoughts Are Like Trees

A good many years ago God, dispenser of all good things on earth caused the seed of a Redwood tree to be planted near Portland, Oregon. Recently this tree, grown to full manhood, was felled. When finally hauled away from a sawmill it was found that this tree had yielded enough lumber to build fifty ordinary five room bungalows. Allowing but four people to the family, this one tree alone has proved itself capable of providing shelter for 200 human beings. Thoughts, those little seeds that God sometimes plants in minds of his children, often prove a haven of shelter to millions of people. But, perhaps like the great Redwood, each thought must be beaten against by the storms and tempests of life and its erring conventions, with the thinker struck down by the stern and often uncombatable realities of life before real value of it is applied to civilization.

The Woodpecker

The woodpeckers are a band of foresters most of whom spend their lives saving trees. Many of them do their work hidden in the dark forests, but the red-heads we know so well hunt largely in plain sight of passers-by. When they are present they make themselves known, for they are as noisy as they are consoicuous.

Watch one of these handsome red headed birds. Down he drops to pick up ant or a grasshopper from the ground; then up he shoots to catch a wasp or beetle in the air.

If, in his appreciation of the good things that mankind offers, the redhead on rare occasions takes a bit more of cultivated fruit or berries than his rightful share, his attention should be diverted by planting some of favorite wild fruit, such as mulberry, elderberry, choke cherry, etc.

In judging what is a bird's fair share of a man's crops many things should be considered. Food is bought for the canary and other pets; your flowers cost something, too. But without birds what would your country be? Before raising his hand against a bird, a man should think of many things. For a man who is unfair to a bird is unfair to himself

When spring is over these birds hunt an old dead tree for their castle in the air, and start in to hew out a pocket in the trunk. The nest is lined with soft sawdust and chips obtained by chiseling out the bottom which is to be their home. Both birds work, and from four to six glossy white eggs are laid in May.

The striking color makes the red heads good targets for hunters or human enemies and they need loyal defenders, wherever they live.

"O! there's a red headed woodpecker," the children cry out, when a loud tatoo beats on one of your trees in the spring. They are almost as well known by the children as the robin.

the ideal mouthwash

Zonite used simply as a mouthwash or gargle does three things.

(1) It destroys the breath odors arising from conditions in the mouth.

(2) It kills the germs responsible for pyorrhea and other gum diseases.

(3) It kills the germs that cause colds, sore-throat and more serious respiratory diseases.

Solomon and his young friend met John Adams on the street. The distinguished Massachusetts lawyer said to Jack when the greetings were over:

"Young man, your pen has been not writing, but making history."

"Does it mean war?" Jack queried.

Mr. Adams wiped his brow with his handkerchief and said: "People in our circumstances have seldom grown old or died in their beds."

"We ought to be getting ready," said Jack.

"And we are doing little but eat and drink and shout and bluster," Mr. Adams answered. "We are being entertained here with meats and curds and custards and jellies and tarts and floating islands and Madeira wine. It is for you to induce the people of Philadelphia to begin to save. We need to learn Franklin's philosophy of thrift."

Colonel Washington was a member of the Virginia delegation. Jack wrote that he was in uniform, blue coat and red waistcoat and breeches; that he was a big man standing very erect and about six feet, two inches in height; that his eyes were blue, his complexion light and rather florid, his face slightly pock-marked, his brown hair tinged with gray; that he had the largest hands, save those of Solomon Binkus, that he had ever seen. His letter contains these informing words:

"I never quite realized the full meaning of the word 'dignity' until I saw this man and heard his deep rich voice. There was a kind of magnificence in his manner and person when he said:

"'I will raise one thousand men toward the relief of Boston and subsist them at my own expense.'

"That was all he said and it was the most eloquent speech made in the convention. Thereafter, he was the central figure in that congress of trusted men. It is also evident that he will be the central figure on this side of the ocean when the storm breaks. Next day, he announced that he was, as yet, opposed to any definite move toward independence. So the delegates contented themselves with a declaration of rights opposing importations and especially slaves."

When the congress adjourned October twenty-sixth to meet again on the tenth of May, there was little hope of peace among those who had had a part in its proceedings.

Jack, who knew the conditions in England, knew also that war would come soon, and freely expressed his views.

Letters had come from Margaret giving him the welcome news that Lionel Clarke had recovered and announcing that her own little revolution had achieved success. She and her father would be taking ship for Boston in December. Jack had urged that she try to induce him to start at once, fearing that December would be too late, and so it fell out. When the news of the congress reached London, the king made new plans. He began to prepare for war. Sir Benjamin Hare, who was to be the first deputy of General Gage, was assigned to a brigade and immediately put his regiments in training for service overseas. He had spent six months in America and was supposed, in England, to have learned the art of bush fighting. Such was the easy optimism of the cheerful young minister of war, and his confreres, in the house of lords. After the arrival of the King William at Gravesend on the eighth of December, no English women went down to the sea in ships for a long time. Thereafter the water roads were thought to be only for fighting men. Jack's hope was that armed resistance would convince the British of their folly.

CHAPTER XIV

Adventures in the Service.

One day Jack received a letter from Doctor Franklin who had given up his fruitless work in London and returned to Philadelphia.

It said: "My work in England has been fruitless and I am done with it. I bring you much love from the fair lady of your choice. That, my young friend, is a better possession than houses and lands, for even the flames of war cannot destroy it. I have not seen, in all this life of mine, a dearer creature or a nobler passion. And I will tell you why it is dear to me, as well as to you. She is like the good people of England whose heart is with the colonies, but whose will is being baffled and oppressed. Let us hope it may not be for long. My good wishes for you involve the whole race whose blood is in my veins. The race has ever been like the patient ox, treading out the corn, whose leading trait is endurance.

"There is little light in the present outlook. You and Binkus will do well to come here. This, for a time, will be the center of our activities and you may be needed any moment."

Jack and Solomon went to Philadelphia soon after news of the battle of Lexington had reached Albany in the last days of April. They were among the cheering crowds that welcomed the delegates to the Second congress.

Colonel Washington, the only delegate in uniform, was the most impressive figure in the congress. He had come up with a coach and six horses from Virginia. The colonel used to say that even with six horses, one had a slow and rough journey in the mud and sand. His dignity and noble stature, the fame he had won in the Indian wars and his wisdom and modesty in council, had silenced opposition and opened his way. He was a man highly favored of Heaven. The people of Philadelphia felt the power of his personality. They seemed to regard him with affectionate awe. All eyes were on him when he walked around. Not even the magnificent Hancock or the eloquent Patrick Henry attracted so much attention. Yet he would stop in the street to speak to a child or to say a pleasant word to an old acquaintance as he did to Solomon.

That day in June when the beloved Virginian was chosen to be commander-in-chief of the American forces, Jack and Solomon dined with Franklin at his home. John Adams of Boston and John Brown, the great merchant of Providence, were his other guests. The distinguished men were discussing the choice of Colonel Washington.

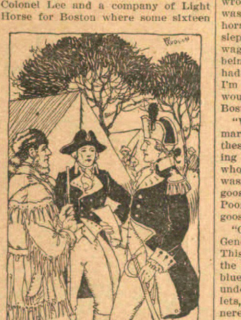
Doctor Franklin, who never failed to show some token of respect for every guest at his table, turned to Solomon and said:

"Major Binkus, you have been with him a good deal. What do you think of Colonel Washington?"

"I think he's a hull four hoss team an' the dog under the waggin," said Solomon.

John Adams often quoted these words of the scout and they became a saying in New England.

Washington set out in June with Colonel Lee and a company of Light Horse for Boston where some sixteen thousand men had assembled with their rifles and muskets to be organized into an army for the defense of Massachusetts.



ON THE TWENTIETH WE REPORTED TO GENERAL WASHINGTON

A little later Jack and Solomon followed with eight horses and two wagons loaded with barrels of gunpowder made under the direction of Benjamin Franklin and paid for with his money. A British fleet being in American waters, the overland route was chosen as the safer one. It was a slow and toilsome journey with here and there a touch of stern adventure. Crossing the pine barrens of New Jersey, they were held up by a band of Tory refugees and deprived of all the money in their pockets.

On the post road, beyond Horse Neck in Connecticut, they had a more serious adventure. They had been traveling with a crude map of each main road, showing the location of houses in the settled country where, at night, they could find shelter and hospitality. Owing to the peculiar character of their freight, the committee in Philadelphia had requested them to avoid inns and had caused these maps to be sent to them at post offices on the road indicating the homes of trusted patriots from twenty to thirty miles apart. About six o'clock in the evening of July twentieth, they reached the home of Israel Lockwood, three miles above Horse Neck. They had ridden through a storm which had shaken and smitten the earth with its thunderbolts, some of which had fallen near them. Mr. Lockwood directed them to leave their wagons on a large empty barn floor and asked them in to supper.

"If you'll bring suthin' out to us, I guess we better stay by her," said Solomon. "She might be nervous."

"Do you have to stay with this stuff all the while?" Lockwood asked.

"Night an' day," said Solomon. "Don't do to let 'er git lonesome. Today when the lightnin' were slappin' the ground on both sides o' me, I wanted to hop down an' run off in the bush a mile er so fer to see the kentry, but I jest had to set an' hope that she would hold her temper an' not go to slappin' back."

"She," as Solomon called the two loads, was a most exacting mistress. They never left her alone for a moment. While one was putting away the horses the other was on guard. They slept near her at night.

Israel Lockwood sat down for a visit with them when he brought their food. While they were eating, another terrific thunderstorm arrived. In the midst of it a bolt struck the barn and rent its roof open and set the top of the mow afire. Solomon jumped to the rear wheel of one of the wagons while Jack seized the tongue. In a second it was rolling down the barn bridge and away. The barn had filled with smoke and cinders but these dauntless men rolled out the second wagon.

Rain was falling. Solomon observed a wisp of smoke coming out from under the roof of this wagon. He jumped in and found a live cinder which had burned through the cover and fallen on one of the barrels. It was eating into the wood. Solomon tossed it out in the rain and smothered "the live spot." He examined the barrels and the wagon floor and was satisfied. In speaking of that incident next day he said to Jack:

"If I hadn't 'a' had purty good control o' my legs, I guess they'd 'a' run erway with me. I had to put the whip on 'em to git 'em to step in under that wagon roof—you hear to me."

While Solomon was engaged with this trying duty, Lockwood had led the horses out of the stable below and rescued the harness. A heavy shower was falling. The flames had burst through the roof and in spite of the rain, the structure was soon destroyed.

"The wind was favorable and we all stood watching the fire, safe but helpless to do anything for our host," Jack wrote in a letter. "Fortunately there was another house near and I took the horses to its barn for the night. We slept in a woodshed close to the wagons. We slipped out of trouble by being on hand when it started. If we had gone into the house for supper, I'm inclined to think that the British would not have been driven out of Boston.

"We passed many companies of marching riflemen. In front of one of these, the fife and drum corps playing behind him, was a young Tory, who had insulted the company, and was, therefore, made to carry a gray goose in his arms with this maxim of Poor Richard on his back: 'Not every goose has feathers on him.'

"On the twentieth we reported to General Washington in Cambridge. This was the first time I saw him in the uniform of a general. He wore a blue coat with buff facings and buff underdress, a small sword, rich epaulets, a black cockade in his three-cornered hat, and a blue sash under his coat. His hair was done up in a queue. He was in boots and spurs. He received us politely, directing a young officer to go with us to the powder house. There we saw a large number of barrels.

"'All full of sand,' the officer whispered. 'We keep 'em here to fool the enemy.'

"Not far from the powder house I overheard this little dialogue between a captain and a private:

"'Bill, go get a pail o' water,' said the captain.

"'I shan't do it. 'Tain't my turn,' the private answered."

The men and officers were under many kinds of shelter in the big camp. There were tents and marquees and rude structures built of boards and roughly hewn timber, and of stone and turf and brick and brush. Some had doors and windows wrought out of withes knit together in the fashion of a basket. There were handsome young men whose thighs had never felt the touch of steel; elderly men in faded, moth-eaten uniforms and wigs.

This great body of men which had come to besiege Boston was able to shoot and dig. That is about all they knew of the art of war. Training had begun in earnest. The sergeants were working with squads; Generals Lee and Ward and Green and Putnam and Sullivan with companies and regiments from daylight to dark.

Jack was particularly interested in Putnam—a short, rugged, fat, white-haired farmer from Connecticut, of bluff manners and nasal twang and of great animation for one of his years—he was then fifty-seven. He was often seen flying about the camp on a horse. The young man had read of the heroic exploits of this veteran of the Indian wars.

TAGGED FISH HOOKED THREE TIMES

Up to date the records of the recapture of 128 tagged fish have been received by the bureau of fisheries. Considering the vast area of the fishing grounds off the New England and Canadian coasts these returns are thought to be quite satisfactory.

Since the last week in October 15 tagged fish have been taken off the New Jersey coast, indicating that the codfish are migrating toward the South. It is expected that a comparatively large number of tagged fish will be caught in the vicinity of New Jersey during the coming winter and spring, and practically all pleasure fishing boats frequenting this locality have been notified to watch for tags.

While assembling the data at hand a matter of unusual interest was discovered in connection with codfish, tag No. 231. This fish was tagged June 28, 1923, on Nantucket Shoals, Mass. It was recaptured by the Halcyon on October 3, 1923, and again on October 15, 1923, in each case on Nantucket Shoals, where it was first tagged.

It must be considered a rare occurrence to catch the same fish three times on a fishing ground many square miles in area and at least 20 miles from land.—United States Fisheries Service Bulletin.

Diffused Concentration

An enthusiastic young admirer said to Arnold Bennett shortly after one of his more thoughtful books was published: "You have been a wonderful help to me, Mr. Bennett."

"Indeed! In what way, may I ask?"

"Oh, that last book of yours! It has taught me to concentrate."

"To concentrate? Well, well, that's nice. Now tell me, what are you concentrating on?"

"Oh, lots and lots of things," was the reply.—Boston Transcript.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best-- Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

His Alley

Moses Sampson had been arrested for helping himself, illegally, to a neighbor's chickens.

"Guilty or not guilty?" demanded the judge.

"Not guilty, suh!" answered the prisoner, promptly.

"Have you an alibi?"

"Al-al-says which, please, suh?"

"You heard me! Have you an alibi?"

"Oho! Yessah! Didn' onnerstan' yo' at fust. Yo' mean de alley by which Ah 'scaped wid dem chickens?"—Success.

Question of Royalty

There wasn't much royalty left to discuss, but the teacher thought it sufficient to warrant some explanation. So she told the children about the law of succession, and how the first born son always succeeded to the throne.

Suddenly a little fellow waved his hand. "Please, teacher," he asked, "if the first one happened to be twins, which one would be king?"—Indianapolis News.

Wanted Respect

The teacher was filling out monthly report cards and writing the names of the children's fathers. She turned to ten-year-old Mary first and asked, "Mary, isn't your father's name John?"

Mary gave teacher a cutting look. "Yes, it is," she admitted, "but I would rather you would call him Mr. Moore."—Indianapolis News.

To Cut Celluloid

Anyone who has tried to cut sheet celluloid knows that it is not as easy as it looks, says Popular Science Monthly. The best way is to make a deep scratch with a sharp scriber or the like, and part the celluloid by bending it sharply along the scratch. This trick is particularly useful when curved or irregular shapes must be cut.

PROFESSIONAL NURSE SAYS TANLAC HAS NO EQUAL

Mrs. J. Clark Says Tanlac Was More Than Match for Her Troubles.

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark, of 415 Walsworth Ave., Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Knew That Giraffe

In the old days an ambitious young assistant district attorney had called as a witness the town drunkard. He had been warned that this worthy was unreliable when in liquor, but nevertheless called him and proceeded with the examination.

"You know the defendant?"

"Yes, sir."

"You identify him as the man who struck the blow?"

"I do."

"How can you be so positive about him?"

"Well, I know him and I recognize the pink giraffe he is riding right now."

FOR THE PREVENTION OF SIMPLE GOITER

GOITER is caused by a deficiency of Iodine in the Thyroid Gland. A perfectly healthy Thyroid Gland contains, naturally, between 0.5 and 0.6 per cent of Iodine. When the supply falls below 0.1 per cent, thyroid enlargement begins.

Goiter is very prevalent in Michigan. Examinations of nearly 32,000 school children in four counties proved that 47.2 per cent of the boys and girls were goiterous. Medical authorities have taken steps to stamp out Goiter in this state. They urge the use of Iodine Salt. IT WILL PREVENT SIMPLE GOITER, beyond doubt or question.

We are co-operating in this public health service by offering Mulkey's Iodine Salt at a price within the reach of all. It contains the correct amount of Iodine, as determined by physicians who have made a special study of simple Goiter and its prevention.

Use Mulkey's Iodine Salt every day, just the same as regular Salt—for cooking as well as on the table. The Iodine does not affect the taste or seasoning quality.

Its A "Hot One"

We are in no way sponsors for the following sentiment which was handed us by a local Klansman and requested to publish. We can furnish his name upon request:

From the K. K. K. Radio

Tell us not in mournful numbers
 That the public school must go
With our lives we will protect it
 From its deadly Romish foe

Pagan creed is dead and rotten
 Died of too much Priest and Pope
Images and prayers to Mary,
 And other kinds of blinding dope.

Public schools and speech undaunted
 Is our destined end and way
And we'll live that each tomorrow
 Finds that both have come to stay

Popes and priests will have to answer
 For their deeds while on earth
And surely there'll be many curse the day that gave them birth

In this world they bleed their victims
 Hold a price on Heaven and hell
And the lustful greedy grafters
 Claim to pardon sins for one & all

To the Catholic church behold them
 How in servile hordes they come
They are like dumb driven cattle
 Bowing to a whisky-soaked bum

Lives of Priests remind us
 They could have lived better lives
And departing, leave behind them
 Widows who have been their wives

Widows who have been mothers
 Of their daughters and their sons
Instead of little bastords
 From the mothers who were nuns

Let us then put down these rascals
 Hiding 'neath the cloak of Rome
All their lustful filthy doings
 Rather than support a home.

Spray your plum trees as soon as the petals begin to fall, but not now as it will kill the bees.

Memorial Day Proclamation

"Our country, the proudest, the most mighty of Nations, sovereignity of righteousness. is again called upon to manifest its gratitude to the few remaining members of the Grand Army of the Republic, and to pay tribute to the memory of the fallen. Memorial Day was created in order that the deeds of sacrifice and devotion to freedom in the Civil War might forever live But time has brought a new and vast army of living and fallen heroes for us to honor. In deepest reverance we pay tribute to the few veterans of the Civil War still living. Soon the Grand Commander of All will issue His final order to these proud and faltering comrades of '61 and there will be no living Grand Army veteran to honor. May his memory always be sacred to us. The boys of yesterday who freed from tyranny a suppressed people and who extended righteous American rule to the other side of the world. are fast passing into another realm. Soon the ranks of the Spanish war veterans will be as thin as those of the Civil war. Let America never forget the glorious deeds and sacrifice of those fighting lads of yesterday. With flowers by land and sea, with every human token let us give honor, not only to the veterans of the Civil and Spanish war, but the young men of to-day who gave freedom to the world through battle on foreign soil.

Therefore, I. Alex. J. Groesbeck, Governor of Michigan, proclaim and urge a proper observance of Friday, May 30, 1924, as Memorial Day.

Mrs. Rickerd is leaving soon for Toledo, Ohio, for a visit of indefinite length.

Paul Stokes, formerly of Pittsford, now of Detroit, was arraigned in the Circuit Court Wednesday morning and pleaded not guilty to the charge of deserting his wife and two children, aged 2 years and 15 months last December, and failing to support them from that time to the present. He insisted that he had been injured and unable to work a part of the time and he wanted a chance to show that he could and would support his children if allowed to return to his work in Detroit. After conferring with the sheriff and prosecutor the court postponed the trial of his case until the October term, and he was released on furnishing bail for his appearance at that time. He agreed to send $10.00 a week to the county clerk for the support of the children.

Mrs. John W. Sheehan

Owing to the fact that Mrs. J. W. Sheehan had been a former minister's wife in this village and had many relatives here we are publishing her obituary as it appeared in the Michigan Christian Advocate April 30th. 1924:

"Carrie Adel Morehouse was the daughter of Philetus R. and Laura A. Morehouse of Jackson county, Michigan. She grew into a charming christian womanhood in her sainted father's home having in her early teens surrendered her heart and life to Jesus Christ. During all the years she daily exemplified the beauties of her Christian faith.

On the 12th of September 1889 she was married to Rev. John W. Sheehan. In the home her life was a most beautiful thing. Full of sunshine and abounding in cheer, her home immediately became a center out of which radiaed those rich christian graces that will make her memory blessed in this generation. Age and youth in every charge to which they were sent, found her home a real haven from the storms of life. If she had clouded days, they were eclipsed by an abounding spiritual life that overcame them. Her life has been singularly helpful.

She became the mother of four children: Mrs. Edna Hamilton of Madison, Wisconsin, Elna, (who died at 11 years of age) Ralph and William of Chicago. Devoted always to work of the Christian ministery, she felt that its first demands were at home, and among her own family, and as a result has left to society a rich legacy in three splendid children.

After many months of extreme suffering she quietly fell asleep on the 28th of March with her husband and children by her side

There are still left of this splendid Morehouse family one sister, Mrs. W. I. Elmer, wife of the pastor at Dowagiac, and one brother Newell J. Morehouse of Los Angeles, Calif.

The funeral services were conducted from the First Methodist church at Niles, Michigan, where Brother Sheehan is in the second year of a most helpful pastorate. A large concourse of friends attested to the esteem in which she was held by the good People of Niles.

The burial was in Hanover, Michigan, amid her family who have preceded. Her family, her church, and society feel a keen loss in her going, but heaven must abound in joy over her presence.

"COVER THEM OVER"

Thirty years ago the callow youth in our small country schools declaimed shiveringly from the rostrum on the last day of the term poetry found in the fifth reader such as "The Blue and the Gray" "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" and "Sheridan's Ride" with a feeling of funeral import realizing naught but the glory of war. Since that time two wars have saddened the nation, in both of which precious blood was lost and home-fires were made desolate by the absence of father, son or brother, that right principles should prevail, and we have to admit that most of the glamour and pomp has departed, leaving a hard knife-edge sorrow which human nature refuses to release.

However the glory and romance of the Rebellion of 1861-64 has never been dimmed by the reflection from any other conflict, and sixty years later we like to recall the deeds of Stone River, Chickamauga, Gettysburg and Farragut on the Mississippi. There is a picturesqueness which clusters around the localities and incidents of our own country, not possible on foreign soil.

May 30th the springing buds of nature's arboretum will perfume the air, happy songbirds will navigate the upper blue and the whole Universe will be in tune with the Infinite.

Several thousand more graves since last year will have to be decorated and the stars and stripes planted thereon. The old survivors of the struggle are fading like an autumn leaf—almost in a day they pass to the dust of Mother Earth. Men mostly in the eighties, they tread with faltering step while grand-sons and great-grand sons trip joyfully along thinking to cheer their ancestors with light some song and laughter. Soon there will be no more "old veterans" on this side of the Jordan; they will have answered the last "revielle" and folded their silent tents forever.

Until that day comes let it be the pious duty of every, man woan and child to halt all activities on the day set apart and hallow the cause for which they fought so that ever widening years will increase rather than deteriorate our respect. The World war men are meritorious—they did a work of magnitude—but on a different footing. They had all the inventions of modern science to deal with; they had the best of medical attention; they had the cheering influence of sisters, wives and sweethearts right on the front lines—and they are perfectly willing to rest their case a few years. The fact is, World war veterans do not care to rake up harrowing memories which is not a proof of disrespect, simply a desire to forget the barbarities of the Hindenburg Line, and we presume will be recognized as such by most liberals.

Chateau Thierry and Argonne are names associated with an awful hell-rending conflict, and it is no surprise these men want to forget—but the Blue and the Gray have passed into history, it is a matter that commands your attention.

Masonic Meeting at Addison

Quite a large delegation from this vicinity attended a meeting of Addison Lodge, F. & A. M. in response to an invitation on Tuesday evening, the occasion being initiatory work and a general get-together. Those who went report the Addison Lodge as royal entertainers. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Poincare's Downfall Makes for Settlement of the Troubles of Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PREMIER Poincare is out, or will be on June 1, because of the defeat of his national bloc in the French parliamentary elections. Some radical, possibly M. Herriott of Lyons, will form the new cabinet, and the policy of France toward the settlement of the reparations dispute with Germany will be so changed that definite solution of the problem seems in sight. That is, if the German factions that won dominance in the recent elections will adhere honestly to the Dawes plan. In that case the new French government will display a more conciliatory spirit toward Germany and may evacuate the Ruhr entirely.

In Germany the people's party, to which Chancellor Stresemann belongs, has formally indorsed the Dawes report and approved its acceptance. But it also agreed that the nationalists should name the new chancellor, on condition that the foreign office portfolio be given to a people's party man. The nationalists, together with the monarchists, oppose the Dawes plan. They, of course, rejoiced over the defeat of Poincare, but it may deprive them of their chief asset—the French occupation of the Ruhr. It is believed in Berlin that Herr Hergt will be the next chancellor.

The French chamber does not meet until June 3. President Millerand will then name the new premier, who may be Briand or Painleve, if Herriot is not selected. It is likely that Millerand himself will then resign. All those who have opposed Poincare's policies, including the British government, were happy over his downfall, but it is a source of anxiety for the small nations of central Europe that have been depending on French support. This is especially true of Rumania, which is in daily fear of war with Russia over Bessarabia. The French radical Socialists, who will have about 124 members in the new chamber, favor recognizing soviet Russia regardless of the latter's attitude concerning the French debt. This prospect is worrying Germany because of her break with Moscow over the raid on the Russian trade delegation's headquarters.

German monarchists and nationalists, led by General Ludendorff, held a great celebration of "German Day" in Halle and incidentally battled with the communists there, using tanks and cannon in storming the Red garrison. There were many casualties and the communists were utterly routed. Immediately after this occurrence there were reports that the former kaiser and his wife had left Holland for Silesia. This story was not confirmed.

Japan's government also was overthrown by the popular vote, the liberal opposition winning 277 of the 464 seats in the new house. Premier Kiyoura and his cabinet, however, will not quit office until after the state celebration early in June of Prince Regent Hirohito's wedding.

President Coolidge successfully negotiated one hurdle last week, but there were other and higher ones in front of him. His veto of the Bursum bill increasing the pensions of Civil war veterans and widows was sustained by the senate by a margin of just one vote. Voting to override the veto were 32 Republicans, 19 Democrats and two Farmer-Labor, while sustaining the veto were 12 Republicans and 12 Democrats. At first the veto was beaten, but Senator Harreld of Oklahoma changed from one side to the other and the day was saved for the President. Senator Bursum said he would immediately draft a new measure which he believed would pass at this session, the increases provided being smaller. The President's disapproval was based on economy.

Veto of the soldiers' bonus bill came Thursday, and it was predicted that both the senate and house would override it, though perhaps by narrow margins. The President in his message condemned the measure severely as against the interests of the whole people, and asserted that it would frustrate the tax relief that the country desires.

As for the immigration bill, with its Japanese exclusion provision, the intention of the President is not known at this writing. The leaders of both parties in the house were called to the White House for a conference in the hope that postponement of the exclusion might be arranged, although congress had rejected that arrangement.

Farm relief legislation is causing the Republicans considerable worry, for they fear that if some bill to help the farmers is not passed at this session the Northwest will be lost to them next November. The McNary-Haugen bill is the first on the list, but it is opposed by many members of both parties and by some members of the cabinet, though Secretary of Agriculture Wallace favors it. This measure provides for creation of a $200,000,000 export corporation and for elaborate machinery under which the domestic price of grain and other products of the farm would be raised artificially and maintained at a higher level than if the domestic price were dependent on world price for the exportable surplus.

Senator Wheeler of Montana, under indictment on the charge of having accepted money to appear before a government department, was "wholly exonerated" of the accusation by the senate committee appointed to investigate the case. The committee's report says Wheeler did not agree to appear before any government official in behalf of Golden Campbell, did not do so, and did not get paid for doing so. Senator Spencer alone dissented, bringing in a minority report finding that the Department of Justice was justified in having Mr. Wheeler indicted. In this connection it should be recorded that Attorney General Stone has abandoned the governmental spy system and announced that in the future the work of the bureau of investigation will be strictly in the line of aiding the lawyers of the department in preparing their cases. All the "dollar-a-year men", among whom were many notables, have been "fired."

Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky, tried in Covington on a charge of conspiracy in connection with liquor withdrawals, was found guilty, denied a new trial and sentenced to two years in prison. He announced that he would take an appeal and that he would not resign his seat in the house. Two of Langley's co-defendants pleaded guilty and a third was convicted, and all received the same sentence.

Judges Wilkerson and Carpenter of the Federal court in Chicago last Thursday ruled that President Coolidge's pardon of Philip Grossman of Chicago was void, and ordered United States Marshal Levy to seize Grossman at once and put him in the house of correction. This was a simple liquor selling case at first, and Grossman was sentenced to a year in the bridewell by Judge Landis for contempt of court. Politicians went to his aid and C. W. Middlekauf, the government prosecutor, recommended a pardon. The whole case received an airing before the senate committee investigating Harry Daugherty. Judges Wilkerson and Carpenter held that the President has no power to pardon in contempt cases, declaring: "Such extension of the executive power would deal a death blow to the power of the judiciary, and would make the executive branch the ultimate source of justice."

Senator Underwood's supporters for the Democratic presidential nomination are planning to carry the fight on the Ku Klux Klan to the floor of the national convention. Governor Brandon of Alabama, who is to make the speech putting Underwood before the convention, will introduce the subject, and if the resolutions committee does not adopt a satisfactory plank the Underwood men will present a minority report calling for a reaffirmation of the Democratic plank of 1856. This read:

"That the foundation of this Union of States having been laid in, and its prosperity, expansion and pre-eminent example in free government built upon, entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of persons in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birthplace."

Democrats who do not wish to antagonize the Klan in such strongholds as Indiana nor to lose the strength that such men as Al Smith might give their ticket have thought up a new combination. This is to nominate Ralston for the presidency; to persuade Senator Copeland of New York to resign and take second place on the ticket, and then to run Governor Smith for the senate.

George Brennan of Illinois, chief of the anti-McAdoo leaders, has challenged McAdoo to consent to the abrogation of the time-honored two-thirds rule, and McAdoo's manager has replied that if Brennan will make the proposal in the convention the Californian will not oppose it. So it may be the next Democratic nominee will be selected by a mere majority vote of the convention.

Major Martin and his mechanic, Sergeant Harvey, of the world circling squadron of aviators, are safe and on their way to the United States. Early in the week word was received from Martin that they were at Port Moller on the Alaska peninsula, having reached that place after a week's wandering across the snow. Their plane crashed against a mountain in the fog soon after they left Chignik and was totally wrecked. The other three planes have continued on the trip and Major Martin, still nominally in command of the expedition, will rejoin them probably in Europe for the completion of the flight.

Lieutenant D'Oisy, the French aviator who is flying around the world from west to east, has reached Indo-China, and Stuart MacLaren, the Englishman, is in India.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherin of Russia and Zinovieff, president of the third Internationale, should "get together." The former has declared repeatedly that the Russian government is refraining from propaganda in other countries, but the latter, in a statement of what the Communists have accomplished in the past year, makes these claims:

Russian money and propaganda and leadership are entirely responsible for the great Communist gains in Germany, where the Communist vote was increased sevenfold at the recent election. He says this is Moscow's biggest victory in years.

The soviets paved the way for a labor government in England. "Prime Minister MacDonald is a pure opportunist," adds M. Zinovieff, but labor maintains its step towards communism in England.

The Communist party claims vast gains in India and China, and is now one of the big parties in Japan, "thanks to the soviet government."

The naval oil commission named by the President has condemned the practice of exchanging oil for tank construction, as provided in the leases which Secretaries Denby and Fall made to Doheny and Sinclair. The commission says: "The oil that now remains under governmental control, or that can be brought under such control, must be treasured not for its market value, especially in these days of low prices, but for its emergency value at some future date.

"Considerable funds will be needed to provide adequate tankage, considerable more to purchase oil to fill those tanks, and still more funds to test and develop possible additional reserves. Without money the existing reserves can neither be adequately protected nor fully utilized.

"Whatever may be the outcome of litigation now pending, in the prosecution of which government agencies are co-operating, the commission bases its immediate recommendations for administrative action upon the broad principle of preserving for the navy as much as possible of the navy's oil reserve until the navy's need is most urgent."

Water Buffalo Slow, but Useful Beast of Burden

Of all the beasts of burden the world around none is slower than the water buffalo. Perhaps to a degree not quite realized he has set the speed of the civilization in which he lives. At all events he is in perfect tempo with the leisurely pace of the tropics. He plows the sticky rice lands, treads the thrashing floors, hauls the creaking two-wheeled carts, circles around the grinding mills or the water pumps with equal contempt for haste and indifference to persuasion from his drivers, says the Christian Science Monitor. Up and down the Nile his position is secure. In South Africa he is tolerated. India relies upon him. Burma, Malay states, Java, Borneo, Philippines and Indo-China are agriculturally mortgaged to him. South China respects him and Japan accepts him gingerly. You will see not a few of his ilk in Hawaii, but none in the United States itself.

The Spanish name, carabao, still clings to the water buffalo around the earth. Here and there he may display horns of a slightly differing shape and size; in some places his hide may show a trifle more hair than in others, but essentially he is the same ponderous, irascible, mud-loving stolid.

Hits Weak Spot First

Ike—When one gets sick it's usually some weak part of the body that's attacked first.

Mike—Why, certainly; that's why you're always having headaches.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Detroit—Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will conduct an annual poppy day campaign in memory of soldiers who died in service.

Kalamazoo—The Kalamazoo Association of Michigan Alumnae has announced the raising of $6,590 of its $15,000 quota for the $1,000,000 women's building at the University of Michigan.

Ruth—Albert Sajetski, 40 years old, was killed instantly when he fell 35 feet to the bottom of a dry well on his farm here, alighting on his head. He is believed to have been overcome by gas emitted from the well.

Lansing—The remains of Dr. W. J. Beal, professor at the Michigan agricultural college and at the time of his death the oldest living alumnus of the University of Michigan, has been laid to rest at Mt. Hope cemetery here.

Grand Rapids—The contract for the construction of the $700,000 exchange building of the Michigan Bell Telephone company here has been let. Excavation has begun, and the construction will consume more than 10 months.

Copemish—A lynamite cap with which he was playing, and not a shot fired from ambush, as he had declared, caused serious injuries to Louis Wold, 11 years old, son of Martin Wold, living northwest of Thompsonville.

Dertoit—After climbing to the roof of a four-story apartment house to retrieve a baseball which had lodged in the gutter, William S. Jordan, Jr., son of W. S Jordan, became dizzy and fell. He was instantly killed on the pavement.

Alpena—Walter Mistak, 7 years old, was drowned in Thunder Bay River. In company with other boys he was playing on the boom at Old Sorting Gap when he lost his balance and fell off the log. The body was found four hours later.

Grand Rapids—Invoking the mandates of a new ordinance, the city commission has denied applications of 16 aliens for pool room or soft drink licenses. The new regulation bars aliens from operating such places within the city.

Lansing—The liberal arts course at the Michigan Agricultural college is to be offered at the summer term from June 23 to August 1 for the first time. The announcement of the opening of a course leading to a bachelor of arts degree was first made several weeks ago.

Lansing—Lansing will have a third junior high school at the beginning of the fall term in 1925 according to an announcement of the board of education. The new school, to be named the Walter H. French junior high school in honor of Professor French who, before his death was connected with M. A. C.

Iron Mountain—This village, founded 32 years ago by M. Perron has been sold by him to Frank Martozek, Keisterville, Pa. Included in the sale are a hotel, store and several homes, including the house in which the Perron family have resided. The village covers about 15 acres, and is surrounded by prosperous and fertile farms.

Lansing—Michigan's highway department won the right to relocate M-16, the Grand River road between Detroit and Lansing when the state supreme court turned down a request of residents of Okemos, asking a writ to keep the road where it is. The highway department plans to locate the new road a half mile north, eliminating a dangerous curve.

Lansing—The State Prison Commission has recommended to the State Administrative Board the establishment of a plant for production of cheap bedroom furniture as a new industry at the State House of Correction at Marquette. The population there is now more than 500 men, it was said, and is steadily increasing. It may be necessary later to establish a stone crusher there to provide stone for highways.

Menominee—The population of the city of Menominee, as of May 1, 1924, is 11,006, according to a census just completed by a local newspaper. When the government census of 1920 gave Menominee a count of 8,907, a loss of 1,600 in the previous 10 years, the question arose as to the reliability of the federal figures, as the school census of that year and the 1920 presidential registration list indicated a larger population.

Albion—The death of Mrs. John G. Murray, brought the toll of deaths in an automobile accident at Homer to two. Mr. and Mrs. Murray, with their daughter, Doris, 15 years old, and son, Dell, 6 years old, were hit at the Hillsdale street crossing of the Air Line division of the Michigan Central railroad, by a lone switch engine, which was running backwards. The daughter, Doris, was killed instantly. A fractured skull caused the death of Mrs. Murray within a few hours. Mr. Murray has broken ribs and a bruised face, but will live.

Hillsdale—A squad of railroad detectives have been searching to find the person who placed a two-inch bolt on the track near Sandy Beach, Baw Beese Lake, where a Lake Shore train was wrecked. The bolt drove a deep groove nearly a foot long in the rail, derailing the engine which was hurled down a 12-foot embankment. W. E. Dietsche, fireman who was badly burned by escaping steam, was thrown 100 feet into the lake. He died in the city hospital. Fred Van Allen, engineer, was not injured, as was at first reported.

Owosso—The cornerstone of Owosso's new $95,000 city hall will be laid June 15. The city commission has invited the Owosso Lodge of Masons to take charge of the ceremonies.

Manistee—John Junge, cashier of the First National Bank here, discovered a dead woodpecker on a tree in front of his home. The bird had gotten his bill so far into the tree that he was unable to get it out, which caused his death.

Muskegon—Nixon A. Ryan, 65 years old, was found dead in a bath tub by his grandson. Mr. Ryan had complained of being exhausted at noon when other members of the family left for the day. He was apparently stricken while bathing.

Marquette—George Mitchell, of Cleveland, and Murdock McLeod, whose home is in Nova Scotia, members of the crew of the steamer Lewiston, which was loading pig iron here, fell 40 feet into the hold and were injured fatally, both dying a few hours later.

Kalamazoo — An armed bandit robbed Neil A. Snyder, a gasoline filling station agent here of $75. The robber escaped after locking Snyder in an anteroom of the station. It was the first hold-up here in two months and the first gasoline station robbery in a year.

Escanaba—A rain and sleet storm was blamed for an interurban collision which resulted in the death of Louis Rose, 56, city commissioner, and the serious injuries of seven others. Rose was crushed. Because of the rain a motorman on an extra car ran by a switch.

Mackinaw City—The new state auto ferry "St. Ignace" has begun her regular trips between Mackinaw and St. Ignace doing a good business right at the start of a service that was badly needed. Another ferry, the Mackinaw, will be added later giving hourly service across straits.

Detroit—Mrs. Marie Harrington, 44 years old, keeper of a rooming house stepped onto a narrow balcony on the third floor of her house to empty some refuse. The balcony crashed and Mrs. Harrington fell four stories, through a grating into a basement. At Receiving hospital physicians pronounced her only bruised.

Lansing—The supreme court ruled that the Detroit-Windsor Ferry company must make its corporation tax return on a division of indebtedness between Canadian and American holdings. The company sought to charge all its indebtedness against the Detroit holdings, thus avoiding payment of a heavier state tax.

Owosso—Recently this city was under the leadership of "Mayor" Robert Lewis and "Commissioners" John Cook and Theodore Friegel, Owosso High school students. Other High School boys filled all appointive offices, as part of the observance of boys week. The boys were elected and sworn in a day ahead of time.

Lansing—Twenty Latin - American countries with delegates inspecting North American highways have included Michigan in their tour. The delegation ends its tour here, the guests of Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and other state officials, who will show them the state's highways. Thirty-eight delegates are in the party.

Lansing—Two Lansing boys, Edward York and Virgil Jones, left here on horseback with the Pacific coast as their destination. They took enough money to pay their expenses to Iowa, and expect to work their way the remainder of the trip. The boys plan to make the trip by easy stages so as to allow their horses plenty of time to rest.

Saginaw—Another death was added to the grade crossing toll near Midland, in an accident in which George Yeakle, 21 years old, Midland, was killed instantly and five others injured. Yeakle's sister, Coy, 16 years old, died later and Hester Wolfley, 15 years old, and Carl Stickly, 21 years old, two other members of the automobile party hit by a Pere Marquette freight train were fatally injured.

Alpena—Consummation of the "Ford deal," for which Alpena had waited months, came when deeds embracing 1,480 acres of rich stone land on the north shore of Thunder bay were presented to Paul Wein, county register of deeds, to be recorded in the name of the Ford Motor company, title to them being transferred from Michael O'Brien of Alpena, their representative in the negotiations with the score or more individual owners.

Zeeland—John Mulder, 23 years old, and Joseph Van Klink, 21 years old, both of Holland, Mich., were killed instantly and the city thrown into darkness for an hour when an eastbound Michigan Railway interurban car hit an automobile in which they were riding. The impact of the car against the automobile threw the automobile against a power pole at the side of the track and tore down the service lines providing Zeeland with light.

Lansing—Announcement has been made that Basil Brewer, former publisher and part owner of the Omaha Bee, has purchased a substantial interest in the Lansing Capital News. George L. Hammell, who has been in the newspaper business for 15 years, has also purchased stock. Arthur L. Francis, one of the founders of the Lansing paper in 1921, remains as manager. Former Gov. Albert E. Sleeper is first vice-president and one of the principal stockholders. No changes in policy have been announced.

Lansing—A plea for a dismissal of the State petition for a receivership for the House of David colony corporation has been filed in the Berrien County courts by W. J. Barnard, cult attorney, according to information received by the Attorney-General's office here. The cult motion charges that the Attorney-General's action in asking a receivership amounts to usurpation and inclusion in matters relating only to the colony in which neither the State nor the public has actionable interest. The motion will be heard May 26.

The Money Standard

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt said in a brilliant after-dinner speech in New York:

"Too many women judge men by the money standard. The more he makes, they think, the better man he is.

"The money standard is a false one. I can prove it by a reductio-ad-absurdum story.

"A middle-aged woman at a race track said to her middle-aged husband bitterly:

"'Look at that horse, James! In three and a half minutes it has won more than you have done in a business career extending over 27 years.'"

Coolidge And Taxes

President Coolidge clearly recognizes the demand upon the part of people of the United States for lower taxes. Lower taxes can only come by reducing and keeping down the expenses of government. Every citizen will be benefitted by lower taxes, which will help reduce the cost of building homes and business places, the cost of rent, and make it easier to acquire a home or other real property. When the tax burden is reduced upon manufacturing corporations, then the product of such corporations can be sold at lower price, thus helping to reduce the cost of living. The war brought on an era of extravagant spending upon the part of the government and upon the part of individuals. The government has greatly reduced its expenses it has paid off something like four billions of the government debt, it is in a position to lower government taxes twenty five per cent unless some new legislation adds a tremenduous tax burden to the already overburdened people. This will not be done if the President has his way. New expenditures can be taken up when the debt is further reduced and the finances of the country are in position to bear the same. There are many foolish notions about taxes. Some people think if you put increased taxes upon one class of citizens or one class of business, the balance of the people will escape taxation. Ben Franklin said, "Goods will not sell for less than they cost." When the manufacturer has his taxes boosted, he puts the cost upon the product and thus the consumer pays the tax. There is only one source from which the government obtains money, either directly or indirectly and that is from the people. Because the tax is collected from some particular class is no sign that all the people do not pay it eventually. The only way they can get out of paying it is to reduce the amount of the tax. Lower taxes will benefit all the people. Stand by the president.

Evaporated Milk Association Formed

Representatives of almost all of the Evaporated Milk Manufacturers of the country recently met in Chicago and organized the Evaporated Milk Association. Mr. L. R. Hardenbergh of the Carnation Milk Products Company was elected Chairman; Mr. C. T. Lee of Nestles Food Company, Vice Chairman; Mr E. G. Annell, Oatman Condensed Milk Company, Treasurer. Other members of the Executive Committee are W. T. Nardin, Pet Milk Sales Corporation; C. S. Parsons, The Borden Company; H. C. Carr, Libby, McNeill & Libby; and J. F. Enz, Danish Pride Milk Products Company.

The Association will inaugurate a campaign of education directed to the housewives of America, featuring the wholesomeness of Evaporated Milk; and the economy of distributing a billion quarts of milk each year in tin cans.

It has taken more than thirty years of painstaking effort to bring this method of marketing milk to the present high state of perfection

The new, handy, sanitary tin can now in use, makes possible the distributing of milk of the best quality to millions of homes, combining purity with freshness and high quality with lowest possible cost.

Mr. Herbert C. Hooks, well known throughout the milk industry, and a member of the committee representing the industry in the Food Administration during the war, was selected to conduct the activities of the new Association.

Mr. Hooks has been active as a manufacturer of Evaporated Milk since 1906 when he became identified with the Hires Condensed Milk Company at Philadelphia. Having served in all the departments of a rapidly growing business, Mr. Hooks became General Manager in 1911 continuing until 1918 when the Hires Company combined with others to form Nestles Food Company, He recently resigned the treasurership of this company in order to administer the work of the Evaporated Milk Association.

Certified Potatoes Prove Their Worth

Production tests carried on in many counties of the state last year, comparing certified potatoes with the usual bin run stock, give the certified tubers a big yield margin over their common rivals. In Kalkaska county 13 farmers planted certified seed along with equal of the usual amounts of bin run seed in adjoining lots. The average of the 13 tests showed an increase of 27.4 bushels in favor of the certified stock.

In Allegan county similar tests gave the certified tubers a 25.8 bushels increase; while in Benzie county the increase ran 40 bushels to the acre in favor of the pedigreed stock. J. Weston who is a murphy specialist at the M. A.C. says: "These results were obtained without particular attention being given to the crop in the way of improved cultural methods or spraying. Many similar tests were carried on in Michigan and other states, and all reveal the greatly superior producing ability of good certified seed."

County agricultural agents have been lining up sources of certified seed for their growers, and a large acreage of blue ribbon stock will be planted in Hillsdale county this year.

Coolidge Has an Eye on The Indicator

It is heartrending to the erstwhile looters of the United States treasury to know that Calvin Coolidge is figuring to screw down the safety valve of public finance and sit on the lever. He is not the man they thought and hoped for at the beginning of the administration and they did not think there was a possibility of his ascending to presidential heights when he was nominated for vice presidency, else they would have put him out. Coolidge is showing the people of this nation what it means to manage a goverdment untrammeled and unafraid. God Almighty put Calvin Coolidge in that ;highoffice and nobody is going to question the Supreme Commander's orders so very much.

Congress has repeatedly put bills before Mr. Coolidge with the simple but forcible request "sign" but he does just what he wants to do regardless of orders from the chaps who make the laws and suppose they own the capitol and most everything that goes with it.

Coolidge's first Waterloo was the veto which he handed the Bursum Bill to pension old veterans and widows of the Civil war; his next cross was to put "nay" on the Bonus Bill so much touted about the capital and the whole country in general. By vetoing these measures honest Calvin has shown the politicians that this world is not wholly bossed by prestige and influence of money. There is no issue before the American nation today as important as the two just mentioned; one concerns the aged and infirm saviors of our Union in 1861, men who dared to do battle on southern fields that the United States might remain intact, the other the world war men who established the world's democracy on foreign soil. There is no cause more worthy, or men more deserving than either of these classes, but there is also another side to the question. The ground basis of this commonwealth, the farming contingent, was fast becoming bankrupt by high taxes—in fact the burden of taxation has attained such Golieth proportions the agricultural welfare is about done to death, farmers are letting their farms go back to the state, and something will have to be done right quick. While Congress did just as you could expect—a bunch of demagogues repudiated—yet the President's veto stands today as a real clean and wholesome summing up of a rotten situation. There is no other way than to simply cut expenses. Now that the U. S. Navy has been shaved down to normal; clerkships in Washington have been lopped off and we presume the White House menu even curtailed—there is no real reason why taxes won't get cheaper.

PROBATE ORDER

STATE OF MICHIGAN The Probate court for the county of Hillsdale. At a session of said court held at the Probate Office in the city of Hillsdale in said county on the 1st day of May, A. D. 1924.

M. A. C. To Have New President

Dr. K. L. Butterfield, president of the Massachusetts Agricultural College for the past 13 years, will take over the executive duties at the Michigan Agricultural College on Sept. 1, 1924, according to announcement made from Massachusetts last week and confirmed by the State Board of Agriculture.

Dr. Butterfield or "Ken" as he is effectionately termed by old friends in the state, is a native of Michigan and a graduate of the college to which he now comes as president. His father and grand father ahead of him, were leaders in Michigan agricultural affairs. Receiving his degree at M. A. C. in 1881 as an honor student in his class, Dr. Butterfield served for four years as editor of the Grange Visitor. In 1895 he became Supt. of the Farmers' Institutes in Michigan, organizing a state-wide system, aud serving at the same time as field agent for the Michigan Agricultural College. He left Michigan in 1903 to accept the presidency of the Rhode Island State College and since that time so many national and international honors have been accorded him that space will not permit their listing in a single article. His paragraph in "Who's Who in America" reads like the biography of the world citizen Dr. Butterfield is.

The presidency of the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1907, a post he has held continuously since for 18 years, Member of Theodore Roosevelt's Country Life Commission in 1908. appointed by President Wilson a member of the Commission on Rural Credits in 1913. Member of the Educational Corps commission American Expeditionary forces in France 1918-19: member China Educational commission 1921-22. president American Association of Agricultural colleges 1917; president American Country Life association since 1918; president World Agricultural Society since 1910; author of many articles and books on agricultural life problems are many of the high spots in the record of Dr. Butterfield's brilliant career as an educator and leader. Academic degrees held by Dr. Butterfield include B. S. Michigan Agricultural College in 1891; A. M. University of Michigan in 1902; L. L. D. Amherst College in 1910; L. L. D. Rhode Island College in 1921. Dr. R. S. Shaw dean of agriculture for 20 years almost has served as acting president since the resignation of David Friday one year ago.

Dr. Butterfield will be at the Agricultural College during Commencement week in June and at other times during the summer to acquaint himself with the present conditions at the college. His many years of work in all parts of the state as an editor and as an agricultural extension worker will give him a thorough knowledge of the state.

President Coolidge is taking steps to forward the Great Lakes St. Lawrence waterway. Michigan and the middle west are greatly interested in this project.

—The Advocate and Michigan Farmer both one year $2.15. This is the leading farm combination and you will find the two newsy.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 181 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said courty house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vandue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

WHY FINANCE FAVORS INCREASED FARM EXPERIMENT FACILITIES

American Bankers Association Indorses Purnell Bill Because It Believes What Is Good for Farming Is Good for the Country—Obsolete Farm Methods Doomed.

By D. H. OTIS, Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

D. H. Otis

If the agricultural colleges and experiment stations are to function effectively and give up-to-date, reliable information and aid in respect to farm problems, they must have sufficient funds to carry on adequate research and experimental work so as to discover practical ways to improve agriculture. The present Federal appropriation of only $30,000 a year to each of the experiment stations is deplorably inadequate to meet the pressing needs that are constantly coming before them.

The Purnell bill, which has been before Congress and will again be urged during the present session, provides for an increase of $15,000 in the national appropriation for each agricultural experiment station. It also provides for gradually increased appropriations until the total amount equals $85,000 annually for each institution. The American Bankers Association, through its Administrative Committee, has placed itself squarely on record as being in favor of this measure because it believes that what is thus fundamentally good for farming is good for the country.

What Farming Requires

Farming requires skill of no mean sort. A farmer is ever facing new conditions and must adjust his activities to cope with them. The problems of the soil, of crop production, live-stock breeding and feeding, and business management of the farm call for as high an order of brain power as any industry. The young man of today need not leave the farm for a career. There is abundant opportunity for the exercise of his best faculties in helping to develop a basic industry that affects the welfare of every human being.

In order to farm properly and economically, the farmer must be equipped with a high degree of technical skill. Farming by guesswork belongs to the past. No longer can he gauge his activities by the position and shape of the moon. Success demands the application of the best knowledge and experience available. New problems arise daily. New solutions must be found. Discoveries are being made that affect practical farm methods tremendously. Insect pests and plant diseases are constantly putting in their appearance and must be combated by the most effective methods. Competition makes that imperative.

Old Ways Do Not Pay

Land prices have been soaring. Following the Civil War, immense areas of fertile land were available almost for the asking. But today the most efficient land is all taken up, and the expansion of our agricultural production must come from either increased yields per acre or from farming the less efficient land. The higher the price of land the greater the overhead. What was profitable on cheap lands may be very unprofitable on high-priced land. To meet these changing conditions requires new stores of knowledge and new methods of applying knowledge.

Today many old methods of farming are inadequate and unprofitable. Time was when it may have been cheaper to let a horse or cow die rather than to go to the expense of calling a veterinarian. Today we must discover new methods of treating disease and saving our cows. We must also discover ways and means to prevent disease, to improve our feeding methods, and to avoid waste. We are living in an age of specialization, which means that we must produce more per unit.

ALL OF THIS REQUIRES KNOWLEDGE AND EXPERIENCE. THE TAX OF IGNORANCE IS THE LARGEST TAX THAT WE PAY, AND UNFORTUNATELY WE GET NOTHING IN RETURN FOR WHAT WE PAY IN THIS WAY.

The Experiment Stations

The agricultural experiment stations have done a great work not only for the farmer but for the community and the country as a whole. They have developed improved methods of breeding and feeding and of selection. They have saved farmers of the country millions of dollars by discovering the best methods of applying fertilizers, by determining conditions under which new and valuable crops can be successfully grown, by studying crop rotation and the utilization of by-products, and by developing mechanical devices that save labor and increase efficiency.

TEAMWORK

Much as the experiment stations have done, research work is still in its infancy. There are still greater problems awaiting solution. We must delve deeper, we must push further into the unknown, we must devise systems of farming that are more profitable than the ones we are now using. The experiment stations must have increasing financial support to achieve these ends.

USES HIS RADIO SET TO GET MARKET TIPS

Farmer in Ohio Realizes Tidy Profit by Picking Up Wireless Market News Out of the Air.

Most radio fans find that their radio sets pay dividends in entertainment and instruction, but the farmer who tunes in WGY and other stations sending out produce market reports is in a preferred position. The farmer on occasion may turn radio market information into cash and make such information pay him dividends on his set. One such farmer is reported by F. R. Cozzens of Roxbury, O., in the Southern Ruralist recently:

In Genial Touch With the World and Its Markets.

S. E. D. Service

John Weldon, a farmer of my vicinity, recently got a tip from the air which yielded him $19.60. The "tip" was an unexpected rise in the live stock market, coming at a time when Weldon was preparing to sell a shipment of hogs to a local buyer.

As a result he got in touch with the city market, and $19.60 was his profit over the local buyer's quotations after all shipping expenses were paid.

This was not a streak of luck, however, for Weldon gets such tips frequently, and they are a part of his plan for making his radio pay its way.

Keeps Market Ledger by Air

"When I installed my outfit in 1922 I determined to get something from the air besides music," Weldon told me recently. "I could receive reports from two large city markets and a number of smaller ones, and to keep tab on these I bought a ledger.

"At the top of each blank page I wrote down the city where the market was located and names of the principal dealers therein with their addresses. This book is kept on the table where the radio is located, and when I have something to market I get in touch with one of these cities and write down quotations as I receive them. Then I 'tune-in' for another city and get their prices. Afterward I go over these reports and compare them.

"It is a simple matter then to estimate distance, shipping cost, and so forth, and from this I can select my market.

"Dealers in these cities are aware of my method, and I have made arrangements with them by letter to accommodate my shipments at any time. This not only applies to live stock, but to poultry, eggs and butter. The latter articles are shipped by parcel post the morning after the quotations are received.

Range of Markets Increased

"I have a wide range of markets to select from, where formerly I was compelled to depend upon a local buyer's quotations or those in the newspaper, which were always two days late.

"And the radio offers another advantage: By getting weather reports and crop conditions from different parts of the country I can guess pretty accurately the trend of the market.

"From the news reports I learn beforehand about railroad strikes, freight tie-ups, grain pools and many other conditions which are likely to affect the price of products grown upon my farm. I have a ledger filled with information of this sort, and it has become a habit with me to keep it open for new 'tips' whenever an evening's program is broadcast.

"It is not difficult to make a radio pay dividends when rightly handled, and scarcely a week passes without my outfit yielding me something of value."

To Raise $12,000,000

An analysis of receipts from the Federal income tax in Michigan indicates that the proposed state income tax would yield at least $12,000,000 revenue per year, which it is definitely provided would be deducted from the amount of general property tax for state purposes. Backers of the income tax state that this will not be an added burden to the Michigan tax payers, but will give real, definite relief to over burdened real estate in that it will shift a considerable portion of the cost of maintaining the state government off from general property and distribute it upon men who are receiving relatively large incomes from salaries or investments.

It is also pointed out that a personal income tax is about the only form of taxation which cannot be readily passed on and the burden shifted from the big fellow down to the ultimate consumer. A personnal income tax coming due after the year's business is all completed and the books balanced, must be paid by the individual who has received the net income.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Girl Of Today

In many parts of the country today much prominence is given by the press to the sexual immorality of our young people. It is claimed that standards have broken down. Marriage is now under attack; intelligent women are demanding freedom and self-expression which they find doubtful in marriage. We are told that in the high schools attended by boys and girls it is a common occurence every year for some of the girls to become pregnant; that unchaperoned parties are the rule and much of the automobile riding is attended with evil results; that it is the fashion to indulge in objectionable dancing, extreme dress or the lack of enough dress; that loose mingling of the young people who resent dictation is to be found in most places, and that our young people are setting standards which are most unfortunate for themselves and the communities. We are told that the young people of today are fast, wild and extravagant; that parents, the war, and the free use of motor cars are to blame for these conditions.

Into this chaos the young girl comes seeking —what? Life, beauty opportunities for work and play and companionship. Whatever the causes for the conditions, she is not responsible for them. She hears on all sides that the modern girl is restless, that she craves new forms of diversions and fresh excitement, that she is rebellious to discipline, and is not willing to accept what she considers the stupid restraint of convention. It has been said of her;

She desires the unusual and expensive, is irreverent and gloriously slangy, she represents the feminized spirit of the times epitomizing all the sense of disquiet, all the craze for new sensations, all the madness for reckless expenditure of energy and money and nerve force which have marked mankind these last few crowded, tragic years.

But we were told by our parents much the same thing. Writers for generations have deplored the restlessness of women. Let us keep on being restless and dissatisfied with the present conditions until men and women working together make our communities safer and better for our young people.

Is it any wonder the young girl is bewildered and dazed? We cannot stop the hands of the clock; we cannot turn back even if we should so desire. How can we interpret life to our young girls and help them make adjustments? No longer are marriage and teaching the only avenues open to women, and for this we are thankful. One young voman who was in her third year in college said to me recently: "I do not want to marry; I am not fond of housework; I do not wish to marry unless I fail at everything else!" True, she may change her mind, let us hone she will, but she expressed a common attitude toward marriage on the part of many young girls.

It is as normal at forty to be complacent and accept standards as it is normal at twenty to be rebellious. At forty we have a better understanding of what is the reasonable and wise course of action. The young girl thinks her elders are narrow-minded and purtanical. At forty we know that the unwritten social laws have been found by experience to be useful in promoting the success of the home, the family and the happiness of the individual. Can we help our young people to see this? In order to do so we must have better understanding of youth. Perhaps the most fatal mistake is the unwarranted assumption that our boys and girls want to be like us. When they are twenty they do not want to be as we are at forty. The age of forty is an unthinkable one to twenty. The middle-age peroid is too remote to be of use as a model. How can we teach them the way to be more like us and better than we are when they reach middle age? How can we show them the necessary steps and make them desire to follow? We must recognize the gap between middle age and and youth and realize that the standards of middle age are not attractive to youth. Often we fail to understand how exacting and how conventional young people are in their attitude toward older people. They are often sensitive and proud, and in our dealings with them we do not sufficiently respect their individuality.

Children are a responsibility to parents, but the parents are frequently just as great reponsibility to children. As a primary step we must understand youth better than we do. With determined effort we can recall enough of our youthful feelings to avoid many mistakes. If we have arrived at an age when proper behavior has become natural or easy for us, let us remember the long hard road we had to travel.

Farmers Confident On Putting Income Tax On Fall Ballot

Michigan farmers working through their organizations are going over the top in their effort to initiate a state income tax constitutional amendment by petition. The Michigan State Farm Bureau and the State Grange and other co-operating farm bodies have already secured more than 50,000 signatures to the petition to put the proposed amendment on the ballot for the general November election this fall.

Nearly 60,000 names are required but the Michigan farmers are planning not only to secure the minimum, but to have several thousand names to spare.

The amendment now being proposed is radically different than the income tax measure which was defeated a few years ago, in that it definitely provides that the first $4,000 of every man's net income shall be exempted from this tax and it fixes the rates on incomes in excess of this amount on a sliding or progressive scale which will vary from 5 per cent to 10 per cent according to the size of the individual's net income. Incomes of $100,000 or more per year will receive the maximum 10 percent tax.

Tax Assessment Facts Sought By County Bureaus

Feeling that farm property is being assessed relatively higher than city homes and business property, several county farm bureaus in Michigan are engaged in campaigns to find out the actual facts about these conditions. Committees representing the county farm bureaus are working in accordance with a plan devised by the Michigan State Farm Bureau to find out from the official records the actual assessment ratio for various classes of property.

Representatives from the State Farm Bureau ase assisting the counties in putting on these campaigns. The general plan is to go to the Register of Deeds office and get a record of all the real estate transfers for several months back and then to find out the assessed valuation of each of these descriptions of property from the County Treasurer's records. A comparison of the sale price and the assessed valuation of each kind of property shows conclusively how fairly the different kinds of property in any given county are being assesed.

The results secured to date indicate that farm and village property is being assessed at almost its full sale valuation, while city real estate especially business property, is not being assessed at more than 65 per cent or 70 per cent of its actual value. Results secured in these campaigns will be presented to the local supervisors and an effort made to secure an equalization. Where such efforts are not successfull locally, an appeal will be taken to the State Tax Commission.

A similar campaign put on by the county farm bureaus in Illinois resulted in a reduction of taxes paid by Illinois farmers amounting to over $2,000,000 last year.

HOUSEWORK NOT DRUDGERY

For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now

Lincoln, Nebraska. — "My back would bother me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES F. DOLEZAL, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once

Volga City, Iowa.—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. I was so cold I could not keep warm. I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas.—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so."—Mrs. DORA PHILYAW, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Billy's Vaccination

Billy Foch, five-year-old son of W. E. Heyer, had been vaccinated and daddy had put a celluloid shield on his arm. Each evening when he was undressed for bed, he insisted on having a hand mirror held so that he could look into the mirror and see his vaccination.

When the vaccination was sufficiently healed the shield was taken off. But when night came and Billy was getting ready for bed, he went to his father and said, "Please, daddy, put my windshield back on so I won't roll over and hurt my arm."—Indianapolis News.

Their mission finished, that evening Jack and Solomon called at General Washington's headquarters.

"General, Doctor Franklin told us to turn over the hosses and wagons to you," said Solomon. "He didn't tell us what to do with ourselves 'cause 'twasn't nec'sary an' he knew it. We want to enlist."

"For what term?"

"Till the British are licked."

"You are the kind of men I need," said Washington. "I shall put you on scout duty. Mr. Irons will go into my regiment of sharpshooters with the rank of captain. You have told me of his training in Philadelphia."

So the two friends were enlisted and began service in the army of Washington.

A letter from Jack to his mother dated July 25, 1775, is full of the camp color:

"General Charles Lee is in command of my regiment," he writes. "He is a rough, slovenly old dog of a man who seems to bark at us on the training ground. He has two or three hunting dogs that live with him in his tent and also a rare gift of profanity which is with him everywhere—save at headquarters.

"Today I saw these notices posted in camp:

"'Punctual attendance on divine service is required of all not on actual duty.'

"'No burning of the pope allowed.'

"'Fifteen stripes for denying duty.'

"'Ten for getting drunk.'

"'Thirty-nine for stealing and desertion.'

"Rogues are put in terror, lazy men are energized. The quarters are kept clean, the food is well cooked and in plentiful supply, but the British over in town are said to be getting hungry."

Early in August a London letter was forwarded to Jack from Philadelphia. He was filled with new hope as he read these lines:

"Dearest Jack: I am sailing for Boston on one of the next troop ships to join my father. So when the war ends—God grant it may be soon—you will not have far to go to find me. Perhaps by Christmas time we may be together. Let us both pray for that. Meanwhile, I shall be happier for being nearer you and for doing what I can to heal the wounds made by this wretched war. I am going to be a nurse in a hospital. You see the truth is that since I met you, I like all men better, and I shall love to be trying to relieve their sufferings. . . ."

It was a long letter but above is as much of it as can claim admission to these pages.

"Who but she could write such a letter?" Jack asked himself, and then he held it to his lips a moment. It thrilled him to think that even then she was probably in Boston. In the tent where he and Solomon lived when they were both in camp, he found the scout. The night before Solomon had slept out. Now he had built a small fire in front of the tent and lain down on a blanket, having delivered his report at headquarters.

"Margaret is in Boston," said Jack as soon as he entered, and then standing in the firelight read the letter to his friend.

"Thar is a real, genewine, likely gal," said the scout.

"I wish there were some way of getting to her," the young man remarked.

"Might as well think o' goin' to h—l an' back ag'in," said Solomon. "Since Bunker Hill the British are like a lot o' hornets. I run onto one of 'em today. He fired at me an' didn't hit a thing but the air an' run like a scared rabbit. Could 'a' killed him easy but I kind o' enjoyed seein' him run. He were like chain lightnin' on a greased pole—you hear to me."

"If the general will let me, I'm going to try spy duty and see if I can get into town and out again," he proposed.

"You keep out o' that business," said Solomon. "They's too many that know ye over in town. The two Clarkes an' their friends an' Colonel Hare an' his friends, an' Cap. Preston, an' a hull passle. They know all 'bout ye. If you got snapped, they'd stan' ye ag'in' a wall an' put ye out o' the way quick. It would be pie for the Clarkes, an' the ol' man Hare wouldn't spill no tears over it. Cap. Preston couldn't save ye, that's sartin. No, sir, I won't 'low it. They's plenty o' old cusses fer such work."

For a time Jack abandoned the idea, but later, when Solomon failed to return from a scouting tour and a report reached camp that he was captured, the young man began to think of that rather romantic plan again. He had grown a full beard; his skin was tanned; his clothes were worn and torn and faded. His father, who had visited the camp bringing a supply of clothes for his son, had failed, at first, to recognize him.

December had arrived. The general was having his first great trial in keeping an army about him. Terms of enlistment were expiring. Cold weather had come. The camp was uncomfortable. Regiments of the homesick lads of New England were leaving or preparing to leave. Jack and a number of young ministers in the service organized a campaign of persuasion and many were prevailed upon to re-enlist. But hundreds of boys were hurrying homeward on the frozen roads.

One day Jack was sent for. He and his company had captured a number of men in a skirmish.

"Captain, you have done well," said the general. "I want to make a scout of you. In our present circumstances it's about the most important, dangerous and difficult work there is to be done here, especially the work which Solomon Binkus undertook to do. There is no other in whom I should have so much confidence. Major Bartlett knows the part of the line which Colonel Binkus traversed. He will be going out that way tomorrow. I should like you, sir, to go with him. After one trip I shall be greatly pleased if you are capable of doing the work alone."

Orders were delivered and Jack reported to Bartlett, an agreeable, middle-aged farmer-soldier, who had been on scout duty since July. They left camp together next morning an hour before reveille. They had an uneventful day, mostly in wooded flats and ridges, and from the latter looking across with a spy-glass into Bruteland, as they called the country held by the British, and seeing only, now and then, an enemy picket or distant camps. About midday they sat down in a thicket together for a bite to eat and a whispered conference.

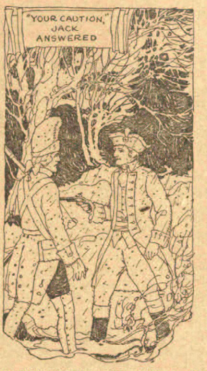
"Binkus, as you know, had his own way of scouting," said the major. "He was an Indian fighter. He liked to get inside the enemy lines and lie close an' watch 'em an' mebbe hear what they were talking about. Now an' then he would surprise a British sentinel and disarm him an' bring him into camp."

Jack wondered that his friend had never spoken of the capture of prisoners.

"He was a modest man," said the young scout.

"He didn't want the British to know where Solomon Binkus was at work, and I guess he was wise," said the major. "I advise against taking the chances that he took. It ain't necessary. You would be caught much sooner than he was."

That day Bartlett took Jack over Solomon's trail and gave him the lay of the land and much good advice. A young man of Jack's spirit, however, is apt to have a degree of enterprise and self-confidence not easily controlled by advice. He had been traveling alone for three days when he felt the need of more exciting action. That night he crossed the Charles river on the ice in a snowstorm and captured a sentinel and brought him back to camp.



Soon after that the daring spirit of the youth led him into a great adventure. It was on the night of January fifth that Jack penetrated the British lines in a snowstorm and got close to an outpost in a strip of forest. There a camp fire was burning. He came close. His garments had been whitened by the storm. The air was thick with snow, his feet were muffled in a foot of it. He sat by a stump scarcely twenty feet from the fire, seeing those in its light, but quite invisible. There he could distinctly hear the talk of the Britishers. It related to a proposed evacuation of the city by Howe.

"I'm weary of starving to death in this God-forsaken place," said one of them. "You can't keep an army without meat or vegetables. I've eaten fish till I'm getting scales on me."

"Colonel Riffington says that the army will leave here within a fortnight," another observed.

It was important information which had come to the ear of the young scout. The talk was that of well-bred Englishmen who were probably officers.

"We ought not to speak of those matters aloud," one of them remarked. "Some d—d Yankee may be listening like the one we captured."

"He was Amherst's old scout," said another. "He swore a blue streak when we shoved him into jail. They don't like to be treated like rebels. They want to be prisoners of war."

A young man came along with his rifle on his shoulder.

"Hello, Bill!" said one of the men. "Going out on post?"

"I am, God help me," the youth answered. "It's what I'd call a h—l of a night."

The sentinel passed close by Jack on his way to his post. The latter crept away and followed, gradually closing in upon his quarry. When they were well away from the fire, Jack came close and called, "Bill!"

The sentinel stopped and faced about.

"You've forgotten something," said Jack, in a genial tone.

"What is it?"

"Your caution," Jack answered, with his pistol against the breast of his enemy. "I shall have to kill you if you call or fail to obey me. Give me the rifle and go on ahead. When I say gee go to the right, haw to the left."

So the capture was made, and on the way out Jack picked up the sentinel who stood waiting to be relieved and took both men into camp.

From documents on the person of one of these young Britishers it appeared that General Clarke was in command of a brigade behind the lines which Jack had been watching and robbing.

When Jack delivered his report the chief called him a brave lad and said:

"It is valuable information you have brought to me. Do not speak of it. Let me warn you, captain, that from now on they will try to trap you. Perhaps, even, you may look for daring enterprises on that part of their line."

The general was right. The young scout ran into a most daring and successful British enterprise on the twentieth of January. The snow had been swept away in a warm rain and the ground had frozen bare, or it would not have been possible. Jack had got to a strip of woods in a lonely bit of country near the British lines and was climbing a tall tree to take observations when he saw a movement on the ground beneath him. He stopped and quickly discovered that the tree was surrounded by British soldiers. One of them, who stood with a raised rifle, called to him:

"Irons, I will trouble you to drop your pistols and come down at once."

Jack saw that he had run into an ambush. He dropped his pistols and came down. He had disregarded the warning of the general. He should have been looking out for an ambush. A squad of five men stood about him with rifles in hand. Among them was Lionel Clarke, his right sleeve empty.

"We've got you at last—you d—d rebel!" said Clarke.

"I suppose you need some one to swear at," Jack answered.

"And to shoot at," Clarke suggested.

"I thought that you would not care for another match with me," the young scout remarked as they began to move away.

"Hereafter you will be treated like a rebel and not like a gentleman," Clarke answered.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that you will be standing blindfolded against a wall."

"That kind of a threat doesn't scare me," Jack answered. "We have too many of your men in our hands."

CHAPTER XV

In Boston Jail.

Jack was marched under guard into the streets of Boston. Church bells were ringing. It was Sunday morning. Young Clarke came with the guard beyond the city limits. They had seemed to be very careless in the control of their prisoner. They gave him every chance to make a break for liberty. Jack was not fooled.

"I see that you want to get rid of me," said Jack to the young officer. "You'd like to have me run a race with your bullets. That is base ingratitude. I was careful of you when we met and you do not seem to know it."

"I know how well you can shoot," Clarke answered. "But you do not know how well I can shoot."

"And when I learn, I want to have a fair chance for my life."

Beyond the city limits young Clarke who was then a captain, left them and Jack proceeded with the others.

The streets were quiet—indeed almost deserted. There were no children playing on the common. A crowd was coming out of one of the churches. In the midst of it the prisoner saw Preston and Lady Hare. They were so near that he could have touched them with his hand as he passed. They did not see him. He noted the name of the church and its minister. In a few minutes he was delivered at the jail—a noisome, ill-smelling, badly ventilated place.

The yard was an opening walled in by the main structure and its two wings and a wooden fence some fifteen feet high. There was a ragged, dirty rabble of "rebel" prisoners among whom was Solomon Binkus, all out for an airing. The old scout had lost flesh and color. He held Jack's hand and stood for a moment without speaking.

METHOD TO DETECT RENEWED EGGS

A new deception practiced on the consumers of eggs is now attracting considerable interest from the United States Department of Agriculture which, by the authority of the food and drugs act, insists that the product of the hen when sold as fresh must be fresh and not merely look the part if it is to enter into interstate commerce. Large quantities of eggs are now preserved by first dipping in hot oil to seal the pores in the shells and are then immediately placed in cold storage. There is no objection to the practice, but recently it has been found that a number of egg concerns have been treating these eggs on removal from storage so as to give them the appearance of having been laid lately.

The treatment to remove the telltale oil gloss consists in "manicuring" the shells with a blast of fine sand or in treating them with a bath in an alkali solution, after which they are dried and rubbed with French chalk or talc.

Chemists of the department have devised a method for detecting eggs which have been treated with oil and then subjected to the restoration process.

His Lesson Went Wrong

The teacher was trying to impress on the children how important had been the discovery of the law of gravitation.

"Sir Isaac Newton was sitting on the ground looking at the tree. An apple fell on his head, and from that he discovered gravitation. Just think, children," she added, "isn't that wonderful?"

The inevitable small boy replied: "Yes, miss, an' if he had been sittin' in school lookin' at his books he wouldn't never have discovered nothin'."

Red Cross Preparations

According to plans of the international Red Cross committee at Geneva, a world atlas "showing clearly the site and extent of all great catastrophes, past as well as present, and of such as may reasonably be expected in the future" is proposed. Maps showing the distribution of earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, "tidal" waves, hurricanes, tornadoes, typhoons, droughts, floods, dust storms, conflagrations in cities, invasions of locust, famines and the epidemic centers of plague, cholera and yellow fever will be included. Preparation of this atlas will be preliminary plans for immediate action when the S O S is sent from the world's trouble centers.

Literally True

A figure of speech can sometimes have a liberal application. Just the other day Brown remarked: "I saw a funny thing this morning."

"What was it?" Smith asked.

"Well, I saw two deaf and dumb men standing on the corner talking," Brown replied, "and a third came up and took a hand in the conversation!"

MAKING IT HARD FOR BANK CROOKS

How the Nation's Bankers Are Banded Together in War on Crime—The Great Crook Trap and the Way It Works.

By JOHN OAKWOOD

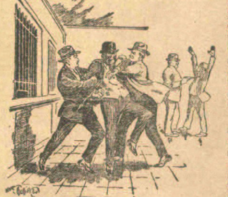
The slick gentry who have been wont to walk into banks and mesmerize paying tellers into giving them good cash for worthless checks have recently become aware of the fact that their operations are daily growing more difficult. Crooks who have operated with apparent immunity for years have suddenly found themselves caught in the meshes of what amounts to a nation wide crook trap.

To show how effectively this is now working, one of the biggest figures among the worthless check operators, a man who claims to have defrauded dozens of banks and realized more than $300,000 from his operations, recently fell into the toils of the trap. Realizing that he was hopelessly caught, he made a complete confession.

This trap is conducted by the Protective Department of the American Bankers Association, which includes in its membership more than 22,000 banks that are thus leagued in a perpetual warfare against the army of bank crooks scattered throughout the nation.

A Dramatic Arrest

A dramatic illustration of the workings of the association's detective department was recently staged in Buffalo, N. Y., resulting in the sudden downfall of a pair of check swindlers and terminating a year's successful operations in some fifteen cities in various sections of the country.



The pair began their operations in Buffalo in the middle of January, one of them appearing at the special savings account window of a bank there. He presented a counter check on the bank for $75.60, together with a deposit slip filled in for $20.60. He also presented a second deposit slip for $3, proffering with it $3 in currency. He told the teller that he wanted to deposit the two items, that is, $3 in cash and $20.60 out of the check, to the credit of his wife, explaining that he had forgotten to bring her book but would return with it later. His cash and the check were accepted, totaling $78.60. From this sum his wife's supposed account was credited with $23.60, the total of the two deposit slips, and he was given $55 cash in change.

After the man left the bank the teller became suspicious due to his prolonged failure to return as he had promised with his wife's deposit book. On investigation the check he had left was found to be worthless. The bank communicated with the local detective office of the association, giving a complete description of the man.

The Alarm Is Given

Later that same day the detective office received another report from a second bank that it had been similarly defrauded by a man answering the description given by the first bank. Steps were at once taken to set a trap for him should he attempt further operations. All surrounding banks were warned that he was in the vicinity and a complete description was given them of his appearance and of his mode of operating. They were advised to have their tellers and guards on the lookout and to communicate at once by telephone with the detective office in case anyone appeared in their lobbies who seemed to answer to the description of the man wanted. They were also instructed to take steps to detain him in the bank.

Early the next afternoon the telephone rang in the detective office and a message came from a third bank that they thought the man was in its lobby. Three detectives rushed to the bank in an automobile which had been held continuously in waiting. Two of the detectives covered the entrances of the bank and the third went into the lobby. He at once noticed a short, well dressed man standing at one side and watching the line of people at the tellers' windows. In the line he noticed a large man, answering the description of the bad check operator he was seeking.

The detective approached the man who at once scented trouble and tore up the papers he had in his hand, hiding the pieces in his pocket. At signs of his putting up a fight, the detective grappled with him and called to his two associates at the doors to arrest the other man whom he had noticed as he entered. After a short struggle the two men were overpowered. When the larger of the two was searched a torn check was found in his pocket, made out in the same writing as the two that had been successfully passed the day before. A number of similar checks all prepared for use, were also found on his confederate. When confronted by the tellers of the banks who had been victimized the day before, the leader was readily identified. The two prisoners were hopelessly ensnared, admitted their guilt and in their hotel rooms were found a large number of checks, deposit slips and pass books of banks in various cities

The Trap Sprung Again

Similar quick action of the bank crook trap in Boston terminated the career of another check forger who had been operating successfully in the New England states. The banks which he had victimized notified the American Bankers Association with the result that all other banks in the territory were warned against him and were put on guard. Therefore, when he walked into a Boston bank to continue his operations he walked into a trap as he was immediately recognized and nabbed by the officers there.

These are only two instances of many that have recently taken place in various parts of the country. Some of these arrests have brought into the toils of the authorities some of the slickest operators in this line in the country and from them have been learned the details of the way bank crooks operate, placing in the hands of the detective department the means to put banks on guard against further depredations.

Obituary of Mrs. Amelia Lamb

Mrs. Amelia Lamb was born in Adams township Hillsdale county Mich., March 23rd, 1862, daughter of Henry and Fanny Lyon, one of a family of eleven children. She passed to her reward May 21st, 1924, at about 7 o'clock in the morning aged 62 years, 1 month and 28 days.

She lived in Adams township at the place of her birth until her marriage to Benjamin S. Lamb March 27th, 1881. Until last October when they moved to Pittsford they lived together with their family on the border between Wheatland and Adams townships within a mile and a half of her birthplace, and about 5 miles straight north of Pittsford.

Mrs. Lamb leaves to mourn her departure her husbadd, Benjamin S. Lamb, who was her unusually constant companion during more than 43 years of married life.

She laid aside her earthly life soon after she had reared her six living children to manhood and womanhood, the youngesi having quite recently attained his majority. Two children were called away earlier than their mother, Hiram who died in infancy March 11th. 1900 and Iva Fanny Wells who left two children behind January 12, 1908.

The children still living who will never forget and cannot evaluate the self sacrificing services of a loving mother are: Bertha Wells, Adams township, Burley, Columbus, Ohio; Alfred, Adams township; Howard, Los Angeles California, Maude Stiverson living on the old homestead, and Ralph now attending Albion College.

One only of her ten brothers and sisters, Ida Church of Adams township survives to mourn the loss. Ten grand-children will ever miss the smile and encouragement of their grand-mother.

Mrs. Lamb lived in comparatively good health until stricken by partial paralysis about 5 years ago from which she somewhat hough never fully recovered. Her rapid decline from the first of February of this year was due to Brights disease, from which there was little hope of recovery from the first. She bore her intense suffering and helplessness with patience and fortitude through four long months, and finally passed to the great beyond without either a murmur or a struggle.

Living in the country during those early days when the isolation of the farm compelled her to be the laundress, housekeeper, dressmaker, physician and nurse for the family, she burned out her life in unstinted devotion to welfare of her large family of children. These requirements however, did not prevent her finding expression to her desire for service to others in the community. She joined the Wheatland grange at Church's Corners 42 years ago. Through the whole period she never relaxed her devotion to her fellowmen, by working for their common welfare through the Grange, especially designed for that purpose.

Until her recent affliction she had not missed a single session of the Hillsdale County Pomona Grange for more than 15 years.

A fitting climax to her years of devotion to the grange, as well as her family, was the paper which she prepared and read at the last session she was privileged to attend in Hillsdale January 2nd 3rd. After appealing to the grangers to be charitable toward the views and opinions of others, to live together in brotherly love, to beutify the home with flowers which are God's emblems of the truth of the Resurrection, and to speak the good words and do the kind deeds while our friends live rather than waiting until they are gone, she closed with that fitting Bible quotation which so characterized her dealings with her children, neighbors and friends, "Be ye kind one to another?

After prayer at the home in Pittsford, the funeral was held at the Pittsford Grange Hall at 2:00 p. m. Saturday, May 24 the Rev. J. C. Woodman of Paw Paw Michigan, Chaplain of the Michigan State Grange, preached the sermon, speaking appropriate words of encouragement to relatives and friends gathered from all over the county. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Churches Corners, where her departed infant son was interred in 1900.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Passes Bonus Bill Over Veto and Tax Bill Compromise Is Fixed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BONUS for the ex-soldiers—alias adjusted compensation—and a reduction of taxes to the extent of about $472,620,000 during the calendar year 1925. The country gets both of these blessings, according to the fiat of congress, though just how increased expenditure is to be adjusted to decreased revenue no expert has yet discovered.

On Monday the senate followed the example of the house by overriding the President's veto of the soldiers' bonus bill and it thus became law. All the pressure brought by the administration and the numerous bodies and individuals opposed to the bonus was unavailing. The vote was 59 to 26, two more than the necessary two-thirds, the majority including 30 Republicans, 27 Democrats and 2 Farmer-Laborites.

It is estimated that 3,038,283 veterans will be entitled to the insurance policies provided by the soldier bonus bill, while 389,583 will be paid cash of $50 or less. The average certificate face value is estimated at $962. The certificate is payable in full after twenty years, or before in case of death. Loans may be obtained on the policies after two years. The lowest estimate of the cost of the bonus is that annual appropriations aggregating $2,280,758,542 will be necessary over the twenty-year period.

There also will be necessary $6,500,000 for administrative expenses the first year. The Department of War and other government agencies were ready and preparations for the issuance of insurance policies and the payment of the cash sums are being rapidly completed. The first issuance certificates will be dated January 1, 1925.

HAVING rebuffed the President to this extent, congress was disposed to show greater consideration for some of his views concerning the tax reduction bill, probably in order to avoid a veto of that measure. The senate and house conferees reached a complete and unanimous agreement on a compromise and consented to abandon the two features to which Mr. Coolidge had especially objected—the senate amendments on corporation tax and full publicity of tax returns. The amendment taxing undistributed earnings of corporations also was eliminated. The Simmons normal taxes and surtaxes and personal exemptions were approved. Thus the maximum surtax is 40 per cent; and the normal income tax rates are 2 per cent on income up to $4,000, 4 per cent between $4,000 and $8,000, and 6 per cent above $8,000. The 25 per cent reduction in taxes on 1923 incomes was not in dispute and stands unchanged. The personal exemption of all heads of families, regardless of income, is $2,500. The treasury recommendation for a limitation of deductions for capital losses to 12½ per cent was restored to the bill; this is estimated to mean additional revenue to the extent of $25,000,000.

The conference report was satisfactory to the regular Republicans and Democrats of both houses, so it was evident the objections of the disgruntled radicals would be of no avail. Veto of this measure by the President was not expected by the leaders, despite the prospect of a huge deficit due in part to the soldiers' bonus. Senator Smoot said he thought the enactment of the tax bill would so stimulate business as possibly to bring in more than the amount of the deficit in new revenues after it is in operation for a year or two. Representative Green said that the paper deficit in the fiscal year 1925 will be wiped out by the surplus carried from the fiscal year 1924. With respect to the fiscal year 1925 Mr. Green believes that revenues will be greater than estimated by the treasury and that there will be a marked increase in the fiscal year 1926. He expressed the opinion that no actual deficit will develop during the next two years and that congress then can provide new financing methods if necessary.

POLITICALLY both sides will share in the benefits from the tax reduction, but it is likely the Democrats will get the bigger portion. The bonus bill was not a party measure. What will be the effect of the futile veto on Mr. Coolidge's political fortunes is debatable. His message of disapproval was such a well reasoned and commonsense document and so politically courageous that it probably will deprive him of few votes, and the bonus issue is removed from the campaign. The vote-hungry congressmen who insisted on passing the bill presumably will receive their reward.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE called the Republican members of the senate foreign relations committee to the White House and discussed with them the ways and means of giving effect to his recommendation for American adherence to the permanent court of international justice. He said his position was unchanged. The result was that at the request of the committee Senator Pepper drafted and introduced a resolution proposing that the United States join the existing World court on the condition that it be entirely divorced from the League of Nations. It also proposes the calling of a third Hague conference to clarify and codify international law.

WITHIN ten days after the signing of the immigration bill—assuming that it is signed—Japan will file formal protest against the Japanese exclusion clause, and probably will ask the Hague court or the League of Nations to take up the matter. This is the decision of the Japanese privy council, which holds the measure flagrantly violates the commercial treaty. Ambassador Hanihara will be "permitted to resign," as he undoubtedly wishes to do. Cyrus Woods, American ambassador to Tokyo, already has resigned and is coming home. His reason is given as the illness of his mother-in-law, who was injured in the September earthquake, but it is known both here and in Japan that he was greatly disheartened by the action of congress relating to Japanese exclusion.

JAPANESE resentment does not extend to the army aviators who are flying around the world. Last week the three planes—first to fly across the Pacific—reached Japanese territory and then made two more hops almost to Tokyo. Everywhere the aviators were received with enthusiasm and they were given all possible aid by the government and the people.

Capt. Pelletier Doisy, the Frenchman, crashed at Shanghai and his plane was ruined, but he decided to proceed with a machine furnished by the military governor of Shanghai. Captain MacLaren, the English flyer, was making good progress across British India.

DETAILS of the alleged attempt by government agents to "frame" Senator Wheeler were given to the Brookhart committee by W. O. Duckstein and his wife, the former confidential secretary for Edward B. McLean and the latter a special agent of the Department of Justice. As a result the committee ordered that Special Assistant Attorney General Hiram Todd of New York appear and testify concerning two men who went to Washington as his agents and who are supposed, incidentally, to have stolen the missing records of Gaston B. Means.

In the senate Sterling of South Dakota stood firm as the only one opposing the exoneration of Wheeler from the charge on which he was indicted in Montana. This exoneration will not relieve Wheeler from the necessity of going to trial, for the proceedings will not be dismissed.

Testimony in the Daugherty investigation has resulted in the indictment of Tex Rickard, Jap Muma and several other men by a federal grand jury at Newark, N. J., on charges of transporting the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films into other states. Scores of witnesses were heard by the jury.

THE senate last week passed the Gooding bill which prohibits railroads from charging less for the longer haul than for the shorter haul to meet competition of water carriers or market competition. This is legislation for which the intermountain states have been fighting for years. The advocates of the measure will try to get action on it by the house before adjournment. The Howell-Barkley bill, which would abolish the railway labor board, was bitterly fought in the house and its friends admitted that final action on it was unlikely at this session.

WHETHER Edouard Herriot, radical leader, shall be the next premier of France probably depends on the action of the Socialist party at its meeting on June 2. The question is whether the party shall collaborate with the government or participate. Herriot favors the latter. Meanwhile he and other leaders of the left have been called into consultation with Premier Poincare and President Millerand especially concerning finances and the existing campaign against the franc. Herriot says the latter is "an underhanded maneuver of domestic politics." His ideas on foreign policies are somewhat vague, but it appears evident that if he becomes premier he will move slowly and cautiously in the matter of recognizing Russia. In all international matters he pomises to keep within the bounds of reason.

GERMAN Nationalists, feeling very cocky over the strength they developed in the elections, demanded, as the price of their co-operation with the middle parties in forming a government, that Admiral von Tirpitz should be made chancellor. The middle parties refused to promise this or discuss it, so the negotiations for such a coalition broke down. The Nationalists and the German Fascisti both are opposed to the Dawes plan and have been trying to enlist enough votes to reject it. Count von Reventlow expressed the views of the Fascisti thus: "The conditions of the Dawes report deprive Germany of the last shreds of self determination promised by Wilson." Rejection of the Dawes plan by Germany probably would bring prompt action by France despite the change of government, for the French Socialists are in general patriotic and the radicals are only comparatively radical. They support the Dawes plan heartily but they insist on reparations as strongly as does M. Poincare.

In the Ruhr the strike of miners and other workers is increasing and sabotage is becoming general. Many emergency workers have disappeared and the authorities fear they have been murdered.

THE triumph of the laborer in Great Britain was signalized in a spectacular way in Edinburgh when James Brown, once a pit boy and now a miner member of parliament, sat upon the throne in Holyrood palace as lord high commissioner and in the name of the king declared open the annual assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland. The castle gave him the royal salute of twenty-one guns and the state trumpeters heralded him as, gorgeously clad, he passed along the royal gallery; and after the ceremony, in which he bore himself with all due dignity, the troops presented arms and the entire populace cheered the little miner.

POLAND, Rumania and Turkey, according to dispatches from Bucharest, are negotiating a mutual defense treaty by which these powers agree to give full support to each other in case any one of them is attacked by Russia. It provides especially for the defense of Bessarabia. Poland and Rumania each guarantee to put 1,000,000 well trained, well equipped troops into the field against Russia, and Turkey promised to throw in 250,000 men in the Caucausus to seize the Batum oil fields. The British would be expected to blockade Russia in the Baltic and Black seas and to supply airplanes, artillery and tanks to these three armies. Great Britain is alleged to be determined to prevent the seizure by the Russians of the mouth of the Danube.

Rumania Not Worried Over Soviet Threats

Bucharest.—Any surprise attack the soviet army may make on the Bessarabian frontier is doomed to failure, according to Rumanian official circles. Although there has been no movement of troops recenty toward the Dniester there are adequate forces in Bessarabia to prevent any attempt to reconquer the province, it is declared.

Aside from the economic aspects, Bessarabia means to Rumania much what Alsace and Lorraine meant to France, and, with or without alliance, Rumanians seem satisfied that Great Britain and France will never permit an unprovoked attack on Russia.

Rumania's principal concern, it is explained, is centered upon the time when Russia shall have regained internal stability. No misgivings are felt for the immediate future, the opinion being that Russia has her hands full with her internal affairs. Rumania realizes, however, that she could expect little support from her little entente partners were trouble to come, and this accounts for the efforts to get France to at least promise armament in substantial quantities, particularly airplanes.

Rumania and Russia have agreed to the appointment of a mixed commission for control of movements of refugees across the Dniester frontier and repatriation of Russians in Bessarabia desiring to return.

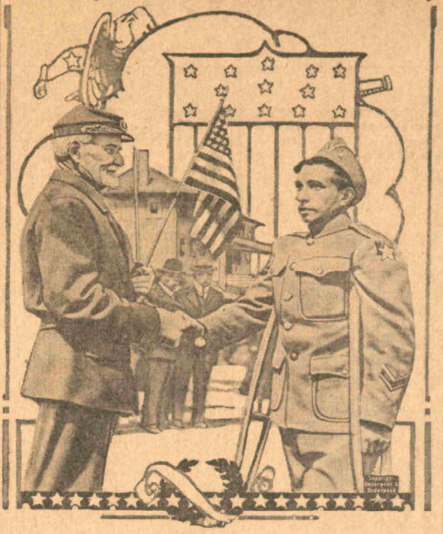
In Memory of Men Like These—Memorial Day



Veterans both—of two great wars; one that divided and united a nation; one that divided and yet may lead to uniting the civilized world. And to honor the comrades of these heroes—Memorial Day.

A Woman on Decoration Day

By Mary Blake Woodson in the Country Gentleman

I STAND in the crowd and I watch them,
As the wounded in battle go by—
How little they know as they pass me
That none are as wounded as I!

I have tears for what they have given—
Their youth, their Dawn of the Day—
But I'm hungry for all they have left them,
Who gave in a bitterer way.

The eyes that are blinded, the wound stripes,
The limps, the wheel chair and crutch,
Catch at my heart with the sorrow
That bodily blemishes clutch.

And I love them with terrible pity—
I, whose body is whole—
But what if they saw my shattered faith
Or looked at my wounded soul?

Would they know me at once for a comrade
In pain, in courage more sad?
I, without glory of battle,
Who sent away all that I had?

Would they see how my whole life was crippled?
Perhaps if these boys understood
It would humble those scars they are proud of
As only such deeper scars could.

And perhaps I'd go limping out yonder,
Ahead of them all, at the start—
I, with my poor, maimed spirit—
I, with my broken heart!

Tributes Are Due to Fallen Heroes

Observance of Memorial Day Is Duty and Privilege of Americans.

MEMORIAL Day, originated as a tribute to the fallen heroes of the Civil war, has come in these later years to mean much more than that, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. The dwindling lines of the Old Guard, representing the Grand Army of the Republic, will soon pass in last review before the inspector general, and the heroes of other, later wars will take their places.

It is well that we Americans keep in memory all our men who struggled in battle to keep Old Glory flying in the heavens. These men, heroes of the Spanish-American war and those of the World war conflict, now loom large on the national horizon, and to them, as well as to the remnant of the Old Guard that kept watch and ward along the Potomac and in the Mississippi valley during the dark days of the Civil war, our solemn graciousness is due.

We can never do enough to show our appreciation of what they did in time of trial, and it is meet that we assemble each Memorial Day and give thanks to Almighty God for the victories won by these sons of the republic on so many ensanguined fields of war.

The blue-clad armies that met and conquered the hosts of Lee in the sixties have their counterparts in the lads in khaki who stemmed the German flood of frightfulness in the Argonne, Belleau and on other fields of gore, teaching the hitherto conquering hordes of the kaiser that the despised Yankee from across the brine was not visiting the Rhineland for picnic sport, but to terminate once for all the claims of an absolute monarchy that it ruled the world.

Memorial Day is the one day in all the year when the men and women of America can show more reverently, more sympathetically, more heartfelt appreciation and gratitude for our boys who in the World war as in all other conflicts in which the republic has been engaged, led the van, causing victory to perch upon the banners of righteousness.

Bring flowers to garland the graves of America's soldier dead. What more appropriate? Tears for the dead, help for the living. We must not forget the maimed and suffering, that legacy left by the frightfulness of the most ferocious and heartless war in the history of the world. Kaiser Wilhelm sits in the shadow of Dutch hospitality and broods over the fall of the Hohenzollern dynasty. His punishment is small compared to the suffering his guilty reign inflicted on his fellow beings. Doubtless he is now counting the cost when it is too late to save him from the just condemnation of mankind.

Many thousands of graves will this year be decorated in France, graves of American soldiers who paid with their lives for their patriotic stand for God and country when the bugle sounded for the march across the ocean.

Should Mean Much to Comrades Who Survive

Present-day Americans cannot with wisdom desert the historic traditions which their forefathers held in such high regard. Memorial Day has of late years degenerated, not due to lack of zeal on the part of the few old soldiers remaining, but because of lack of appreciation by later generations of the spirit which actuated its inception. The World war took its awful toll; thousands there are who sleep forever in France, or Belgium, or some other foreign land. The bodies of thousands more have found a last resting place in the native sod. Memorial Day should mean much to their comrades, to those who came safely home. And to the friends of those who came not back. Then let a nation rededicate itself to Memorial day, in the spirit which first inspired those who paid homage and respect to the soldier dead of the United States.—Grit.

Sounded Bugle Call That Ended Civil War

Past Commander Nathaniel Sisson of Sedgwick post, No. 21, of Maryville, Mo., who served as bugler in Company A, Second West Virginia cavalry, sounded the last hostile bugle call at Appomattox—the order to charge.

Mr. Sisson was chief bugler for Brig. Gen. Henry Capehart, commanding the Second cavalry brigade in General Custer's division of the federal army.

He participated in the last engagement on the morning of April 9, 1865, at Appomattox, and after sounding the order to charge he was designated to sound the call to halt the charging column on receipt by General Custer of the flag of truce. He rode with General Capehart up Pennsylvania avenue in the historic grand review, May 24, 1865.

THIS WOMAN'S MARVELLOUS RECOVERY

All Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Truman, Minn.—"I was badly rundown, had pains in my side and back; sometimes I could hardly move around in bed. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking it I was so much better I could do all my work again. I do my housework, have a garden, raise chickens, and in harvest time I worked in the field and helped pick corn. Sometimes I do chores and milk. I took the Vegetable Compound before and after my four-months-old baby was born, and it has always helped me wonderfully. I believe there is no better medicine made for women, and I hope every woman will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. AUGUST R. WIEDERHOFT, R. No. 2, Box 84, Truman, Minn.

Women suffering from troubles so common to their sex should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

Original Water Heater

The first water heater known dates back some two thousand years. This was the "ahenum" of the Romans, a crude bronze kettle with a handle for swinging over an open fire. The "foculus," an apparently later device, was a metal container into which hot stones were put to heat the water surrounding them. This seems to have been the best water heater the early Romans were able to devise.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS
ASSOCIATION

Contrast With National Highways As They Will Be

Roads on which the National Government furnishes funds to assist the State are in two classes primary and secondary. Primary highways are interstate, while secondary highways are intercounty roads correlating with primary thoroughfares. The total mileage in any State on which Federal aid may be given cannot exceed 7 percent of the total mileage of all public roads in that State. The primary system must not exceed three-sevenths of the total eligible for Federal aid, and on this three-sevenths not more than 60 percent of the Federal funds available for any State may be spent, except by agreement between the State Road Commission and the Secretary of Agriculture.

Federal road funds are apportioned among the States agreeing to match the amounts, as follows: One third in the ratio which the area of each State bears to the area of all the states; one third in the ratio which the population of each State bears to the population of all the states; one-third in the ratio which the mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes in each state bears to the mileage of rural delivery and star routes in all the states.

The Federal road system is intended to give the maximum of service to the greatest possible number. There are 1,111 cities in the United States of 5,000 or more inhabitants, and 1,048 of these are located on Federal routes. Of the total population of the United States 90 percent live either on or within ten miles of highways included in the Federal system.

Proponents of national highways, built and forever maintained by the National Government, point out that all such calculations and apportionments will be unnecessary under their plan, and that the ends of efficiency, economy, and speed in building roads can be better served by one central authority in absolute control than by forty-eight road commissions working in conjunction with a central authority, between which an agreement must be had before work is done.

Real national highway believers are not "against" Federal aid to roads, since they recognize that any agency which builds, which creates sentiment for good roads, which advocates the spread of hard surface highways, is an argument for national highways. National highway program indorsers believe that their plan, of a central authority, a central force paying the bills, and a central organization maintaining the highways, will produce more highways, produce them quicker, and produce them with greater economy and therefore greater value to the body politic than any other plan.

The Condition of Public Roads

Michigan's public road system to-day as compared with 30 years ago shows a wonderful improvement in the way of hard concrete and gravel surfaces, a condition which can be traced directly to the advent of the motor car industry in this and other states. There is no get-away from the fact that while the automobile is reviled as the destroyer of soft roads in the spring, the nullifier of young people's morals, and the general pal of the bank robber, thug and hold-up man, yet with all its vices it has some of the virtues which make up the activity of life.

Many a man who used to walk dow rides in a car which he supposed years ago he could not afford to own. Consequences of this are that roads have to be the acme of perfection, steel signs have been placed at the intersection of pikes telling the public where to go to reach certain places, our grades are established in such a manner that you can now gaze for miles down the right-of-way on the shining concrete surfaces where before you could not see a mile ahead.

With all these wonderful strides and the enormous help to travelers there are still those who object to building these roads on the grounds that the state is being annually mulcted of millions by paying twice as much per mile as it should and the reason given is a reliable contention. It is an absolute fact that the contract system costs a lot more with not as good results. Governor Groesbeck has demonstrated this a number of times, but we must have these excellent highways. If you doubt this and don't really know what it means to the average business man or even the casual tourist, start for Detroit or Chicago via auto some bright morning and you will find that you are traveling about as rapid and direct as the steam road. You want to get to your destination at such a time and if you are a few hours late it means a heavy loss, or if you happen to get off the main highway you will fret and fume and curse road builders in general because they have done nothing. So we repeat you and I and all of us will and must have a good track to go on. The only wrong feature is the present system of contract work, and the day is near when the Michigan government will build its own roads by cheap convict labor, thus cutting off at least one-third of the actual cost for a far better highway.

FITTING BANKERS FOR THEIR WORK

Financial conditions are rapidly increasing the demand for trained men and women. This demand is met by the American Institute of Banking, the educational section of the American Bankers Association, organized in 1900. It was originally an association of clerks, but since 1908 its membership has included bank directors, officers and clerks. From a few hundred the institute's membership has grown steadily to a figure in excess of fifty-two thousand. It is not conducted for profit. It has chapters in more than one hundred and fifty of the country's largest cities. Its class enrollment of nearly thirty thousand is greater than the combined registration of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, the University of Chicago and the naval and military academies at Annapolis and West Point. It offers instruction in banking practice, economics, commercial law, negotiable instruments, credits, accounting, bonds and investments, public speaking, and kindred subjects designed to fit the banker for his work and enable him to fill well his place in his community.—Clarence R. Chaney, President American Institute of Banking.

White Ants Come In With Firewood

Many complaints that white ants are destroying dwellings in the state, by tunnelling through the timbers of the buildings, have reached the entomology department at M. A. C. during the past few weeks

"Examination has shown", says Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the college entomology department, "that in most cases where infestation of the white ants has been reported the ants have been brought into the house in fallen timber which has been stored for use in fireplaces and furnaces.

"After this wood is stored in the basement, the white ants which have been in the dead limbs work right over into the timbers of the house and soon get beyond control"

Care to avoid bringing fallen wood and dead limbs which harbor the white ants into the house is given as the method of avoiding infestations, in most cases, at least.

Cow Testing Groups Near Hundred Mark

Eighty four cow testing associations were active in Michigan on May 10, according to a news bulletin just released by the dairy department at the M. A. C.

On May 10, 1922, there were but 14 associations in the state, this number having been multiplied six times during the two year period. There were 38 active associations on the same date in 1923, the increase having been a steady one.

Increased efficiency in Michigan's dairy herds follows the operation of cow test associations in a community, according to specialists who have studied the effects of association work. The results of the widespread association movement in the state are expected to mean much to Michigan dairymen in general.

There are 1,939 herds in the 84 associations, including 21,513 individual cows.

More than 20,000 houses have been built in Yokohama, Japan, since the earthquake.

The state of Michigan a year ago placed 65 imported Norwegian reindeer in a northern part of the state in a county similar to their native habitation. Only seven of the herd are left. Lack of calcium composition in the Michigan moss is said to cause paralysis of the hind quarters, resulting in death.

To test the theory that "any bright criminal could prove himself insane and thus escape punishment for his crimes," a Des Moines, Iowa, newspaper reporter played the part of the insane man, was officially adjudged insane by the sanity commission, which remanded him to the state hospital at Clarinda all in such fine order that the young reporter had difficulty in extricating himself.

Be Consistent

In commenting on the dangers of public ownership schemes, Henry Swift Ives of Chicago goes to the root of the question when he says:

"A Chicago suburban village referred to as a "Millionaire Colony" maintains a municipal electric light plant when not one voter in a hundred in this village would for a moment favor the socialization of his particular business.

"In a prosperous middle western city, one of the leading advocates of municipally owned traction lines is a prosperous insurance agent who bitterly opposes socialists in their efforts to force the state into insurance business,

Electricity For Farm Homes

Electricity is rapidly being spread to the farm homes in western states Statistics show thow that even in some of the thinly settled states, from 15 to 20 per cent of the farms are supplied with electric light and power. In some of the western states the equipment of farm homes has been extended to nearly 50 per cent, and in all of them is showing a steady increase. New circuits are being established, lines are being extended into new territory and new patrons are being added to lines already built. The wives of farmers are finding their work much easier, and the home much more attractive for the young people by the introduction of electricity as there is better light for reading and far less danger of fire. In some of the states, for many miles the roads running out of cities into the country are being electrically lighted and frequently barns and barnyards even are lighted. In some homes, electric ranges, washing machines, flat irons, churns, milking machines and power for dairies are features of the new era. No families who have ever used electricity on the farm care to return to the old oil lamps, the hand pump, the lantern or any of the old methods where electricity can be obtained.

Auto Wrecks vs. Young Americans

It is heartrending to read the ever-increasing list of mortalities as the result of auto mishaps in this country, and we are thinking the next real difficulty which this nation will be up against is the proper regulation of motor traffic on our highways.

As the result of an accident near Quincy Monday morning, May 26th, one young man is dead or nearly so and a young lady is seriously injured. It seems the young people were leaving Quincy in a touring car belonging to G. A. Emerich, editor of the Pittsford Reporter, whose son was driving. Another car, a sedan, also carrying young folks, started away about the same time, all on their way to Coldwater the occasion being annual skip-out day. At a rapid speed the sedan cut in ahead of the other car driven by Emerich. They were very close together when the sedan without warning tnrned into a side street and the other driver found he must either crash or swerve to the edge of the road which he did coming in contact with a tree in a terrific side swipe, and the two above mentioned, Mr. Crocker and Miss Freeze who happened to be on that side were banged against the tree. The touring car was completely wrecked on the left side. The victims were taken to the Hillsdale hospital where Crocker lingers between life and death. The other occupants are considerably perturbed by their experiences. Of course there is no other explanation of the tradegy than pure recklessness on the part of the sedan driver and he has his lesson. He won't forget it soon. If the Hillsdale Daily's report is correct the fellow is certainly blamable.

In 95 cases out of an average hundred all these auto accidents are the direct result of somebodies' carelessness, and could have been avoided by the use of horse sense. There is only one way to stop this saturnalia of death and that is by thinning out the holders of licenses. It can be corrected in that way and it will have to be.

Who are driving autos in Michigan to-day? Well, here are a few: Several thousand women and girls who couldn't put oil into the motor without assistance; they invari bly use the accelerator when they want to avoid hitting pedestrians and set the emergency when speed is desired; a surprisingly large number of children who drive dad's car and escape only because the guardian angel hovers near; third—several thousand paralytics who are scheduled to collapse most any time; 4th—rum sodden individuals with a shot imagination that telephone poles are chasing them down the road and the air is full of animalcule.

All these birds and others are driving Juggernauts yet the state licenses all who apply.

It is an actual fact that an engineer of the railroad is no more responsible than the driver of a laden automobile should be yet any sort of person no matter how nearsighted or how deaf or how nervous can obtain a license to go out and spread death and destruction in his path. The present state of affairs will have to be changed soon. We do not mean to insinuate the young people of this accident at Quincy were any more careless or any more criminally negligent than thousands of others but the whole bunch will have to be rounded up.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said courty house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vandue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest onequarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

PUTTING HOSPITALITY INTO THE LIVING ROOM

Electricity Allows Attractive Lighting and Reading Nooks, Say General Electric Specialists.

There is no special reason why the "best room" of a farmhouse should not be an attractive living room, which the farmer and his family can enjoy every evening instead of a formal parlor, never used except when the parson comes to make his semi-annual call. A living room is meant to live in, to spend leisure time in, and on the farm, as well as in the city, most of the leisure time comes in the evening—especially the long winter evenings.

With electric lights a farmhouse living room can be made as pleasant, as happy, as any room in the house. This isn't so easy, however, with the center gas fixture or with a center fixture that combines gas and electricity. Nor can it be done successfully if the wiring is not sufficient to allow a bit of variety in the lights.

Bright Lights, Artistic Fixtures

The illustrations show specimens of living room lights which are good, bright lights and at the same time cheerfully attractive and artistic to see. Glass-shaded pendent lamps in the center of the room are economical and fairly decorative. The lamps should be frosted—that is, frosted bulbs should be used to decrease the glare.

There are other styles of fixtures that are even better looking. And some folks like semi-indirect fixtures, which give a wonderfully mellow, soft glow, no glare at all, while the light floods over the whole central part of the room. An electric lamp of high wattage—100 to 150 or even 200 watts—is necessary with a fixture of this sort, and that, of course, means more consumption of electricity and consequently a greater expense, but the delightful illumination which results is considered worth the cost. The shades for such fixtures are pleasingly decorated and can be made to harmonize with the room decorations.

Indirect and Local Lights

The principle in such an arrangement, as pointed out by lighting authorities of the General Electric Company, is one of reflected light. The light itself shines directly on the ceiling and is reflected downward upon the room without the slightest glare nor any shadows. A white ceiling or one of light tint is the best for such a plan as this.

But a fine, clear, mellow light from the center of the room is not the only illumination possible or desirable in a living room. That serves excellently when there is company. It's a fine light under which to entertain the parson.

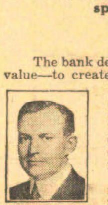
If the wiring of the house has been well planned, however, there will be one or two service outlets, or wall plugs, in the living room. And then a handsome, cozy electric reading lamp can be placed on a table in a corner or beside a comfortable chair, making a snug spot for dad to read the paper or the livestock weekly, or a pleasant nook for ma to darn stocking—and listen to the radio!

FALLACY OF SO-CALLED GUARANTEE OF BANK DEPOSITS BY LAW

An Attempt to Create Integrity by Legislative Act—Mere Words No Good Substitute for Individual Responsibility, Says Bankers' Chief.

By WALTER W. HEAD, President
The American Bankers Association

The bank deposit guaranty is an attempt to establish fictitious value—to create value by order of government. Adopted first in Oklahoma in 1909, this plan was carried into several western states and threatened, for a brief time, to become a serious issue in connection with our national banking system. Recent experience has proved, in this instance as in others, that sound economic law cannot be disregarded with impunity.



Walter W. Head

Oklahoma adopted the deposit guaranty as a result of the failure of a number of banks in the panic of 1907. The system was misnamed at the start. It was not a guaranty, in any true sense of the word, but simply a form of mutual insurance. The various state banks were assessed a limited amount, in proportion to their respective deposits, to pay the losses incurred by failures. For a time all went well. The prosperity incident to the development of territory, recently opened to settlement, prevented failures. But the deflation of 1920-1921 brought about a crisis in the guaranty system of Oklahoma. In November, 1921, the failure of the Bank of Commerce of Okmulgee brought the estimated total liabilities of the Oklahoma Guaranty Fund up to $3,354,000. Guaranty fund warrants drew 6 per cent interest, under the law which then existed, and this meant that the interest charge alone, on these outstanding warrants, amounted to two-thirds of the maximum possible annual assessment.

Failure and Repeal

Other banks failed in the following months, and the plight of the State guaranty fund became hopeless. State banks surrendered their state charters and entered the national system. By January, 1923, deposits in Oklahoma state banks were only $78,000,000, only half the total of November, 1921. This was the condition when the state legislature convened, and, after various attempts to relieve the situation by one of several expedients, the law makers repealed the guaranty sections of the banking law.

This is the story of the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty, which was born, lived and died in the brief space of fourteen years. In that time the Oklahoma plan was adopted, with some modifications, by seven other states. In none of these has it been abandoned as yet. In every instance it has been subjected to severe strain, and in most of them the question of whether or not the guaranty fund can pay existing obligations is somewhat doubtful. My own state, Nebraska, I am thankful to say, is not one of these.

The guaranty of bank deposits failed in Oklahoma and is threatened with failure in other states because it was not what it pretended to be, and, furthermore, because it violated sound, economic law. The so-called guaranty is not, in any state, what its name implies. It is not in fact a guaranty. It is an insurance plan dependent, as are all insurance plans, upon the sufficiency of the premiums which may be paid. Experience has proved that the premiums are not sufficient—and yet the insured cannot afford to submit to higher premiums. Conceived in economic sin, born in the midst of economic iniquity, the bank deposit guarantee in Oklahoma went the way of all similar attempts to overcome or defy the natural law of economics. And yet we have today in the Congress of the United States a Representative of the State of Oklahoma who will—if he has his way—foist this iniquitous, impracticable system upon the National Banking System.

Integrity Cannot Be Legislated

The fundamental difficutly with the insurance of bank deposits—to apply the correct name—is that it is an attempt to create integrity and financial ability by legislative act. Depositors in many instances were invited to accept, as their principal assurance of safety, a gilded sign upon the bank window, "This bank protected by the state guaranty fund." This protection, it has been proved, was not adequate; mere words were not a good substitute for individual responsibility, supported by stocks of gold or currency. No longer was there a premium upon the character of the banker; no longer did depositors feel the necessity of giving preference to men of character when they selected their banker. They felt that the guaranty fund took the place of that. But the guaranty of bank deposits in Oklahoma failed—as all efforts to substitute governmental dictum for integrity and ability must fail.

COW-SCALPERS

In Wisconsin the State Bankers Association is employing a man to give his entire time to the agricultural work of the association. His major activity is along the line of marketing dairy cattle. He is constantly in touch with the stock for sale in all parts of the State and is in position to refer a prospective buyer to stock of the breed and quality desired. He has the assistance of reliable field men who are good judges of dairy cattle. There is no need for any farmer to fall into the hands of unscrupulous "cow scalpers" if his bankers will only take an interest in helping him to make the right kind of connections.—Banker-Farmer.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

We cannot force our conclusions on our daughters; they must see and find out for themselves. We may be able to get a better co-operation with them if we can make our girls feel our ability to understand in part their problems because we at their age had problems.

We must try to teach our girls what the chivalry of men means and on what it is based. Men always have and always will be willing to give their lives to save women; our young girls must know this lesson by heart, and they must make themselves worth saving. We must emphasize the fact that since girls are the potential mothers of the race, it is natural that somewhat of the mother feeling shall enter into their liking for boys. Girls and women always set standards for moral behavior. The young girl must be taught to feel responsibility for her behavior with boys and she must not make it harder for them to keep straight.

We must remember that the mating instinct is strong in both boys and girls. Would that we knew enough about it to teach them the "art of mating" instead of leaving it to chance or propinquity. We know how important it is to give our young people some training for the responsibility of parenthood, and two steps are primary in this preparation: First, let them be given proper sex education, which should commence when they are young, with more definite teaching before marriage. Next, let us have better marriage laws, making it difficult for the diseased, the mentally unfit, and the habitual criminal to marry.

We cannot sit back and excuse the license of today by saying that times have changed. Times are always superficially changing—fundamentals do not change. We have made the world what it is; our young people are not responsible for the conditions in which they find themselves. If our girls are drifting away from what we think proper standards, ve are to blame. Let us examine our past with humility of spirit and pray "Lead us not into temptation," It is for us to see to it that our young people are not led into it through our refusal to respect their invidualities. We can understand them if we go at it earnestly enough, recalling our own youth, and being willing to consider their standards seriously and honestly. In this way we can help them to accept standards which make for social security and personal happiness.

Much emphasis is being placed on the necessity of home training; on the responsibilty of the home and the importance of good home influence. Let us recognize that home is no place but personality. The essential home of the child lies in the attitude of the parents toward each other. Jealousy, hypocrisy, antagonism between parents cannot be helpful to the children. Mutual understanding and harmony in love create an atmosphere more important to the development of children than food and raiment. The development of the child depends not so much upon the quantity and quality of food as upon the digestion of that taken. "Better a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." Continual fault-finding or criticism will not help the girl to turn to her parents for guidance and companionship. We must try to train our young people for a marriage of comradeship and social responsibility, and should begin with sex education at an early age, supplemented by a community program of wholesome recreation and religious education.

Let us remember that we may be hearing so much about the deplorable conditions of today because we are more interested in all phases of social hygiene, in the single standard of morals; in wholesome recreation, and in educating public opinion to the repsonsibility for vice conditions in a community. We must not cease our efforts until we have made our rural communities as well as the cities, see the need of organization in handling these conditions.

First, a survey should be made and this often can be done by the churches; then the forces of the church, the town, and the school be developed for a program of law enforcement, of recreation, and of education that instructs and stimulates ideals in conduct.

Public Educational Campaign

The State Department of Health the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Michigan Tuberculosis Association in joint conference at Lansing have agreed to cooperate in the interest of a state-wide public health educational campaign.

The work will be carried on under the direction of Doctot Olin, Commissioner of Health. Mrs. Russell, President of the Federation of Clubs, offers the largest organization of women in the state of Michigan to make effective the educational movement. Theo. J. Werle, Executive Secretary of the Michigan Tuberculosis association, with the hearty approval of the executive board of that organization has offered the clerical service of the state association for use in the campaign.

The educational work is planned along general public health lines but with special emphasis on the tuberculosis problems. Because of insufficient legislation, care for consumptives in Michigan is inadequate to the needs of the state. The renewed effort falls naturally within the interest of the official health organizatian, the State Department of Health.

The women of Michigan are actively interested in all public health work and the Michigan Tuberculosis association exists through the power of the Christmas seal to educate tuberculosis out of Michigan.

Will Plant "Late" Potatoes Earlier

Earlier planting of "late" potatoes than is practiced by many Michigan farmers would result in a crop of better quality, according H. C. Moore, extension specialist in potato culture at the M. A. C.

Russet Rurals, the variety which is said to make up ninety percent of the state late potato crop, require about 130 days of growing season to mature fully. Many growers are trying to raise their crop in 90 days, according to Moore, and the results are not entirely satisfactory.

"Instances of discrimination against Michigan potatoes on the country's markets have been reported", says Moore. "This is frequently due to immaturity and resultant poor condition of the tubers. Jobbers and consumers have sometimes associated this condition with the Russet Rural variety, which makes up the bulk of the state crop, when in reality the trouble was not due to the variety itself.

"While the planting date will vary in different sections of the state, proximity to the Great Lakes and other factors entering in to determine the average date of killing frost in the fall, growers should plan to allow their crop the full necessary growing season.

"The last of May or first ten days in June will be the best planting period in most sections. Many successful growers in the southern part of the state can plant the last of June, but those farther north should not delay their planting this long for best results.

"The earlier planting will, of course call for additional spraying and cultivation, but the extra cost will be more than offset by the better quality of the crop. Factors governing better quality also go hand in hand with increased yield, for more efficient production"

A college student at Williams College in 1842 wrote this in his diary: "Today we pursued no studies, but rather made merry with a girl school which came in a body for dancing, and frolicking of all sorts. All till late at night we barn danced and polk'd, and such was the attraction that we thought no more of books and learning but contended ourselves with singing and dancing of all sorts. These females are a queer lot, but they are fine after books and Greek authors"

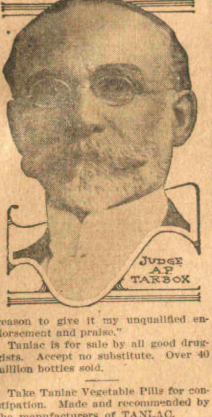
VETERAN JUDGE GIVES FACTS IN HIS CASE



Honorable A. P. Tarbox, distinguished lawyer and judge, residing at 217 West 23rd St., University Place, Neb., lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac, the famous treatment that has proved of such great benefit to him.

"If anybody knows what Tanlac will do," recently said Judge Tarbox, "it is me, for the medicine has kept me on my feet and able to work for the past two years."

Judge Tarbox has been a member of the bar since early manhood and has practiced law in Illinois, Nebraska and Oklahoma for more than a half century. He is a charter member of Farragut Post, Lincoln, G. A. R., and also prominent in fraternal order circles. Speaking further of his experience with Tanlac, Judge Tarbox said:

"Stomach trouble had been the bane of my existence even before the Civil War. Indigestion such as I had is about the worst enemy a person could have, and it kept getting worse all the time.

"I simply could not have kept going the past two years if it had not been for Tanlac. It made my weak stomach sound and wholesome, did away with all signs of indigestion and built me up in a way I had thought impossible.

"In fact, Tanlac has brought me health, strength and happiness when I was sick and suffering, so I have every reason to give it my unqualified endorsement and praise."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation. Made and recommended by the manufacturers of TANLAC.

Antique Dealer Got Rubens for Trifle

A Rubens valued at more than 1,000,000 francs has been discovered among 15 old canvases purchased for a few hundred francs by an antiquary at Roubaix, says the Petit Parisien correspondent there, according to the New York World.

The pictures were inherited by a Roubaix man from his great uncle, Henri Robelin, auctioneer for the famous Drouet salesroom in Paris in the rein of Napoleon III. He thought them virtually valueless and stowed them away. Recently they were found in the attic and sold to M. Agre, antique dealer, for a trifle.

One picture, ten inches by seven, looked like a Rubens. Agre cleaned it and was surprised to find the signature of Rubens.

Agre sent the picture, which represents sleeping Venus and a faun, to Professor Tuguyne of the Brussels Art school, an authority on Rubens, who pronounced it genuine beyond doubt.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

"Look at the boy."

"What is the boy doing?"

"He is trying to think."

"How do you know he is trying to thing?"

"I know he is trying to think because he is sucking his pencil."

"Does he think he can get ideas out of it in that way?"

"No. He probably doesn't think about it at all. It is just a nasty and dangerous habit."

"Why is it a dangerous habit?"

"Because somebody with a disease may also have been trying to suck ideas out of the same pencil."

"I never thought of that."

"Yes. It's not thinking which causes many accidents, much suffering and many deaths. Whenever you see a pencil with toothmarks on the end you will know that it has been used by somebody who doesn't think."—The Nation's Health.

Turkey's Lucky Day

Searchers after the curious have made great play with the coincidence that the conqueror entered Constantinople on a Tuesday 471 years ago, and that it was again on a Tuesday that Caliph was expelled from Constantinople and so brought to an end the reign of a dynasty which had led Turkey to great triumphs and had also plunged it into devastating disasters. The Turkish newspapers have now sought to show that Tuesday should henceforth be looked upon as a day of happy augury, and in support of this theory they recall the fact that the treaty of Lausanne was signed on a Tuesday.

"I got sick one day an' couldn't hide 'cause I were makin' tracks in the snow so I had to give in," said Solomon. "Margaret has been here, but they won't let 'er come no more 'count o' the smallpox. Sends me suthin' tasty ev'ry day er two. I tol' 'er all 'bout ye. I guess the smallpox couldn't keep 'er 'way if she knowed you was here. But she won't be 'lowed to know it. This 'ere Clarke boy has p'isoned the jail. Nobody'll come here 'cept them that's dragged. He's got it all fixed fer ye. I wouldn't wonder if he'd be glad to see ye rotted up with smallpox."

Jack and Solomon lay for weeks in this dirty, noisome jail, where their treatment was well calculated to change opinions not deeply rooted in firm soil. They did not fear the smallpox, as both were immune. But their confinement was, as doubtless it was intended to be, memorably punitive. They were "rebels"—lawbreakers, human rubbish whose offenses bordered upon treason. The smallpox patient was soon taken away, but other conditions were not improved. They slept on straw infested with vermin. Their cover and food were insufficient and "not fit fer a dog," in the words of Solomon. Some of the boys gave in and were set free on parole, and there was one, at least, who went to work in the ranks of the British.

Early one morning shells began to fall in the city. Suddenly the firing ceased. At nine o'clock all prisoners in the jail were sent for, to be exchanged. Preston came with the order from General Howe and news of a truce.

"This means yer army is lightin' out," Solomon said to him.

"The city will be evacuated," was Preston's answer.

"Could I send a message to Gin'ral Hare's house?"

"The general and his brigade and family sailed for another port at eight. If you wish, I'll take your message."

Solomon delivered to Preston a letter written by Jack to Margaret. It told of his capture and imprisonment.

The third of March had come. The sun was shining. The wind was in the south. They were not strong enough to walk, so Preston had brought horses for them to ride. There were long patches of snow on the Dorchester Heights. A little beyond they met the brigade of Putnam. It was moving toward the city and had stopped for its noon mess. The odor of fresh beef and onions was in the air.

"Cat's blood an' gunpowder!" said Solomon. "Tie me to a tree."

"What for?" Preston asked.

"I'll kill myself eatin'," the scout declared. "I'm so gol durn hungry I kin't be trusted."

"I guess we'll have to put the brakes on each other," Jack remarked.

"An' it'll be steep goin'," said Solomon.

Washington rode up to the camp with a squad of cavalry while they were eating. He had a kind word for every liberated man. To Jack he said:

"I am glad to address you as Colonel Irons. You have suffered much, but it will be a comfort for you to know that the information you brought enabled me to hasten the departure of the British."

Turning to Solomon, he added:

"Colonel Binkus, I am indebted to you for faithful, effective and valiant service. You shall have a medal."

"Gin'ral Washington, we're a-goin' to lick 'em," said Solomon. "We're a-goin' to break their necks."

"Colonel, you are very confident," the general answered with a smile.

"You'll see," Solomon continued. "God Almighty is sick o' tyrants. They're doomed."

"Let us hope so," said the commander-in-chief. "But let us not forget the words of Poor Richard: 'God helps those who help themselves.'"

CHAPTER XVI

The Great Ally.

The Selectmen of Boston, seeing the city threatened with destruction, had made terms with Washington for the British army. It was to be allowed peaceably to abandon the city and withdraw in its fleet of one hundred and fifty vessels. The American army was now well organized and in high spirit. Washington waited on Dorchester Heights for the evacuation of Boston to be completed. Meanwhile, a large force was sent to New York to assist in the defense of that city. Jack and Solomon went with it. On account of their physical condition, horses were provided for them, and on their arrival each was to have a leave of two weeks, "for repairs," as Solomon put it. They went up to Albany for a rest and a visit and returned eager for the work which awaited them.

They spent a spring and summer of heavy toil in building defenses and training recruits. The country was aflame with excitement. Rhode Island and Connecticut declared for independence. The fire ran across their borders and down the seaboard. Other colonies were making or discussing like declarations. John Adams, on his way to congress, told of the defeat of the Northern army in Canada and how it was heading southward "eaten with vermin, diseased, scattered, dispirited, unclad, unfed, disgraced." Colonies were ignoring the older order of things, electing their own assemblies and enacting their own laws. The Tory provincial assemblies were unable to get men enough together to make a pretense of doing business.

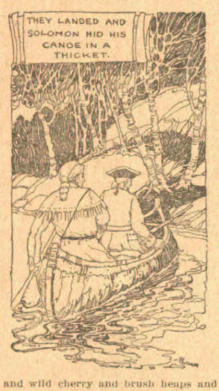
In June, by a narrow margin, the congress declared for independence, on the motion of Richard Henry Lee of Virginia. A declaration was drafted and soon adopted by all the provincial congresses. It was engrossed on parchment and signed by the delegates of the thirteen states on the second of August. Jack went to that memorable scene as an aid to John Adams, who was then the head of the war board.

In August, Howe had moved a part of his army from Halifax to Staten Island and offensive operations were daily expected in Washington's army. Jack hurried to his regiment, then in camp with others on the heights back of Brooklyn. The troops there were not ready for a strong attack. General Greene, who was in command of the division, had suddenly fallen ill. Jack crossed the river the night of his arrival with a message to General Washington. The latter returned with the young colonel to survey the situation. They found Solomon at headquarters. He had discovered British scouts in the wooded country near Gravesend. He and Jack were detailed to keep watch of that part of the island and its shores with horses posted at convenient points so that, if necessary, they could make quick reports.

Next day, far beyond the outposts in the bush, they tied their horses in the little stable near Remsen's cabin on the south road and went on afoot through the bush. Suddenly Solomon stopped and lifted his hand and listened. Then he dropped and put his ear to the ground. He beckoned to Jack, who crept near him.

"Somebody's nigh us afore an' behind," he whispered. "We better hide till dark comes. You crawl into that ol' holler log. I'll nose myself under a brushpile."

They were in a burnt slash where the soft timber had been cut some time before. The land was covered with a thick, spotty growth of poplar and wild cherry and brush heaps and logs half-rotted. The piece of timber to which Solomon had referred was the base log of a giant hemlock abandoned, no doubt, because, when cut, it was found to be a shell. It was open only at the butt end. Its opening was covered by an immense cobweb. Jack brushed it away and crept backward into the shell. He observed that many black hairs were caught upon the rough sides of this singular chamber. Through the winter it must have been the den of a black bear. As soon as he had settled down, with his face some two feet from the sunlit air of the outer world, Jack observed that the industrious spider had begun again to throw his silvery veil over the great hole in the log's end.



THEY LANDED AND SOLOMON HID HIS CANOE IN A THICKET.

He watched the process. First the outer lines of the structure were woven across the edges of the opening and made fast at points around its imperfect circle. Then the weaver dropped to opposite points, unreeling his slender rope behind him and making it taut and fast. He was no slow and clumsy workman. He knew his task and rushed about, rapidly strengthening his structure with parallel lines, having a common center, until his silken floor was in place again and ready for the death dance of flies and bees and wasps. Soon a bumble bee was kicking and quivering like a stricken ox on its surface. The spider rushed upon him and buried his knives in the back and sides of his prey. The young man's observation of this interesting process was interrupted by the sound of voices and the tread of feet. They were British voices.

"They came this way. I saw them when they turned," a voice was saying. "If I had been a little closer, I could have potted both men with one bullet."

"Why didn't you take a shot anyhow?" another asked.

"I was creeping up, trying to get closer. They have had to hide or run upon the heels of our people."

A number of men were now sitting on the very log in which Jack was hidden. The young scout saw the legs of a man standing opposite the open end of the log. Then these memorable words were spoken:

"This log is good cover for a man to hide in, but nobody is hid in it. There's a big spider's web over the opening."

There was more talk, in which it came out that nine thousand men were crossing to Gravesend.

"Come on, boys, I'm going back," said one of the party. Whereupon they went away.

Dusk was falling. Jack waited for a move from Solomon. In a few minutes he heard a stir in the brush. Then he could dimly see the face of his friend beyond the spider's web.

"Come on, my son," the latter whispered.

With a feeling of real regret, Jack rent the veil of the spider and came out of his hiding-place. He brushed the silken threads from his hair and brow as he whispered:

"That old spider saved me—good luck to him!"

"We'll keep clus together," Solomon whispered. "We got to push right on an' work 'round 'em. If anyone gits in our way, he'll have to change worlds sudden, that's all. We mus' git to them hosses 'fore midnight."

Darkness had fallen, but the moon was rising when they set out. Solomon led the way, with that long, loose stride of his. Their moccasined feet were about as noiseless as a cat's. On and on they went until Solomon stopped suddenly and stood listening and peering into the dark bush beyond. Jack could hear and see nothing. Solomon turned and took a new direction without a word and moving with the stealth of a hunted Indian. Jack followed closely. Soon they were sinking to their knees in a mossy tamarack swamp, but a few minutes of hard travel brought them to the shore of a pond.

"Wait here till I git the canoe," Solomon whispered.

The latter crept into a thicket and soon Jack could hear him cautiously shoving his canoe into the water. A little later the young man sat in the middle of the shell of birch bark while Solomon knelt in its stern with his paddle. Silently he pushed through the lilied margin of the pond into clear water. The moon was hidden behind the woods. The still surface of the pond was now a glossy, dark plane between two starry deeps—one above, the other beneath. In the shadow of the forest, near the far shore, Solomon stopped and lifted his voice in the long, weird cry of the great bush owl. This he repeated three times, when there came an answer out of the woods.

"That's a warnin' fer ol' Joe Thrasher," Solomon whispered. "He'll go out an' wake up the folks on his road an' start 'em movin'."

They landed and Solomon hid his canoe in a thicket.

Before midnight they reached Remsen's barn and about two o'clock entered the camp on lathering horses. As they dismounted, looking back from the heights of Brooklyn toward the southeast, they could see a great light from many fires, the flames of which were leaping into the sky.

"Guess the farmers have set their wheat stacks afire," said Solomon. "They're all scairt an' started fer town."

General Washington was with his forces some miles north of the other shore of the river. A messenger was sent for him. Next day the commander in chief found his Long Island brigades in a condition of disorder and panic. Squads and companies, eager for a fight, were prowling through the bush in the south like hunters after game. A number of the new Connecticut boys had deserted. Some of them had been captured and brought back. In speaking of the matter, Washington said:

"We must be tolerant. These lads are timid. They have been dragged from the tender scenes of domestic life. They are unused to the restraints of war. We must not be too severe."

Jack heard the commander in chief when he spoke these words.

First Telephone Users Unable to Find Ears

In 1877 one of the most important and difficult parts of the work of introducing the telephone into a community was teaching the subscriber the correct way of using a telephone. This still has its importance and its difficulty. So there is value as well as amusement in the experience of one of the earliest of telephone pioneers, who introduced the telephone into Delaware. He says in an account of those days:

"In 1877 and 1878 very few people had seen a telephone and fewer still had used it, so that after a subscriber had been secured it required considerable effort to impress upon him the most efficient way to use it. The people did not know, it seems, where their ears were. In fact, an editor said to me one day: 'You should have some one instruct Mr. —— how to use that telephone you have put in for him. He has rubbed the hair off the side of his head trying to find his ear.'"—Telephone Press Service.

Rev. Dellinger delivered the baccalaureate address to the high school graduates at the church Sunday evening. There was a fair sized audience in attendance and the sermon was interesting and forceful. A young man who sat next to us in the gallery nudged us approvingly several times during the address which was rather surprising, that is the nudging as the majority of young men generally disapprove of an address of the type delivered. Rev. Dellinger took a slap at amusements of wrong kind asserted that the man who grafted a dime was in the same class as the oil men in Washington, ridiculed the fellow who looks as though he had been eating oatmeal out of a gas pipe, charged that America was bound to suffer because of its lack of religion, made the women feel silly when he called them masters and to finish this will say that the Reverend is all-right but he will never be called to any large church unless he discontinues being so frank and honest.

POLICY FAVORING ELECTRIC FARMS

General Electric Co-operating to Make Electricity Available in Agriculture.

Extending electric service to the 6,500,000 farms of the United States has been made one of the principal objectives of the General Electric Company, which is desirous of seeing this immense market and field of usefulness made accessible. It is the belief of men at the head of that company that the way will be found to take electricity to the farmer on a profitable economic basis, and that when this way is discovered, the complete revolutionizing of farm life will result.

Practical difficulties have delayed farm electrification. Even where high-voltage transmission lines are carried through agricultural sections, farms are usually so widely separated as to make economical electric service to them impractical.

Transformer Cost a Problem

To build a step-down transformer substation to serve a single farm costs nearly as much as one to supply a hundred farms. Transformers are essential in tapping a high-voltage transmission line.

The farmer's problem is to get electric service at a cost low enough to make it profitable for him to use. The utility company's problem is to supply the service at a cost that will enable it to net a fair return on the invested capital. Agricultural machinery manufacturers and electrical manufacturers have before them the problem of designing implements and appliances for use in farm work that will be low in cost and high in efficiency.

A recent organization known as the Committee on the Relation of Electricity to Agriculture is tackling these basic problems of farm electrification. This committee represents several interested parties on both sides of the house—the farmers who will use the electric service and the manufacturing and business interests who will supply it.

Have Farm Women in Mind

Taking the drudgery out of women's work on the farm is, in the opinion of General Electric engineers, an even greater economic and social necessity than the improvement of the tools used by the farmer himself.

An important feature of the General Electric farm electrification program which opens up huge possibilities is highway lighting. Research by the lighting experts at Schenectady has developed a highly efficient and economical lighting unit, which has been named the Novalux unit. A dozen or so of these along a mile of country road turn it into a white way.

The joint committee which is conducting this experiment consists of four farmers, two power company representatives and the dean of the Minnesota College of Agriculture. The chairman is James F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation and vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Manufacturers of electrical equipment and of farm machinery are watching this enterprise with keen eyes. Some of the biggest of these companies are co-operating by furnishing equipment; others are taking note of the progress and method of procedure. The General Electric Company sent one of its engineers all the way from its headquarters at Schenectady, N. Y., to inspect the trial line and observe all that is being done.

Electricity and Eggs Again

Eighty eggs a day, instead of a niggardly eight, is what the hens of a Wisconsin poultryman are doing in the winter since the electric lighting of the poultry house. From all accounts, electricity has assuredly uncovered the hidden energy of the hen population.

The Freshmen of the High school enjoyed a picnic near Hoxie on Thursday.

Gwendolyn McLaughlin was home for Memorial day and the week end.

Bert Smith and family of Lansing are visiting Mrs. Smith's aunt, Mrs. Anna Pearson.

Regular meeting of Alpha Chapter, No. 288, O. E. S. on Tuesday evening, June 10th. A good attendance is hoped for.

The L. A. S. of the Methodist church will meet next week with Mrs. R. C. Young Tuesday afternoon, June 10th.

Mrs. R. F. Culver and daughter Dorothy of Jackson spent Friday with the former's parents, E. S. Knowles and wife.

George Rock who is employed at the North western Electric Company in Chicago came home Friday to spend a few days with his family.

The general picnic of the High school is being held to-day (Friday) at Durga's Shady Beach, Farewell Lake, Teachers and students are in attendance.

Franklin Hill had the misfortune to hit a calf with his Ford Coupe while driving near James Elliott's Sunday evening. He says the calf was not much hurt.

The Woman's Missionary Union of the Congregational church met in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon, June 4. A program was given and supper was served.

Beginning July 4th the Ashley & Dustin steamer lines of Detroit will run special excursions to Cedar Point Lake Erie the summer resort of the Lakes every Friday $1.75 round trip.

Lewis Sharp and his cousin, Mr. Fowler met with an accident Sunday evening while driving near Hudson, The Ford car which they were driving was overturned and the windshield broken. No one was injured.

North Adams Hive, No. 729 L. O. T. M. held their regular meeting, Wednesday evening, May 28. After the business session a social hour was enjoyed with refreshments as a "goodbye" for Mrs. Frances Rickerd who is leaving the village. The honor guest was presented with a gift from her Maccabee friends.

Marion Pierce, Jack Haskell and George Lynch while out driving Sunday evening with the Pierce Overland car sustained a collision with parties coming from the opposite direction. No one was injured but the back fender and hub cap of the Pierce car were wrecked. We have no report of the other car.

A special meeting of Abigail Rebekah Lodge No. 42 was held Thursday evening at the I. O. O. F. Hall. A number of the members of the Howard Rebekah Lodge No. 129, of Jonesville were invited guests. Degrees were conferred on a class of seven candidates. A social hour and refreshments followed the work.

The Ashley & Dustin Steamer Lines of Detroit are now running daily excursions from Detroit to Put-in-bay in their palatial steamer. Put-in-bay and the trip is said to be one of the finest trips in the country. We have season tickets for sale at the Advocate office. This trip gives you four hours in Put-in-bay the wonder Island of Lake Erie. See the caves, Perry monument and bathing beach motor boats. Round trip from Detroit only 80 cents.

The following from this vicinity received 8th grade certificates at the recent examination in Hillsdale: Fred Bohner, Osseo; Helen Boley, Addison; Wade Baily, Addison; Edward Delamater, North Adams; Arthur Daniels and Harold Gordon, Hillsdale; Clara Denning, Moscow; Mary Denning Jonesville; Frank Giddings, North Adams; Oletha Gray, Somerset. Those who passed numbered 230 and this was considered a good percentage of those ewho attended. The exams were held May 15-16.

Decoration day passed off very quietly in North Adams as a large number went to Hillsdale to attend the unveiling of the memorial. John Steward of Addison gave a very good address and the program was carried out very creditably. The effort certainly deserved a far better patronage than it received. We hope these great National days are not paling on the citizens of Michigan. It seems quite unusual as we have not even heard of a July 4th celebration to be scheduled anywhere in Hillsdale county. Are 4th of July celebrations dead?

Mr. and Mrs. William Gregg spent Sunday with Rex Northrup and family.

The Baccalaureate

Sunday evening at the Methodist church a large concourse gathered as usual to listen to the Baccalaureate sermon delivered by Rev. W. W. Gray. There are ten graduates as follows: Ruth Williams, Ruth Steveson, Florence Allen, Sarah L. Ferguson, Ethel Rogers, E. Pauline Wells, Edward H. Bloemker, Lyle M. Harrington, Paul A Marks, A. James Meeks.

The program was very well carried out. Howard Haskell opened the entertainment with a violin solo with piano accompaniment by Miss Alice Roberts. Rev. Hunt read the scripture, Rev. Reiser of the Baptist church made the invocation. The North Adams Ladies quartet composed of Mesdames Merton Wolcott, Arthur Calhoun, Lewis Meeks and Reid Shepard rendered very good selections. Miss Mildred Miner of Hillsdale gave a solo.

Rev. Gray in his remarks called special attention to the 'building' of character' reputation and ideals of life; he specially eulogized Abraham Lincoln calling attention to his great ideals, his speech at the Gettysburg battlefield and other high points in his life. Rev Gray's special words to the graduates were full of excellent advice and suggestion though short. The church was beautifully resplendent with flowers and the occasion an enjoyable one. Commencement occured Thursday, June 5 at Knowles Opera House.

Outdoor Pictures

On Tuesday evening the business men of the village met at the Council Room to arrange for the regular summer program of outdoor movies for at least one evening each week. J. M. Williams was appointed to supervise the preparations and to appoint committees to look after films, seats and the erection of a board for the screen.

E. C. Williams offered the free use of his vacant lot north of the Corey Hat Shop for the purpose, suggesting that seats and screen could be built here for constant use during the summer, and if it was desirable to have any other meetings there it was all right with him It was decided to accept the proposition and the place will be put in readiness soon.

The business men wish to announce that a vigorous effort will be made to improve the quality of the films this season, and as soon as the weather is suitable the films will be shown probably on Wednesday evenings. This is one of the attractions which North Adams is proud of and the people of the surrounding country are most cordially invited to come out and see these pictures. You can drive to town on excellent roads from any direction and the relaxation is just what you need after the day's work.

TNE ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT

The annual commencement of the North Adams High school occurred Thursday evening, June 5th at Knowles opera house with all the auspicious floral decorations and evidences of the community's interest in the young people who graduated as usual to the fore.

Hillsdale College orchestra furnished the prelude, Rev. Virgil Hunt pronounced the invocation.

The salutatorian of the class, James Meeks. chose for his subject "Starters" and he certainly handled it in a way which left no place for criticism.

Florence Powers rendered a pleasing solo.

The Valedictorian, Ruth Steveson chose for her subject "To-night we Launch, Where Shall We Anchor" and to say she did the subject ample justice would be superfluous. It was ideally demonstrated from start to finish.

A vocal solo was rendered by Lee Butterfield.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. J. C. DeVinney on the subject "The Victory Supreme" and his discouse was given the undivided attention of a highly interested audience.

The orchestra again rendered a selection, after which Superintendent R. C. Young prepared to pronouce the last class dismissal for all time from his tutelage. In carefully chosen words and measured accents he commended them for perseverence and bade them a fond farewell.

Rev. W. W Gray of the Methodist church pronounced the benediction and the stirring strains of the orchestra's finale brought the close with its congratulations and little offerings of the first lap covered in the race of life. Thus passed the Class of 1924 into outer life and another year has become history.

Everett Barber of Camden while returning home last week from Hicksville Ohio was the eye witness to a horrible automobile accident. A man driving a new Jewett sedan at a speed of over 50 miles signaled to go by, Mr. Barber turned out and the car had hardly passed him when it slewed on the slippery road and turned four times over. Mr. Barber and another party driving another car hastened to the wreck and lifted it off the occupant and as they did so the man came with the car. The steering wheel had broken and the steering rod had penetrated the man's heart. They carried the man into a farmer's house near by and called the undertaker Nothing was found on the dead man's person for identification, the license number was the only clue.

Athletic Association Banquet

One of the most interesting events of the past school year occurred Wednesday evening when about one hundred people were served at a banquet at the Methodist church honoring the outgoing Senior class and the members of the 1923-1924 athletic association. The old rose and gray of the Senior class and the green and white of the basket ball team colors were brought out in colored candles green and white, lilacs, lilies of the valley and pansies, all under a cleverly arranged canopy of the colors in crepe paper. Coach Jefferson of Hillsdale college was the principal speaker of the evening and he emphasized strongly the outstanding qualities necessary to the making of an athlete, a successful student and the men and women which America most needs today.

Ruth Steveson acting as toast mistress proved she was equal to the occasion.

Ruth Williams speaking for the Senior class voiced the appreciation of all her classmates of the work done the past year by teachers and friends in their behalf.

The Juniors were asked to arise and each one gave a minute speech. Not one hesitated, proving that there is some fine material in our next years Senior class.

Captains Ralph Wolcott and Charlotte Lane of the boys and girls basket ball teams then took a few minutes to thank everyone for all that had been done to push athletics in the year and promised that North Adams would keep up its fine record and even do a little better next year.

Yellmaster, Keith Williams introduced considerable pep by leading class yells and songs and by a few remarks in behalf of the next year's Senior class.

Superintendent Young then followed with a short talk emphasizing much that Coach Jefferson had said. This was much applauded as every student has the young feeling in their hearts. Two vocal numbers by Elta Rock and Jean Young were much enjoyed. At the close of the program James Post in a few well chosen words voiced the desire of the assembly to organize the old Alumni Association. This was done with Mrs. Grace Williams as president, she is to appoint other committees for the coming year.

This banquet put on by the Aid Society of the church, aided by material furnished by the school was something that will ever remain a beautiful memory in connection with the closing year of 1924.

Watch Your Dog

The authorities are calling attention to the epidemic of rabies in dogs which has developed extensively round-about. There has been one case in Reading and three in Allen. So if your favorite dog shows strange symptoms and don't act right, better shut him up until you find out the cause. He might be suffering from some form of rabies and may at any time run amuck biting every person whom he meets or other animals in his frenzy. There is no known cure for the trouble and the sooner a cat or dog so affected, is dead the better.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Alpena—Gerald Eaton, an electrician in the employ of the Fletcher Paper Co., fell 20 feet from a pole, suffering a fractured skull.

Battle Creek—Edwin C. Nichols, 76 pioneer president of the Nichols & Shepard Threshing Machine Co. here, is dead after a short illness.

Port Huron—A marine freight line is now in operation between Port Huron and Saginaw and Bay City, the Port Huron Terminal Co. has announced. The steamer Rolling will make weekly trips between these ports.

Saginaw—Robert R. Waskoviak, 39 years old, a veteran of nine years' service in the navy, residing alone on a little farm near Freeland, was killed instantly when a charge of dynamite being used to blast stumps accidentally exploded.

Petoskey—Petoskey's proposed new city charter, providing a new plan for selection of city offices, has received the approval of Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck. If the voters approve it, Petoskey will be the first city to adopt the pre-primary convention plan of nominaion.

Flint—Alphonse R. Duboise, Flint contractor, was awarded a judgment of $92,637.09 against the defunct Commonwealth corporation in the Genesee circuit court, the largest award in the history of the county. The corporation failed to complete a building contract with Duboise.

Detroit—A verdict of $11,393.75 has been awarded to Bernard Cole, 6-year-old son of Nicholas J. Cole, against the Wagner Baking Co. The boy lost the sight of one eye and is said to be losing the sight of the other as a result of being struck down by a delivery truck belonging to the baking company.

Pontiac—Charles Sewell, 66, a farmer living three miles west of Ortonville, was drowned when he fell into an old well on the farm. His body was discovered by his wife. Sewell was subject to heart attacks and is believed to have fallen into the well while suffering a dizzy spell. He leaves a widow and three children.

Detroit—A jury awarded a verdict of $7,500 in favor of Allan Campbell, a plasterer, against the Haughton Electric & Machinery Co. of Toledo, on the grounds that the company's negligence was responsible for the crushing of the plaintiff's head and shoulder by a falling weight in the elevator shaft of a downtown department store. He asked $10,000.

Pontiac—A 15-foot fall from a step ladder on which he was standing in an attempt to put awnings on the second story windows of his home, resulted fatally for Richard E. Cragg, 43 years old, assistant chief inspector of the Wilson Foundry and Machine company. He hit on his head, fracturing his skull, and died in a few minutes. He leaves his widow and two sons.

Detroit—Parlor car service on the D. U. R. between Detroit and Flint has been established. Two specially built cars have been added to the line, making three daily trips each way. Each has been equipped with 28 overstuffed, movable chairs, nine of which are placed in the smoking room. Each car in addition to a motorman and conductor, is under the care of a porter.

Monroe—Monroe's Masonic bodies realized a dream when the formal opening of the Masonic Temple took place recently. Several years ago the Masons purchased the National Guard armory and since last September the work of remodeling has been under way. The building has been remodeled to suit their needs. The value of the building, grounds and equipment is estimated at $150,000.

Battle Creek—The whining of a dog probably saved the lives of six persons when the farm home of J. W. Partridge, south of Battle Creek, was totally destroyed by flames. Mrs. Partridge was awakened by the dog and upon opening the bedroom door found the fire raging. While helping her husband and four children out of the house, she was thrown into the basement when the floor of the living room gave way. She escaped with slight injuries.

Port Huron—When the board of supervisors meet the last week in June the county road commission will ask for an appropriation to purchase equipment and to meet the expense of snow removal from highways during the winter months. During the past winter roads in the Thumb section were closed several times by heavy falls of snow. Some residents and officials believed that it was up to the county highway department or the state highway department to take care of snow removal.

Lansing—Sophomore and junior forestry students at the Michigan Agricultural college are to spend four weeks on the property of the Johannesburg Manufacturing company, of Johannesburg, Mich., this summer, as a part of their course. At the camp the students will gain first hand knowledge of practical lumbering operations from the time the trees are marked until they are loaded on cars for shipment, after being cut into lumber, as the company owns a sawmill and much wooded property around the village.

Benzonia—To provide cherry growers of northern Michigan with constant information regarding crop conditions, 80 cherry growers of this vicinity have organized the Michigan Sweet Cherry Growers Association. The object is to check and disseminate reports on market conditions. The association will do no selling. Headquarters will be, in Beulah. Members will report crop prospects, sales and offers and daily shipments to the secretary for compilation and redistribution to members through the local co-operative associations.

Lansing—The new city directory of Lansing, now being compiled, indicates a population of 80,000.

Detroit—The City of Detroit has sold an issue of $19,680,000 in city bonds carrying an interest rate of 4½ per cent.

Ironwood—Heavy rains have so swollen the streams in this part of the Upper Peninsula that fishermen declare good trout fishing will be delayed.

Grand Rapids—John Williams, 35 years old, was shot through the knee when a rifle with which he was hunting gophers was accidentally discharged.

Shelby—Oceana County is planning a cherry carnival. It is to be staged during the cherry season and is to advertise the cherries of this section. Oceana is one of the largest cherry growing sections in the State.

Lake Odessa—Stepping from behind a parked automobile in front of another car driven by Galen Beaver, of Lake Odessa, Mrs. Manuel Kussmaul, 50 years old, living near Woodland, received injuries that resulted in her death.

Pontiac—Mrs. Valeria Wilson, 37 years old, wife of James Wilson, Detroit, is dead from injuries suffered when her husband's car collided with a Detroit-Pontiac bus on Woodward avenue, between Pontiac and Birmingham.

Escanaba—Ralph Barnes, 28 years old, was injured fatally at the plant of the Northwestern Cooperage Co., at Gladstone, when he was crushed beneath a falling log. Barnes had been employed at the plant for only a short time.

Manistee—Big trout can still be caught in this region, J. F. Blue, of Arcadia, proved when he brought in a 20½-inch speckled beauty he had taken near his home. The fish weighed 4¾ pounds and is the largest speckled brook trout ever officially recorded here.

Blanchard—Walter Sheets, 18 years old, son of a farmer, was found dead under his overturned automobile in a ditch east of Blanchard. He was driving home after attending church services here and is believed to have been blinded by bright lights on another automobile.

Flint—A, Clyde Holden, 25 years old, Flint, was instantly killed and his companion Leonard Tryon, of Ashtabula, O., fatally injured near Erie, Pa., as the result of their automobile striking a pole after having gone into the ditch and turned over once, due to the explosion of a front tire.

Kalamazoo—Trapped in a boiler which he was repairing at the municipal lighting plant, Forest Wedell, a city employe, was terribly scalded by steam that escaped into the boiler through a leaky valve. His shouts attracted other workmen who rescued him after a part of his body had been virtually cooked.

Tustin—Emil Johnson, 30 years old, farmer, who lived northwest of this village, was killed almost instantly on Mackinaw trail near here when struck by an automobile driven by Frederick A. Gorham, Jr., of Grand Rapids. Johnson stepped out of an automobile into the path of the Gorham car coming from the opposite direction.

Detroit—A million dollars is to be spent by Wayne County in replacing the bridge in Dix avenue over the River Rouge which was recently condemned by the War Department. Paul W. Voorhies, prosecuting attorney, has been requested to draw up a resolution for the appropriation. The War Department ordered that the new bridge be completed July 1, 1926.

Ludington—The two-year paving program on the West Michigan Pike which will connect Chicago and other western points by a paved route with Western and Northern Michigan has been started. When completed in 1925 it will give a paved highway from Chicago to Traverse City, a distance of about 400 miles and one of the longest paved lines in the country.

Lansing—Current reports to the effect that Michigan dealers are not selling as many cars as they did a year ago, were put to flight by the compilation of Department of State records which show that during April of this year titles were issued for 20,621 new passenger cars and 1,708 new trucks. The records for April, 1923, show that during that month the same dealers sold only 15,347 passenger cars and 1,322 trucks.

Lansing—Archie J. Robinson, 55 years old, an employe of the New York Central railroad, was fatally injured when caught under the trucks of a car he was repairing at the roundhouse. He died while being taken to the hospital. Robinson was standing beneath the car which had been raised by a crane. The car started to tip and Robinson attempted to jump but was pinned before he could escape. He leaves his widow and one son.

Detroit—The Supreme Court has recognized the right of the D. & C. to discontinue its Mackinac line of steamers furnishing transportation between Detroit and Mackinac Island and intermediate Lake Huron ports. Service on the Mackinac line was discontinued after the close of navigation in 1920 after restrictions arising from the United States Seamen's Act on the Great Lakes made further operation unprofitable. Cities and persons brought suit to compel the company to resume service on the grounds it was a common carrier.

Petoskey—Still in pursuit of the $15,000,000 bubble which has floated beyond their reach for the last 14 years, the 6,250 members of the Ottawa and Chippewa indian tribes have been struggling to raise a $1 individual assessment. The $6,250, if it can be raised, will be sent to Daniel B. Henderson, a Washington attorney, to pay him for conducting a proposed fight for claims due the Indians, they say, under alleged hidden clauses of the Treaties of 1836 and 1855, whereby the tribes ceded the northern half of Michigan to the U. S.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Tax Reduction Bill Goes to the President—Immigration Measure Signed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

UNLESS the prognosticators of Washington are wrong, the tax reduction bill will be a law before this reaches the reader. The conference report on the measure was accepted by the senate by a vote of 60 to 6, and by the house by a vote of 376 to 9. Backed by these overwhelming majorities it went to the President, and congressional leaders were confident that Mr. Coolidge would sign it. First, of course, he asked the opinion of the Treasury department, whose experts analyzed the bill. It was said that Secretary Mellon had at no time advised the President to veto the measure and that he had come to the conclusion that it should be signed as representing an improvement over the old law.

Of the six senators who voted against the conference report, four are radicals—Brookhart, Frazier, Norris and Johnson of Minnesota. The others were Ernst of Kentucky and Moses of New Hampshire, who favored the original Mellon plan. In the house the nine who voted in the negative were all Mellon plan supporters and all Republicans. They were: Fenn (Conn.), Tilson (Conn.), Merrit (Conn.), Mills (N. Y.), Wainwright (N. Y.), McFadden (Pa.), Philips (Pa.), Hill (Md.), and Moores (Ind.).

Talk of a big deficit due to the bonus law and the tax reduction provided for by the bill faded away. Representative Green told the house: "The actuary of the treasury assured me that there would be a sufficient surplus for the fiscal year 1924 to pay the bonus twice over. The actuary's figures also show that the 1925 surplus, without including the bonus, which can be taken care of out of the previous surplus, will be $138,000,000. The difference between the present bill and the Mellon plan is only the very slight sum of $22,000,000, of which $10,000,000 is in the individual income and corporation taxes and the balance in the excise taxes. One-half of the 25 per cent reduction comes out of the fiscal year 1924, the other half out of the fiscal year 1925. The present bill reduces taxes $22,000,000 more than the Mellon plan would have done."

Later estimates by members of the house committee on appropriations indicated that the financial status of the government with the enactment of these two measures would be even more favorable than had been thought. This is in part due to the probability that aggregate appropriations by congress this session for purposes included in the original budget recommendation will amount to about $7,000,000 less than the total recommended by the budget.

President Coolidge transmitted to congress a request from the veterans' bureau for an appropriation of $127,817,898 to defray the costs of the soldiers' bonus until July 1, 1925. Of this total, $1,188,500 would be for administrative expenses.

SENATORS BORAH, Fess and Willis cast the only votes in the negative when the postal salary increase bill was passed by the senate. By this measure, which then went to the house, the salaries of 300,000 postal employees would be increased by an average of $200 each annually, the total being estimated at $60,000,000. This is the schedule of salaries provided for by the bill:

Clerks and carriers, $1,700 to $2,100; special clerks at first and second class offices, $2,200 to $2,300; substitute and temporary clerks, 65 cents per hour; watchmen, laborers and messengers, $1,450 to $1,550; marine carriers, $2,400.

Railway mail service: clerks (seven grades), $1,900 to $2,700; supervisory officials, $2,800 to $4,500; substitute clerks, $1,850.

Rural delivery: no change in salaries, but allowance of 4 cents a mile a day for maintenance of equipment, amounting up to $220 for average route.

Postmasters: no change in first class salaries between $3,200 and $8,000; second class increased from $2,300 to $2,400.

Attached as a rider to this bill was an amendment offered by Senator Borah which requires full publicity of political contributions at intervals of ten days during all campaigns for election of members of congress and all officials of the government, the publication of the amount of any deficit at the end of the campaign and public announcement thereafter monthly of the amounts received from each contributor to wipe out the deficit.

STILL expressing his objections to the exclusion of Japanese by law instead of by treaty, President Coolidge signed the immigration bill and it became a law. He justified his action by the general excellence of the bill and the imperative need of the legislation to take the place of the quota act of 1921, expiring on June 30. As to the Japanese exclusion, he said:

"I gladly recognize that the enactment of this provision does not imply any change in our sentiment of admiration and cordial friendship for the Japanese people, a sentiment which has had, and will continue to have, abundant manifestation. The bill rather expresses the determination of the congress to exercise its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration, instead of leaving it to international arrangements."

Over in Japan the signing of the bill, though no surprise, was the signal for great outbursts of indignation. A formal protest against the exclusion clauses was drafted, approved by the cabinet and cabled to Ambassador Hanihara for presentation to Secretary Hughes. It is a dignified protest, based on the alleged violation of an existing treaty with the United States—the gentlemen's agreement. In Tokyo and elsewhere there were big mass meetings at which the American law was denounced. At one of them Professor Uyesugi of the Imperial university concluded a fiery address with the words: "A storm is coming; prepare." Comments in the Japanese press are bitter and inflammatory pamphlets are numerous.

Premier Kiyoura told the cabinet he would recommend Viscount Kato as the next premier. The present government will resign about June 6.

TO BRING the navy up to the 5-5-3 ratio, the house passed a bill authorizing construction of eight scout cruisers and six river gunboats and extensive improvements to six battleships. The total cost is estimated at $111,000,000. Money for elevation of guns on thirteen battleships was refused on the ground that it would violate the arms conference treaty.

ADVOCATES of the acceptance of Henry Ford's bid for Muscle Shoals have been trying for a long time to get it to the floor of the senate for debate and a vote, and last Tuesday they succeeded, although the majority of the agriculture committee was firmly opposed to the Ford offer and had twice rejected a motion that the bill accepting it be reported out favorably. By a bit of parliamentary juggling it was brought about that the Norris bill for government ownership of the project was reported out favorably as a substitute and carried with it the Ford bill. It was expected the debate in the senate would be heated and that a vote would be reached in a few days. Heflin, Pat Harrison and Underwood, presidential aspirant, prepared long speeches in favor of the Ford bid. Norris leads the opposition to the automobile maker and is assisted by Magnus Johnson and Jim Reed. It was noted that Ralston, who yearns for the presidential nomination, straddled the fence when the Norris and Ford bills were voted on by the committee. He voted "present" each time. Cautious, but not likely to do him much good with either side.

BOTH the Presbyterian general assembly, at Grand Rapids, Mich., and the Methodist general conference, at Springfield, Mass., took important action last week. The former adopted a resolution "pledging all its energies to the outlawing of war," but rejected amendments pledging loyalty to the government and allying the assembly with peace organizations carrying on campaigns of propaganda. It renewed its approval of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead law. It favored the constructive control of the motion picture industry and named as one of the evils the caricaturing of Protestant ministers. It adopted condemnatory resolutions against divorce, use of tobacco, child labor, harmful amusements, vile literature, gambling, profanity and in favor of Sabbath rest day for actors, and at least one day's rest in seven for all in commercial employment. The fight on Dr. Harry Emmerson Fosdick was renewed, with William Jennings Bryan as its leader.

The Methodist conference, by a decisive vote, lifted the ban upon amusements, except "those which cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." The definitions given in the special advices in the discipline were altered to read:

"We lift up a solemn note of warning and entreaty particularly against attendance upon immoral, questionable and misleading theatrical and motion-picture performances."

A proposal to change the Apostles' creed, substituting the words "Christ's Holy Church" for "the Holy Catholic Church," was rejected by a close vote.

The trial board of the Protestant Episcopal church met in Cleveland and began hearing the charges against Rt. Rev. William Montgomery Brown, former bishop of Arkansas, who is accused of teaching doctrines contrary to those held by the Episcopal church.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE has warned both Republicans and Democrats in unmistakable language that he will head a third party ticket this year unless the two big conventions "demonstrate to the people whether either of those parties can and will purge itself of the evil influences which have long dominated them." This he says in a letter to Attorney General Ekern of Wisconsin. He also denounces the communists and charges that they are seeking to take control of the farmer-labor progressive convention that will meet June 17 in St. Paul. He declares that all progressives should refuse to participate in any movement which makes common cause with any communist organization.

Al Smith's campaign managers have received information that the McAdoo forces in the Democratic convention, if and when their candidate fails to obtain the nomination, will fall back on Carter Glass of Virginia and try to put him across. This is somewhat alarming to the Smith cohorts, for they admit that Senator Glass would have great strength as a candidate. He was one of Woodrow Wilson's closest friends and his record, both as secretary of the treasury and as senator, is excellent. Among the McAdoo leaders who are said to favor Glass as second choice are Col. Edward M. House, Bernard Baruch and Thomas L. Chadbourne.

David L. Rockwell, general manager of the McAdoo campaign, announced that former United States Senator James D. Phelan of California will make the speech placing McAdoo in nomination. Four years ago in San Francisco he presented the name of Edward L. Doheny for the vice presidential nomination. His selection now is regarded as a move to offset rumors linking McAdoo with the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Phelan is one of the leading Roman Catholics of the Pacific coast.

CHANCELLOR MARX of Germany and his cabinet resigned on Monday as the new reichstag was about to open. President Ebert invited Herr Hergt, nationalist leader, to form a government, with the proviso that he pledge himself to support the Dawes plan. This he declined to do, so Marx was asked to undertake the task again and accepted. The opening session of the reichstag was turned into a farce by the boisterous attacks of the Communists and Nationalists on each others' leaders and pets. Ludendorff was the special butt of the jibing.

MEMORIAL DAY, with all its beautiful and imposing ceremonies and its poignant memories, was celebrated Friday. Business was suspended throughout the land and all the people did honor to the memories of those who have given their lives to their country.

Americans in Samoa Protest Naval Rule

Pago Pago, Tutuila, American Samoa.—Residents of American Samoa again are agitating for the immediate establishment by congress of a civil government to take the place of the present administration and control of the island by the United States Navy department. A petition containing the signatures of 3,000 residents has been forwarded to President Coolidge at Washington and asking that congress take early action in the matter.

Previous efforts of the islanders to obtain a government of their own liking have yielded no results and the people are now dismayed and want their status determined by congressional action.

Several citizens of the United States resident in Tutuila have written to their congressmen about certain complaints against the local administration and have received replies that nothing can be done because American Samoa is not classed or accepted as being part of the United States.

In making complaints to the secretary of the navy, replies have been received which state in effect that all power remains with the naval commandant of the United States station at Tutuila, also called "the governor of American Samoa."

The governor is invested with and exercises absolute authority and this is repugnant to the American citizens who pay taxes.

Fortune favors the brave.

SICK WOMAN MADE HAPPY

Entirely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mart, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build me up as I was all run-down, nervous and sick. I ached and hurt all over so that I was often compelled to go to bed, and I had to have most of my work done. No medicine seemed to help me until one of my neighbors who was taking the Vegetable Compound insisted on me trying a bottle of it. The medicine helped me from the first, and the best of all is that I can even sew again without that awful, nervous feeling I was used to having. And I used to take crying spells, with such a blue feeling that I cannot explain. Now all that has left me. I feel so cheerful, and I have gained in weight, sleep well and eat hearty. Oh! I wish I had words to express what this medicine has done for me! I am a housekeeper and do everything from the sewing to the washing now and it doesn't hurt me. You may use my letter in any way you wish. I will be glad to help any suffering woman to the road of health and happiness."—Mrs. B. F. BRANNON, 404 Travis Ave., Mart, Texas.

The Farm Journal Petition on the Steps of the Capitol

On January 7 this great Petition, over two and one-quarter miles in length, containing 345,516 names of farmers, asking for a reduction in governmental expenses which would permit a reduction in taxes, was presented to Congress. The picture shows the great Petition being explained to Speaker Gillett of the House of Representatives, who is shown on the left. He is deeply interested. In the center is Congressman George P. Darrow, of Pennsylvania, who presented the Petition. Charles F. Jenkins, of The Farm Journal, stands next. Speaker Gillett declined to count the names and took Mr. Jenkin's word for it that they were all there. It looks so, does it not?

To Inspect Biggest Land Development

The Rosebush Ranch, a ten thousand acre livestock farm near Crystal Falls, Iron County, which is called the biggest single agricultural developement ever undertaken in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan will be inspected by agriculturalists of the state on June 10. A meeting has been called for the Ranch on that date by the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau and the Rotary Club of Crystal Falls, cooperating.

The Rosebush Ranch, established in 1920, is said to be not only the largest but also one of the most interesting projects of its kind ever undertaken in the state, While it is under private management as a purely commercial development, the methods demonstrated in the operation of the ranch are said to be of value to the agriculture of the entire Upper Peninsula, proving that thousands of acres left by the lumberjack can be reclaimed for agricultural purposes.

The ranch is mostly pine and hardwood cutover lands, with sandy loam and clay soils, typical of large sections of the Upper Peninsula. About 300 acres a year are being cleared. Dynamite, tractors and other modern aids to the land clearer are in use at the ranch.

The proprietors own their own saw mill, build their own roads, and generally illustrate a practical large scale development operation.

The farm is being developed as a cattle ranch for the purpose of raising and breeding high quality beef cattle. The 350 Herefords there now are to be increased by 600 head by next fall, it is said. The ranch raises its own hay for feed.

Plan Feeders Day At M. A. C. June 18

Results of experimental work during the past year in the feeding of beef cattle, hogs and horses carried out by the animal husbandry department of M. A. C. will be given out and the animals placed on exhibit on Wednesday, June 18, designated as Livestock Feeders' Day at the college, according to Prof. G. A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department.

While details of the complete program have not yet been worked out, it is certain that two speakers of national reputation in livestock circles will attend the meeting, Prof. Brown asserts. The forenoon will be devoted to a trip of inspection about the barns, where the animals used in the experiment will be on display.

Three lots of Texas calves which have had different feeds will be displayed. While all three lots are said to have done well, there is, according to Prof. Brown, considerable difference in the degree of finish reached and in the relative costs of the gains in the three lots. The cattle will be valued by expert market men during the week preceding June 18, and complete figures on the cost of production and the gains on each lot will be given out.

In expertmental work with hogs eight lots have been used, with as many different feeding methods. Much valuable information on the cost of pork production and the most satisfactory methods is said to be provided by the results of his experiment.

Two lots of nine horses each, which have done ordinary farm work during the experimental period, were also given experimental feeds and the results checked. The value of alfalfa as a feed for work horses has been an important question in this experiment.

The complete program for the day will be arranged within a few days, according to Prof. Brown.

Boys' and Girls Corn Growimg Contesf

Hillsdale County has been divided into two districts including a few townships in Lenawee County and some boy or girl living in these two districts is going to win a free trip to Chicago next December, when boys and girls club winners meet from the whole United States as guests of the International Livestock and Grain Show Committee. The trip will be won by the most efficient boy or girl corn grower in these two districts.

District No. 1—A trip will be given by the First National Bank of Hillsdale, Michigan and will include the following townships; Litchfield, Scipio, Moscow, Allen, Fayette, Hillsdale, North Adams, Reading, Cambria, Camden, Woodbridge. The exhibit in this district will be some time during the fall at Pinkham & Wright Garage.

District No. 2—The trip will be given by the Thompson Savings Bank, Hudson, Michigan, and will include the following townships of Hillsdale County; Somerset, Wheatland, Pittsford, Wright, Jefferson, Ransom, and Amboy. In Lenawee County, the following townships; Woodstock, Roland, Hudson, Medina Rome, and Dover.

The expenses of these trips to Chicago next December will be borne by the above named banks. The banks, however, will take no activities in the conduct of the corn contest. This will be managed and supervised directly by Mr. Mattias and Mr. Hedrick, of these districts. Any boy or girl residing in the above named townships or districts are eligible to compete in this contest. The boys residing in Hillsdale County may enroll by filing their names with L. H. Matthais, Hillsdale county Club Agent, Hillsdale, Michigan. The boys residing in Lenawee County may enroll by filing their names with George S. Hedrick, County Club Agent, Adrian Mich. All enrollments must be made by June 15.

The following are rules of the Contest; 1. Every boy must be between ten and twenty, inclusive. 2. He must enroll in the regular Corn Club Project, Boys and Girls Clubs, which means giving his name to Mr. Matthias at Hillsdale, or to Mr. Hedrick, at Adrian. 3. Boys between the ages of ten to fourteen are required to keep costs accounts on a definite one half acre of corn. Boys older than fourteen must do the same on a whole acre. 4. The winner will be the boy who scores highest towards; (a) Growing the largest yield with the least cost. (b) Making a complete record of all expenses which go into producing the crop. (c) Selecting the best ten ears of utility type seed corn to be exhibited at the Thompson Savings Bank, Hudson, next fall at its second annual Corn Show, (d) Writing a story of the points noticed in the carrying on of the project.
5. In determining the score.

Yield minus Expenses is given 50 per cent. Record of Costs Account 10 percent. Exhibit of Seed Corn 30 per cent. Story of Experiences 10 per cent. Total 100 per cent.

The winner shall in addition to winning the Chicago Trip be eligible for all the regular County and State Club honors. All members who complete the contest will receive the certificate of achievement awarded on Club project finishers. Corn already planted may be used if a definite plot is marked off and the enrollment made. There will be Club meetings held once each month to discuss and learn from each others experiences. As soon as the enrollments are all in, an organization meeting will be arranged.

Michigan keeps right on advancing commercially. Homer will erect a big milk condensory; Wyandotte will have a monstrous cement plant of 30,000 sacks daily capacity; Grand Rapids harbor is being improved by dredging for the summer's navigation.

"Rome had its five great avenues of approach—the Flaminia, Pracenestina, Aurelia, Ostiensis, and Appian Ways. Washington has none worthy of the name, but in this proposed terminus of the Lee Highway will be erected the first and most magnificent of all possible entrances to the National Capitol.

Another Highway Being Built

One of our subscribers from Moscow township dropped in the other day and informed us that the remaining poor road from the Knowles school house east and north into Moscow village to connect with M-23 is rapidly being graded and put in shape for resurfacing by the contractor's gang in charge of Mr. Collins.

The grade between the school house and Painter's corner is completed and operations are on the way toward Moscow. Mr. Painter says the right-of-way has changed so much in appearance you would hardly recognize it, giving an almost unobstructed view from the school house east, which is pleasing news after so many years of weary mud, sand and ruts. The turn north was much too short. The new survey brought the middle of the turn on the spot where the big oak tree stood on Orson Crapser's land, so the tree was neatly removed with dynamite.

For a number of years the cost bugbear was thrown up to the property holders as prohibitory, but an investigation disclosed a good share of this as bunk put up to keep the road from construction. A considerable amount came from parties in outlying zones who did not want the road

Landholders along the route, Thomas Brown, Mr. Knowles, Mr. Webb. Mr. Combs, Orson Crapser, Frank Painter, Harmon Fowle, George Durga, Lucy Booth and Mr. Keefus have all learned the actual expense to them is considerably less than they expected, and most of them would not have old conditions back at any price.

With this four miles of road completely graveled twenty-five feet wide there is easy access to Jackson and all points north. Chicago and Detroit will be within easy drive by automobile at all times of the year.

Congress Hits The People

The proposed 10 per cent tax on Radio outfits is probably the most irritating of the "nuisance taxes" that could be devised. It would deprive the public of the benefits of information and culture and would yield the government about $10,000,000, much of which would be eaten up by the horde of office holders necessary to collect it. And that is about the way it works in most of the little incidentals which the government is seeking to levy on.

The tax sharks have carried their propaganda to a point where human nature revolts, and the Universe inside and out, everything in it and the human bodies will sooner or later be obliged to pay tribute to the tax-god.

Memorial Bridge Recommendations

Senate Document No. 95 contains the President's recommendation regarding the propsed Memorial Bridge connecting Arlington, the National Cemetery, with Washington. It quotes President Coolidge in part, as follows:

"The Arlington Memorial Bridge project has many important features which make it the greatest single memorial project undertaken by any nation in recent times.

"Following immediately after the Lincoln Memorial in time of construction it fortunately supplements and completes that great memorial in finishing the landscape in its vicinity and carries the Mall treatment of Washington and L'Enfant across the Potomac to Arlington and up to the last resting place of the designer of the original plan of the Capital at the portico of the Lee Mansion.

"In addition to this relationship, there is the compelling patriotic motive in the project of a direct broad boulevard from the Capitol by way of the Lincoln Memorial and on across the broad and dignified bridge as a route for the Nation's fallen heroes to their last resting place in the Arlington National Cemetery.

"There is a third great motive in the complete plan, and that is the provision of a magnificent entrance to Washington from Virginia for the Lee Highway coming across the entire country from Los Angeles, Calif.

"The fourth, and perhaps the greatest of all, is the symbol of the binding together of the North and South in one indivisible Union knowing no sectional lines.

"A superb view of the bridge, the Lincoln Memorial, the Washington Monument, and the Capitol will be enjoyed by the traveler entering the Nation's Capitol over this route. From the Arlington Heights the Lee Highway would descend toward Washington, keeping on the axis of the Mall, passing over the stream between the mainland and Columbia Island by a single arch bridge, and across the axis of the island, continuing its course to the water's edge on the main channel, where it is planned to construct a water gate facing and corresponding to that of the Lincoln Memorial previously described.

LOW RATES AND LIBERAL USE IS AIM ON THE ELECTRIC FARM

Minnesota Experimenters Suggest Consumption of 300 KWH Per Month, and Set Up Rate of Five Cents Per KWH After Fixed Charges.

To induce farmers who electrify their farms to use as much as 300 kilowatt hours of energy a month, by reason of attractive rate schedules, is one of the basic objects of the experimental farm transmission line now in operation outside the city of Red Wing, Minn. On most farms where electric energy is supplied by a power company, the farmer seldom uses over 30 or 35 kilowatt hours of energy per month—a rather startling difference between present practice and hoped-for accomplishment.

In that gap between 30 kilowatt hours and 300 kilowatt hours lies the hidden reason why electric energy for farm use, when provided by a power company, has heretofore been an economic failure, according to the promoters of the Red Wing experiment.

Speaking for the joint committee which is in charge of the farm line extending five miles out of Red Wing and serving eighteen typical farms, Charles F. Stuart, assistant to the vice-president and general manager of the Northern States Power Company, which built the line, told of an investigation just made of more than thirty existing farm lines, in various localities, which serve 1,452 customers.

COMMITTEE BACKING MINNESOTA LINE

Why Farm Lines Haven't Paid

"It was found," he said, "that every one of these farm lines was losing money. The reason why was soon made all-apparent, for the average consumption for these 1,452 farmers was only 28.7 kilowatt hours per month, which is less than the average city resident customer uses. It seems probable that this low consumption is due to two factors, one being rate structures not inviting to liberal use of current and the second being that the farmer never has been shown how to use electricity liberally to his own advantage.

"Farmers have financed the building of rural lines and deeded them over to the power companies, which usually charge at least 12 cents per kilowatt hour for the first hundred kilowatt hours, with a minimum bill of $5 a month for the next hundred kilowatt hours, at a step 1 cent lower, and the excess perhaps at a further 1 cent reduction.

"These rates are not exorbitant, but do not invite the progressive farmer to a liberal consumption, in that the farmer never gets down to cheap electricity, no matter how much he uses.

"Take a rate of 100 kilowatt hours per month at 12 cents net, with a minimum charge of $5 per month. A study of lines with this rate reveals that the farmer makes very sure never to exceed his minimum bill. His $5 entitles him to approximately 41 kilowatt hours, but his average consumption is about 35, showing that he is determined never to go over his minimum.

"Where the minimum bill is $3 per month, his consumption is held under 25 kilowatt hours, showing that he is still fighting to keep under this minimum."

Low Rates for Large Usage

Mr. Stuart then showed how the carefully studied rate tentatively established for the Red Wing experimental line is expected to operate by contrast with rates just alluded to. Having determined an equitable fixed charge for each customer of $6.90 a month, covering insurance, depreciation, maintenance of the line, taxes and overhead expenses, the energy rate was made low. It is 5 cents per kilowatt hour for the first 30 kilowatt hours, and 3 cents per kilowatt hour for the excess.

Under these rates it develops that the farmer who seeks to secure electric energy solely for electric lights and nothing else has necessarily and unavoidably taken on an expensive proposition. But, if he uses electric energy for various other purposes, so that his total consumption increases, and thereby the benefit resulting from the electric energy on his farm also presumably increases, it becomes worth while. The reason for this was shown by an imaginary case, worked out by Mr. Stuart.

Cost Per Kilowatt Hour Decreases

It assumed that a farmer used 20 kilowatt hours per month, at the energy rate established for the Red Wing line. This would cost him the fixed charge of $6.90 plus $1 for the energy, a total of $7.90, or 39.5 cents per kilowatt hour. But if he used 50 kilowatt hours per month, his total bill would amount to only $9, or 18 cents per kilowatt hour. If he used 100 kilowatt hours, his bill would be only $10.50, which is 10.5 cents per kilowatt hour; and if he used 300 kilowatt hours, his bill would amount to $16.50 or 5.5 cents per kilowatt hour.

"This," said Mr. Stuart, "is what we call a rate schedule which would invite, rather than prohibit, the liberal use of electric energy."

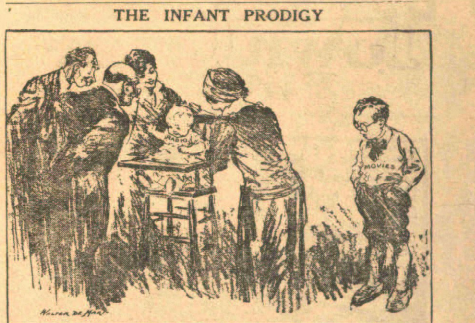
As to Effective Usages

The practical tryout of such a rate is one of the two big objectives of the Red Wing experiment. The second is a serious study of the application of electricity to agriculture.

This dove-tails into the other objective in a very practical manner. "We realized," said Mr. Stuart, "that there would be no common sense in getting the farmer to consume a large amount of electric energy just to earn a low kilowatt-hour rate, and that the job was ours to show him how to use, to his own advantage, some ten times as much energy as he now consumes. We have got to find that out, and we must not do it at the expense of the farmer."

This part of the Red Wing investigation is now being followed through with every indication of some interesting results, although it is still too early, the joint committee declares, to try to indicate these results.

THE INFANT PRODIGY



The overnight development of the radio industry, even in a swiftly moving world, is one of the commercial romances of this century. Within the span of a little more than four years the ranks of the manufacturers, composed chiefly of those who had aided the army and navy during the war in the creation of the wireless telephone, have grown from a group of about fifty pioneers into an army of more than 3,000. Sales of radio material in 1920 amounted to a bare $1,000,000. It is estimated that the American public during the past year spent at least $150,000,000 in acquiring sets and parts of the instruments that tapped the ether. The strides that the industry is making may be indicated by the statement that expenditures for research by one of the large manufacturing groups during the next year will exceed the amount of the total sales just four years ago.

The industry is so new that the Government has been unable to take a census to determine its rank or proportions. Congress has not had time to frame legislation regulating it. Its past events have been kaleidoscopic, and the industry now is described by some as in a state of flux, although there are growing indications that it will settle down. For, with the changing phases, there is a distinct movement in the direction of standardization.—American Bankers Association Journal.

THE FRACAS AT OTTAWA LAKE

Catholics Object to Morning Worship in School

Since the recent edition of a Klan paper came out with an account of the anti-bible imbroglio at Ottawa Lake in Monroe county in which is mentioned the name of our former citizen, Glen Densmore, we have interviewed the gentleman and we find the account as given was substantially correct in substance, except no mention was made of a fight going back several years in which the Catholics in that vicinity have figured prominently.

For the benefit of those who do not understand we might say Monroe county in Michigan is one of the strongholds of Catholicism from an early day, being largely peopled by foreign element and descendants of the early French settlers who played such an important part in the settlement of the Raisin River valley.

Since his graduation from the University of Michigan Mr. Densmore has been filling the pulpit of a local church and incidentally became the teacher of the community school to fill vacancy. He found at once that Catholic residents of the district round-about were very vindictive concerning the school and had been for years In fact their vindictiveness had resulted in the sudden death of one person at least in the past. There were many Catholic children in the school, and recently the local priest. Father Flanagan protested to the school board against Densmore's practice of opening morning session with scripture readings, saying the Protestant bible was wrong and they did not want their children to come under this instruction.

Mr. Densmore paid little attention to this until later when a couple of patrons, Frank Iott and Felix Labun—note the foreign accent—called on him to press their demands. Growing out of this a quarrel developed. They said the Protestant bible could not be taught their children—and actually threatened the teacher, becoming insolent, Mr. Densmore did hit one of them in defense of his rights. Finally both Catholics got into their machine and drove away.

In the afternoon Densmore and members of the school board went to Monroe and had the men arrested; one paid a heavy fine for disturbing a public school and the other escaped owing to a technicality in the complaint.

It is doubtful is the average citizen of this vicinity really knows or cares what these followers of Rome are trying to put over us. Any man who tries to force the bible or the American flag from our schools should be treated as an anarchist and we are glad there are so few of them in Hillsdale county.

It is not so far to hark back to the Haymarket riots in Chicago when gallant police officers were assassinated by anarchist bombs. The city of Chicago knew how to deal with these desperate destroyers of our laws and flag disgracers; they hung seven of them, and the eighth, the notorious Louis Lingg, saved his worthless carcass from the gallows by blowing off his head with a bomb in the cell. These fanatics went to the gallows because they fought American institutions.

We repeat, this country is perilously near disaster when any denomination of church men, and especially the church of Rome dares tell us we must not open our schools with scripture. This is an anarchist trait clothed in lambskin.

Mike Got His

"Mike" Boyden who has been convicted of furnishing hootch to one William Kane of Locust Corners from the effects of which Kane died of poisoning, has received his sentence in the Circuit court at Hillsdale. He must pay $250 fine and is under probation to the court for a period of two years. He must report as often as required by the court and must not violate any law or ordinance, and must refrain from handling liquor in any form during this period.

Boyden has been a trusted employe of the New York Centra lines for the past 37 years and in this capacity lost an arm. Notwithstanding Trainmaster Eben Smith of the railroad put in a testimony strongly in Boyden's favor, the Judge did not take it into consideration.

Boyden is 57 years of age—old enough we think to know better than to monkey with the Volstead Act, for besides his disgrace he must forfeit all claim to pension from the Railroad company that he would have drawn at '0 year of age. So taking it all round the little hootch episode cost Kane his life, has also made oodles of trouble for Boyden, cost Hillsdale county a big bill and is a general nuisance.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Making The Nation Safe For The Children

Kathleen Norris

The mother of two boys wrote me a very forcible letter a few weeks ago. She said that her sons were eighteen and twenty, and that their family life was that of the usual growing American town.

"What am I to do about prohibition and the boys?" she writes. "My husband is the best man in the world, and deep down in his heart I think he would find that he really approves of the change since our young days.

"My husband doesn't discuss it. He knows that I would be all for absolute obedience to the law, if I had my way. But he and his friends keep a certain supply of liquor on hand, having their cocktails and their highballs, paying their bootleggers, and he simply doesn't discuss it.

"Meanwhile, time goes on, and my yonng sons see the law derided and find liquor at home, and in the homes of their apparently respected and patriotic neighbors. I can't make an issue of this with my husband, can I? And I can't blame my sons for taking for granted in other women's houses the things they see in their own.

"I know that I am one of thousands of mothers who are faced with an apparently insoluble problem. What are all the others doing?"

Well, dear mother of two young Americans, who may be called upon to defend that beloved flag of ours some day, I can only answer you in the old phrase—according to my lights.

I would say—no compromise.

For it is no longer merely a question of drinking or not drinking. It is a question of having a nation, or not having a nation. To rob our children of alcoholic drink may or may not, be wise. To rob them of honor is beyond all question an injustice to them.

But, if we are to live as a nation, it must be done.

Mothers, investigate this law whose non-observance is ruining the honesty and loyalty of the younger generation. Satisfy yourself—it is easily done—that it was only after almost a century of debate and argument, analysis, and dispute, that the Eighteenth Amendment was added to our glorious Constitution.

Satisfy yourselves of this other curious point. That two-thirds of the American states numerically, and much more than that geographically, were actually dry, by popular decision, when the amendment was written. Here was already an enormous majority for bone-dryness, before all this dishonor and debate began.

Satisfy yourselves of the opinions of all the great constructive institutions toward the dry law. Investigate the nearest prisons, reformatories, hospitals, alcoholic wards, insane asylums, slums—and convince yourselves as to just what part alcohol has played in forming and maintaining them.

Ask yourselves if drink has ever made any one wiser, happier, kinder, better.

And, finally, take your stand on the question as becomes mothers, and public-spirited women and American citizens. Tell your husband your daughter and your son that for you the question is settled. Tell the boy's friends that he is American and will uphold the Constitution

Call a meeting in your house of as many women as you can muster. Have some one explain to them the seriousness of the situation, and remind these same good women of their patriotism five or six years ago; remind them of the service flags and the enthusiasms. Enlist them now in a service just as serious.

The path is straight before us for what could be less complicated than being more loyal to our country?

Perhaps we are hardly conscious, just now, of what we lose when we lose our national honor. All this law-breaking has crept in very quietly, fanned by jokes and cartoon and specious arguing and general indifference. For the moment, we have lost sight of two important facts.

First, that alcoholic beverage is forbidden by law.

Second, that the men and women who deliberately evade their country laws, and who act and speak of her with contempt and disloyalty, are traitors.

There is the whole thing in a few words. It is of no avail to argue about wetness or dryness now. That is not the question. It is stupid to discuss a "light wine and beer" law. For there is no such law.

It seems to me that this is the answer. the hip flask and the bootlegger are a compromise, and a dangerous compromise. They are compatible neither with patriotism nor with common morality. In asking husband and sons to give them up you are asking them to surrender nothing but what is harmful and shameful,

Some day, to be sure, the law may be altered. That will reopen the old prohibition problem, and give every loyal American an opportunity to express himself about it to some purpose. But meanwhile have we any choice?

I think not. I think the very boys and girls, once it is fairly explained to them, will see that we have not. They may, at first, laugh a little at mother's fanaticism, but surely we have become thin-skinned, if we are afraid of that.

Explain to them your predicament, and that there will be no further compromise. You will find plenty of other influences backing you. Unexpectedly, this woman and that, this man and thatwill approve. They will help you to create a public feeling against the easy patriotism of the liquor-drinking neighbors, who still speak of themselves as Americans, and of the stars and stripes as their flag.

And then when it is done, in a few months or a few years, and the law breakers come suddenly to their senses, you will know that you have had a hand in it—you have helped to give America back to her sons and daughters again.

Methodist Church Lifts Ban

If reported correctly the results of the Methodist convention at Springfield Massachusetts have not all been mere resolve and dissolve, but it is claimed the Bishops voted to lift the ban on social amusements such as dancing, card playing and other harmless (?) diversons which many of our younger sets like to indulge in. Such is the final wind up of a long bitter controversy but time only will tell as to whether it is justified or not. From personal observance we should say that for the past ten years at least a large majority of Methodists have raised the ban as far as they personally were concerned without consulting the church heads about it.

Candidly we feel as if some good Bishop had made a serious mistake when he introduced this resolution but of course we can't criticise men who are mentally able to take the responsibility of steering the great ship of Methodism through troubled seas such as have beat upon the rocky coasts of our social structure for Lo, these many years. We hope it will come out right in the last Day when the trump is sounded but it seems as if our religion was slipping. After all the fol de rol we have witnessed in other denominations who so long ago lifted the ban how can we look it squarely in the face and condone some of the doings? It is sad but true that young America is today traveling in a funeral procession toward the Devil rather faster than we could hope. and we can't see how a relaxing on the part of church discipline at this particular time is going to help them an iota. It you don't believe this look around and investigate. Go to Hillsdale, Detroit Chicago, if you will—then come right home to your own town, and tell us if you want the little shred of discipline that remains taken off.

End of National Debt

Secretaries of the treasuries of the United States and of Colombia living in 2924 will have the pleasant task of paying off the national debts of their countries without asking the citizens to dig up a cent—that is, provided the Banco Mercantil of Bogota or a successor is ready to come across with the $5,574,523,952,3'0 that will theoretically be due to the United States and Colombia under the terms of a deposit of $10 recently made in that bank by Henry G. Granger of Bogota to encourage the spirit of thrift. The contract between the bank and the depositor calls for the payment of compound interest at the prevailing rate for 1,000 years, when the total is to be split fifty-fifty between the United States and Colombia.

Age 31 Has Tragic Meaning for Average Man or Woman

U. S. Life Tables show health span extends only from 18 to 31—Earnings fall off rapidly after 40

Physical freedom and full vigor—what are they worth to you? This is a question the average American can answer from his own bitter experience—for at age 31 the average American begins to slip. After 40 his earning power drops off rapidly. These appalling facts are shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920.

Age 31! The age at which men and women should be entering their period of greatest usefulness and happiness! The beginning of the supposed "prime of life."

Not the prime of life. The age of decay! What causes contribute to this fearful condition?

Unwise eating. Sleeplessness. The loading of the body with drug stimulants, which appear to give added energy, but actually borrow this energy from the body's own reserve.

Every school child is taught to avoid stimulants. Most mothers enforce the no-coffee rule for children. Then comes maturity—and the squandering of the reserve strength which the body has stored up. Figures show that the average American is able to stand the pace just 13 years. Then, with half his life yet before him, he hits the down grade.

Medical literature classifies caffein as a poison. Like strychnin, it is sometimes by doctors given in cases of heart failure. The average cup of coffee contains the usual dose of caffein administered in these cases.

Coffee contributes no nourishment to the body. Its only virtues, as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A hot, appetizing, drugless drink is a benefit with every meal.

People in 2,000,000 American homes enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink with the rich, mellow, full flavor and fragrance of roasted whole wheat and bran—flavor which people in 2,000,000 homes like better than any other.

"The man has a great heart in him, as every great man must," he wrote to his father. "I am beginning to love him. I can see that these thousands in the army are going to be bound to him by an affection like that of a son for a father. With men like Washington and Franklin to lead us, how can we fail?"

The next night Sir Henry Clinton got around the Americans and turned their left flank. Smallwood's command and that of Colonel Jack Irons were almost destroyed, twenty-two hundred having been killed or taken. Jack had his left arm shot through and escaped only by the swift and effective use of his pistols and hanger, and by good luck, his horse having been "only slightly cut in the withers." The American line gave way. Its unseasoned troops fled into Brooklyn. There was the end of the island. They could go no farther without swimming. With a British fleet in the harbor under Admiral Lord Howe, the situation was desperate. Sir Henry had only to follow and pen them in and unlimber his guns. The surrender of more than half of Washington's army would have to follow. At headquarters, the most discerning minds saw that only a miracle could prevent it.

The miracle arrived. Next day a fog thicker than the darkness of a clouded night enveloped the island and lay upon the face of the waters. Calmly, quickly Washington got ready to move his troops. That night, under the friendly cover of the fog, they were quietly taken across the East river, with a regiment of Marblehead sea dogs, under Colonel Glover, manning the boats. Fortunately, the British army had halted, waiting for clear weather.

For nearly two weeks Jack was nursing his wound in Washington's army hospital, which consisted of a cabin, a tent, a number of cow stables and an old shed on the heights of Harlem. Jack had lain in a stable. Toward the end of his confinement, John Adams came to see him.

"Were you badly hurt?" the great man asked.

"Scratched a little, but I'll be back in the service tomorrow," Jack replied.

"You do not look like yourself quite. I think that I will ask the commander in chief to let you go with me to Philadelphia. I have some business there and later Franklin and I are going to Staten Island to confer with Admiral Lord Howe. We are a pair of snappish old dogs and need a young man like you to look after us. You would only have to keep out of our quarrels, attend to our luggage and make some notes in the conference."

So it happened that Jack went to Philadelphia with Mr. Adams and, after two days at the house of Doctor Franklin, set out with the two great men for the conference on Staten Island. He went in high hope that he was to witness the last scene of the war.

In Amboy he sent a letter to his father, which said:

"Mr. Adams is a blunt, outspoken man. If things do not go to his liking, he is quick to tell you. Doctor Franklin is humorous and polite, but firm as a God-placed mountain. You may put your shoulder against the mountain and push and think it is moving, but it isn't. He is established. He has found his proper bearings and is done with moving. These two great men differ in little matters. They had a curious quarrel the other evening. We had reached New Brunswick on our way north. The taverns were crowded. I ran from one to another trying to find entertainment for my distinguished friends. At last I found a small chamber with one bed in it and a single window. The bed nearly filled the room. No better accommodation was to be had. I had left them sitting on a bench in a little grove near the large hotel, with the luggage near them. When I returned they were having a hot argument over the origin of northeast storms, the doctor asserting that he had learned by experiment that they began in the southwest and proceeded in a northeasterly direction. I had to wait ten minutes for a chance to speak to them. Mr. Adams was hot faced, the doctor calm and smiling. I imparted the news.

"'God of Israel!' Mr. Adams exclaimed. "Is it not enough that I have to agree with you? Must I also sleep with you?'

"'Sir, I hope that you must not, but if you must, I beg that you will sleep more gently than you talk,' said Franklin.

"I went with them to their quarters carrying the luggage. On the way Mr. Adams complained that he had picked up a flea somewhere.

"'The flea, sir, is a small animal, but a big fact,' said Franklin. 'You alarm me. Two large men and a flea will be apt to crowd our quarters.'

"In the room they argued with a depth of feeling which astonished me, as to whether the one window should be open or closed. Mr. Adams had closed it.

"'Please do not close the window,' said Franklin. 'We shall suffocate.'

"'Sir, I am an invalid and afraid of the night air,' said Adams rather testily.

"'The air of this room will be much worse for you than that out-of-doors,' Franklin retorted. He was then between the covers. 'I beg of you to open the window and get into bed and if I do not prove my case to your satisfaction, I will consent to its being closed.'

"I lay down on a straw-filled mattress outside their door. I heard Mr. Adams open the window and get into bed. Then Doctor Franklin began to expound his theory of colds. He declared that cold air never gave any one a cold; that respiration destroyed a gallon of air a minute and that all the air in the room would be consumed in an hour. He went on and on and long before he had finished his argument, Mr. Adams was snoring, convinced rather by the length than the cogency of the reasoning. Soon the two great men, whose fame may be said to fill the earth, were asleep in the same bed in that little box of a room and snoring in a way that suggested loud contention. I had to laugh as I listened. Mr. Adams would seem to have been defeated, for, by and by, I heard him muttering as he walked the floor."

Howe's barge met the party at Amboy and conveyed them to the landing near his headquarters. It was, however, a fruitless journey. Howe wished to negotiate on the old ground now abandoned forever. The people of America had spoken for independence—a new, irrevocable fact not to be put aside by ambassadors. The colonies were lost. The concessions which the wise Franklin had so urgently recommended to the government of England, Howe seemed now inclined to offer, but they could not be entertained.

"Then my government can only maintain its dignity by fighting," said Howe.

"That is a mistaken notion," Franklin answered. "It will be much more dignified for your government to acknowledge its error than to persist in it."

"We shall fight," Howe declared.

"And you will have more fighting to do than you anticipate," said Franklin. "Nature is our friend and ally. The Lord has prepared our defenses. They are the sea, the mountains, the forest and the character of our people. Consider what you have accomplished. At an expense of eight million pounds you have killed about eight hundred Yankees. They have cost you ten thousand pounds a head. Meanwhile, at least a hundred thousand children have been born in America. There are the factors in your problem. How much time and money will be required for the job of killing all of us?"

The British admiral ignored the query.

"My powers are limited," said he, "but I am authorized to grant pardons and in every way to exercise the king's paternal solicitude."

"Such an offer shows that your proud nation has no flattering opinion of us," Franklin answered. "We, who are the injured parties, have not the baseness to entertain it. You will forgive me for reminding you that the king's paternal solicitude has been rather trying. It has burned our defenseless towns in midwinter; it has incited the savages to massacre our farmers in the back country; it has driven us to a declaration of independence. Britain and America are now distinct states. Peace can be considered only on that basis. You wish to prevent our trade from passing into foreign channels. Let me remind you, also, that the profit of no trade can ever be equal to the expense of holding it with fleets and armies."

"On such a basis I am not empowered to treat with you," Howe answered. "We shall immediately move against your army."

The conference ended. The ambassadors and their secretary shook hands with the British admiral.

"Mr. Irons, I have heard much of you," said the latter as he held Jack's hand. "You are deeply attached to a young lady whom I admire and whose father is my friend. I offer you a chance to leave this troubled land and go to London and marry and lead a peaceable, Christian life. You may keep your principles, if you wish, as I have no use for them. You will find sympathizers in England."

"Lord Howe, your kindness touches me," the young man answered. "What you propose is a great temptation. It is like Calypso's offer of immortal happiness to Ulysses. I love England. I love peace, and more than either, I love the young lady, but I couldn't go and keep my principles."

"Why not, sir?"

"Because we are all of a mind with our Mr. Patrick Henry. We put liberty above happiness and even above life. So I must stay and help fight her battles, and when I say it I am grinding my own heart under my heel. Don't think harshly of me. I cannot help it. The feeling is bred in my bones."

His lordship smiled politely and bowed as the three men withdrew.

Franklin took the hand of the young man and pressed it silently as they were leaving the small house in which Howe had established himself.

Jack, who had been taking notes of the fruitless talk of these great men, was sorely disappointed. He could see no prospect now of peace.

"My hopes are burned to the ground," he said to Doctor Franklin.

"It is a time of sacrifice," the good man answered. "You have the invincible spirit that looks into the future and gives all it has. You are America."

"I have been thinking too much of myself," Jack answered. "Now I am ready to lay down my life in this great cause of ours."

"Boy, I like you," said Mr. Adams. "I have arranged to have you safely conveyed to New York. There an orderly will meet and conduct you to our headquarters."

"Thank you, sir," Jack replied. Turning to Doctor Franklin, he added: "One remark of yours to Lord Howe impressed me. You said that nature was our friend and ally. It put me in mind of the fog that helped us out of Brooklyn and of a little adventure of mine."

Then he told the story of the spider's web.

"I repeat that all nature is with us," said Franklin. "It was a sense of injustice in human nature that sent us across the great barrier of the sea into conditions where only the strong could survive. Here we have raised up a sturdy people with 3,000 miles of water between them and tyranny. Armies cannot cross it and succeed long in a hostile land. They are too far from home. The expense of transporting and maintaining them will bleed our enemies until they are spent. The British king is powerful, but now he has picked a quarrel with Almighty God, and it will go hard with him."

How Solomon Shifted the Skeer.

In the spring news came of a great force of British which was being organized in Canada for a descent upon New York through Lake Champlain. Frontier settlers in Tryon county were being massacred by Indians.

Generals Herkimer and Schuyler had written to Washington, asking for the services of the famous scout, Solomon Binkus, in that region.

"He knows the Indian as no other man knows him and can speak his language and he also knows the bush," Schuyler had written. "If there is any place on earth where his help is needed just now, it is here."

"Got to leave ye, my son," Solomon said to Jack one evening soon after that.

"How so?" the young man asked.

"Goin' hum to fight Injuns. The Great Father has ordered it. I'll like it better. Gittin' lazy here. Summer's comin' an' I'm a born bush man. I'm kind o' oneasy—like a deer in a dooryard. I ain't had to run fer my life since we got here. My hoofs are complainin'. I ain't shot a gun in a month."

A look of sorrow spread over the face of Solomon.

"I'm tired of this place," said Jack. "The British are scared of us and we're scared of the British. There's nothing going on. I'd love to go back to the big bush with you."

"I'll tell the Great Father that you're a born bush man. Mebbe he'll let ye go. They'll need us both. Rum, Injuns an' the devil have j'ined hands. The Long house will be the center o' hell an' its line fences'll take in the hull big bush.

That day Jack's name was included in the order.

"I'm sorry that it is not yet possible to pay you or any of the men who have served me so faithfully," said Washington. "If you need money I shall be glad to lend you a sum to help you through this journey."

"I ain't fightin' fer pay," Solomon answered. "I'll hoe an' dig, an' cook, an' guide fer money. But I won't fight no more fer money—partly 'cause I don't need it—partly 'cause I'm fightin' fer myself. I got a little left in my britches pocket, but if I hadn't, my ol' Marier wouldn't let me go hungry."

A Serious Case

A notoriously absent-minded man was observed walking down the street with one foot continually in the gutter, the other on the pavement. A friend meeting him said: "Good evening. How are you?"

"Well," replied the absent-minded one, "I thought I was very well when I left home, but now I don't know what's the matter with me. I've been limping for the last half hour."

Passing the Buck

The new cook gave some pork chops to a relative who called while the lady of the house was out paying a few calls.

"The missus will miss them," warned the parlor maid.

"Oh, I'll blame that on the cat."

"We have no cat."

"Then be a good girl," urged the new cook earnestly, "and let the canary out of its cage."

Maya's Calendar Dates Back to Aug. 6, 613 B. C.

The earliest dates in New World history are August 6, 613 B. C., and December 10, 580 B. C., by the present system of marking time, the Peabody museum of Harvard university announces in making public the final solution of the chronology of Mayan dates.

The formal New Year had originally stood at the winter solstice just 12 days after the recorded date, December 10, 580 B. C., when the calendar was inaugurated. Other dates strongly emphasized in Mayan records are March 21 and September 23, the points of the equinoxes, and December 22 and June 23, the points of the solstices, says the Detroit News. Three famous tablets at Papenque carry the calculation backward from September 23, 430 A. D., the day of the autumnal equinox, to 3373 B. C. in an effort to reconstruct the conditions of the natural year at the epoch of the Mayan era.

Coin Settles Dispute

A dispute in a separation suit over whether a man should pay his wife 35 or 40 shillings a week was settled in an English court by the lawyers tossing a coin. The woman's lawyer called "heads" and won.

You Want the Pavement That Pays Dividends

USE CONCRETE FOR PERMANENCE

You know, from your own happy experience, what a pleasure it is to drive on Portland Cement Concrete Pavement.

You know that Portland Cement Concrete Pavement is skid-proof, rigid, even and unyielding.

You know that no matter how hot the day its surface remains true and even.

You know, too, that the pleasing, light gray color of Concrete makes driving safe by night as well as by day.

Concrete Pavement consists of a definitely proportioned mixture of sand, pebbles or broken stone, and water, held together by the everlasting grip of that tenacious binder, portland cement.

Portland cement is the basic material that makes the Concrete Pavement endure. It builds repair out and the maintenance in.

You want your pavement to be an investment—not an expense. You want to receive continuous dividends in service and satisfaction. That means Portland Cement Concrete Pavement.

• • •

Watch for advertisements telling about the many other uses of concrete. And remember that the Portland Cement Association has a free personal service to offer you. Whether you use concrete or have it used for you, this service will give you more for your money.

Our booklets R-3 and R-4 tell many interesting things about Concrete Roads and Streets. Which one would you like us to send? There is no charge.

Twenty-eight Years

Twenty-eight years have gone by since Frank J. Boyd first came to North Adams, a slender young man of the "art perservative" and from his labors at Hanover he brought a great big consignment of push, a head full of brains, and a very little else—in fact the whole outfit looked not much better than we looked about three months after the fire. Thus was the North Adams Advocate brought into the world and it has been here ever since—sometimes kicked and cuffed about—sometimes commended and praised—the shades and lights of a checkered career of news gathering and pandering to the public. Frank used to run the paper as he thought best and we do the same although we confess our ideals and our editorials run in vastly different channels at times. This issue of the paper begins our twenty-ninth year as a purveyor of the news, and we are going to put an Advocate in every home in Adams and Moscow township.

BANKERS' VIEW ON CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

The attitude of the American Bankers Association on co-operative marketing favors proper organization to facilitate the orderly movement of farm products, but holds that the co operatives are as amenable to economic laws as any form of business and cannot be used to gain special benefits for the farmer contrary to the influences of supply and demand and other normal factors. This view was formulated recently by Frank W. Simmonds of the Association before the National Council of Farmers Co-operative and Marketing Associations at Washington.

"It would be unfortunate for the farmer if he becomes imbued with the idea that co-operative marketing in itself is a panacea for all agricultural ills," Mr. Simmonds said. "Co-operative marketing, well organized and wisely managed, can be most helpful in solving market problems. It may prevent untimely dumping, it may secure better credit facilities, it may extend existing markets, it may even create new markets, but obviously its operations will be as amenable to economic law as those of other business enterprises.

165 pounds of butterfat valued at 50 cents a pound, earns $82 as a year's gross income," he said. "Deducting the cost of feed leaves a profit of only $10 to $12, and does not take into account the labor involved, depreciation, and other overhead expenses. How can you honestly afford to buy this kind of a cow? A $100 or $125 cow will produce 300 to 350 pounds of butterfat. You can figure the profits for yourself."

Convinced of the profitableness of investing more money in a cow, the farmer left the bank with the funds in his hands. He started paying for the animal with his first milk check. One half of each milk check went to the bank to pay off the indebtedness, while the farmer retained the remainder for his expenses.—Banker-Farmer.

CORPORATION HEAD HAS FARMER'S VIEW

Owen D. Young, Raised as Farmer's Boy, Realizes Need of Electricity's Help.

Putting himself in the farmer's place, when it comes to the question of electricity in agriculture, is an easy matter for Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of directors of the General Electric Company. Mr. Young was raised on a farm in northern New York and for a considerable period in his younger days he took part in the extremely hard work that has to be done on any farm during the busy season.

And now Mr. Young finds himself one of the men at the head of a great corporation which manufactures every sort of electrical apparatus and equipment. And this is the day when the electrification of farms has become one of the economic questions of the hour.

Mr. Young is heart and soul for farm electrification. He looks forward with enthusiasm to the time when electricity can give the 32,000,000 American farm folks the full opportunity of sharing with town dwellers the benefits of central station electric service.

He wants to complete the emancipation of the farmers, begun by the automobile, by substituting Mazda lamps for the antiquated kerosene lamps; by giving the farmer's wife electric washing machines and vacuum cleaners; by installing electric pumps that will supply running water in the farmhouse and the barn; and by economically-operated motors that will do many of the big and little chores which now drive farm boys to the city because of the monotonous drudgery.

Mr. Young has just brought about such a transformation on his own farm, up in Herkimer County, New York, near the peak of the watershed that divides the Mohawk Valley from the headwaters of the Susquehanna. He persuaded the Adirondack Power and Light Corporation to extend its lines to his birthplace and home town, so that the home folks and the neighbors could benefit by this enthralling modern giant—electricity. In the Young homestead, the kerosene lamps that took the place of tallow candles early in the last centry, themselves gave way this last winter to Mazda lamps.

Anything More Coming?

According to students of ethnology, ten great fundamental factors have influenced the evolution of civilized man. They are: Fire, the bow and arrow, pottery, domestic animals, iron smelting, writing, gunpowder, printing, steam and electricity.

What It Cannot Do

"Co-operative marketing cannot prevent other countries with cheaper land and labor from selling in foreign marts at a price unattractive to us. It cannot successfully over-ride the law of supply and demand or maintain for any length of time an artificially high price by withholding a product from market or unduly limiting production. Sane, orderly marketing must be accompanied by sane, orderly thinking.

"We may wisely take a leaf from Danish experience and emphasize efficient, economical, maximum production of standard grade products, for however important co-operative marketing may be in solving the exigencies of the present time, it is only one link in the chain of agricultural problems."

The American Bankers Association, Mr. Simmonds said, believes that solutions of farm problems "should be sought through private enterprise and not through government aid," and approves the endeavors of farmers for orderly marketing.

Dr. O. G. McFarland and daughter Kathleen are spending the week in Chicago where the doctor is attending a National medical meet. They were accompanied to Chicago by Mrs. Lawrence Kempton and children who will remain about one month visiting her relatives in the city. Dr. McFarland is expected home the last of the week.

Rev. Alfred Church of Brooklyn, N. Y, with his wife and daughter visited his uncle Rev. I. P. Bates, in Hillsdale on Tuesday. Mr. C's two sisters Mrs. Cora Dawley of Palm Beach, Florida and Mrs. Lina Carl of Kalamazoo and his brother, John of Pittsford met them there. This was the first meeting in 25 years. Rev. Church is assistant pastor of a big Congregational church in Brooklyn and he and family are on their way to visit his son who is teaching in Honolulu.

Another dastardly deed is now laid to the automobile. It is claimed the auto has put the Adrian street car lines out of business and they are to be discontinued July 1st or thereabout. The Adrian street cars are the oldest electric lines in Michigan having gone into use in 1889, and also the fifth to be established in the United States. Their tracks are used by the Interurban lines running into Adrian, which company will have to make some arrangements for buying or leasing them, otherwise they will be torn up,

On Tuesday the inhabitants of the villiage were aroused from their reveries by the prolonged bellowing of a steam whistle which seemed to be coming from all directions, in fact its exact position could not be located. Everyono popped out of the doors looking wildly up and down the road and some took a squint above evidently expecting to see a giganic "Biimp" or a bomber hanging over the town Soon the din kept increasing and coming nearer when it was discovered that the whistle of the 10:41 train had broke loose and could not be stopped. This happened down beyond the Grubby Knoll school and continued until the train pulled into Hillsdale.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Ann Arbor—This city will celebrate the Fourth of July this year by holding a civic celebration in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the founding of Ann Arbor.

Lansing—An appropriation of $2,500 for the State convention of the American Legion to be held in Muskegon, Sept. 1, 2 and 3, has been granted by the State Administrative Board.

Albion—Ninety-four seniors graduate this year from Albion college, the largest class to be granted diplomas in the 63 years the institution has been in existence. There will be 40 women and 54 men in the class.

Chelsea—Five convicts from Jackson state prison and three civilians, overcome when fire swept the state-owned cement plant near here, were rescued by members of the convict gang who fought their way through heavy smoke and flame. The fire loss is set at $350,000.

Detroit—The smallpox situation in Detroit is improving steadily and the only persons who have anything to fear from the continuance if the epidemic are the some 200,000 persons who have not been vaccinated, according to a statement made by Dr. Henry F. Vaughn, health commissioner.

Lansing—The Ford Employes' Mutual Benefit Association has filed incorporation papers as a non-profit organization with the secretary of state. Its object is to promote, stimulate industry and efficiency, foster kindly conduct with the management and protect members in times of illness.

Flint—Fernard Bessette and Harold Coleman, both 19 years old of Aurora, Ill., were sentenced to serve from 16 to 30 years and 15 to 30 years respectively in the State House of Correction at Marquette when they pleaded guilty to holding up and robbing two oil station atendants in Flint in April.

Detroit—The Ford Motor Company has completed its ten millionth model "T" Ford car. In celebration of having attained a 10,000,000 production record the company announces that Ford Car No. 10,000,000 will make a coast-to-coast trip. The last 1,000,000 cars has been produced in 132 working days.

Mt. Clemens—Hugo Raymond, 5 years old, son of Corporal and Mrs. Raymond of Selfridge field, was drowned in Lake St. Cair, adjacent to the field. He had been playing with other children, who gave the alarm after the boy fell in the water. The body was recovered after a search of two hours.

Ann Arbor—Laying of concrete paving between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti has been completed it has been announced here, and the road will be opened for traffic June 21. The roadway, just finished, completes a concrete roadway between Detroit and Jackson, with the exception of a railroad crossing at Parma.

Ypsilanti—The city budget for the coming year, as approved by the City Council allows for the expenditure of $203,950. This compares with a budget of $144,700 in 1923 and $145,135 in 1922. The increase over last year is due largely to the fact that last year's budget ran short in several departments and the deficit must be made up this year.

Grand Rapids—Cutworms with nocturnal proclivities are threatening the grape crop in Kent County, growers report. Destroying the leaves and tender shoots, the worms are active only at night and farmers, working by lantern light, have gathered and killed large quantities. Sticky flypaper, placed around the base of the vines, is the only known preventive.

Detroit — The reapportionment amendment to the state constitution, which if adopted would give to Wayne county greater representation in both houses at Lansing, will not be submitted to the electorate at the coming fall election. Withdrawal of the proposed amendment was decided upon by the committee appointed by Acting Mayor Joseph A. Martin. The committee decided that the spring election of 1925 would be a more opportune time for submission of the amendment.

Owosso—Owosso is refunding a bond issue authorized in 1894 and coming due July 1, this year. The city already has paid $30,000 interest on the bonds, and still owes the principal. The refund bonds will bear 5 per cent interest, amounting to $1,000 per year, for 20 years, so that when the refund bonds mature it will have cost the city $40,000 to retire them and pay the interest, making a grand total of $70,000 in interest and principal on a $20,000 bond issue over a period of 50 years.

Detroit—Collection of a fund of $100,000 has been started by the Detroit Convention and Tourist Bureau to advertise Detroit's advantages as a convention city, it was announced by H. William Klare, president of the bureau. Estimating that $20,000,000 in business was brought to the city last year by conventions Mr. Klare added that an equal amount was lost by the city by its inability to care for 16 conventions turned away. There will soon be 14,436 rooms available for convention use in local hotels, whereas there are 11,000 at present.

Saginaw—Saginaw's 18-year struggle for a pure water supply came to an end when the voters approved a bond issue of $5,959,000 to bring water from an underground lake in Clare County, 52 miles west of here. The bond issue received a margin of 350 votes over the required three-fifths majority and the Clare project was chosen by a majority vote over the three other proposed supply sources, submitted to referendum of the voters. The other three proposed were the Saginaw River, the Shiawassee River and the Saginaw Bay.

Manistee—A Rotary club has been organized here. Two previous attempts to organize a branch of the National club had failed. But with Mayor John H. Rademaker as president of the newly formed body, its success is assured.

Lansing—The Hamtramck ordinance limiting hawkers' and peddlers' licenses to residents, has been held invalid by the state supreme court. Suit to compel the city to issue him a license was strated by Charles Goldstein, a resident of Detroit.

Monroe—An unidentified man about 40 years old was killed instantly at Dean's Crossing, 12 miles south of here, when he was struck by a limited interurban train on the Detroit, Monroe & Toledo line. The motorman of the interurban said the man deliberately stepped in front of the train.

Detroit—Employes to the number of 5,000 serve the telephone in Detroit, possibly 3,000 of them being operators in the 16 central offices. A large proportion of the remainder are plant employes, engaged in the construction of plant, extension work and maintenance. The company employs 10,000 people in the State.

Monroe—The work of repairing the Dixie Highway, northern limits of Monroe to South Rockwood, has been finished. The distance is 14 miles between the two points. Some 175 holes were repaired, the last ones near South Rockwood. Six carloads sand, 780 tons of stone and five carloads of cement were used for the patch work.

Manistee—According to the recent annual report of the city clerk, Manistee's total bonded indebtedness is now only $166,700. The bonds were all issued previous to the year 1910, while the city still was under the old form of government, but are now being retired at the rate of $10,000 a year. The city's school bonds all have been retired.

Port Huron—Frank C. Wood, 50 years old, is dead from injuries suffered in the tunnel yards, when he was run down by a passenger train and both legs severed below the knees. Wood had accompanied his mother to the train which was to take her to Pearl Creek, N. Y., where her sister was dying. In jumping off the train he stumbled and fell under the wheels.

Parma—Albert Gunderman, was killed and Orman Lamb, seriously injured when the automobile in which they were traveling, was hit by two Michigan Central trains on a grade crossing about a mile west of here. Both men are residents of Albion. The automobile was hit by a westbound freight train and thrown directly in front of an eastbound fast passenger train.

Lansing—The State Supreme Court has authorized the House of David colony to proceed with its court action charging Walter M. Nelson, the Bamford sisters, the Hansels and others who have attacked the organization, with conspiracy. The colony, when it originally started the action, claimed that the defendants, conspired to slander, defame and blackmail the cult leaders.

Hart—Hart not only operates on the daylight saving time during the summer months, but it also provides special traffic regulations during the summer season. The village recently provided vehicles entering trunk line roads must come to a full stop. However, the through street regulation applies only during the summer months From October until May vehicles do not need to stop.

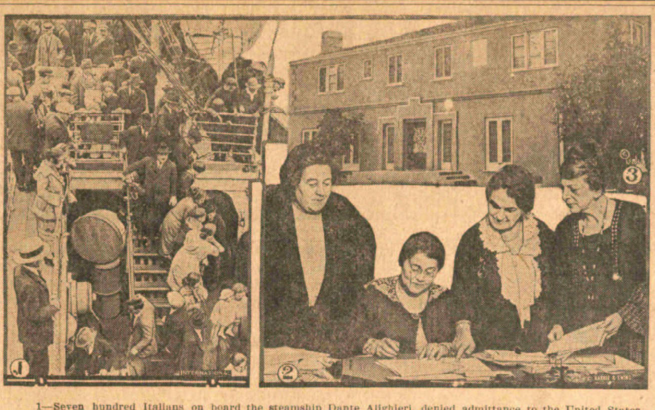
Grand Rapids—A State apple show under the direction of the Michigan State Horticultural Society, will be held here the first week in December, the executive committee of this society have decided. A potato show will be conducted at Detroit by other interests. The two shows were combined last winter by a group of growers organizations and other associations interested in the promotion of Michigan fruit and potatoes.

Kalamazoo—In recognition of the students' part in bringing the recent $600,000 endowment campaign to a successful conclusion, Kalamazoo College proclaimed an institutional holiday. No classes were held. In making the announcement, President Allan A Hoben predicted that many new buildings would be erected and the English educational system would be adpoted at the college before it reaches its centennial anniversary in 1933.

Grand Rapids—Fred Garber, 39 years old, manager of the Weddell Manufacturing Co., and his wife, 38, were killed and their two children, Lois, 6, and Frederick Jr., 2, were hurt seriously when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a New York Central passenger train. Mrs. Garber died instantly and Garber died a short time later at Butterworth Hospital. The daughter suffered a fracture of the leg and the boy was severely cut by broken glass.

Cheboygan—Sitting in the center of the G. R. and I. railroad tracks at Wheeling, a grade crossing just south of Mackinaw City, an unidentified Indian was instantly killed by a southbound train recently. When first discovered, the Indian was wildly waving his hands in the face of the oncoming locomotive and refused to get off the track despite the engineer's insistent warning signals. When it was discovered the Indian would not move the train was too close to stop and passed over the body which was taken to Carp Lake.

Lansing—Charles J. DeLand, secretary of state, announces that petitions bearing more than the necessary number of names to place the proposed constitutional amendment providing for a state income tax on the ballot at the fall elections have been filed with him. Sixty thousand names were filed, while 58,000 were necessary. The proposal provides for the payment of taxes on incomes of $4,000 or more per year. The minimum is 5 per cent and the maximum 10 per cent. Incomes of $100,000 or more would pay the maximum tax.



1—Seven hundred Italians on board the steamship Dante Alighieri, denied admittance to the United States, talking with friends on the pier at New York. 2—Mrs. D. A. McDougal, Mrs. Emily Blair, Mrs. T. L. Brown and Mrs. Bannister, leaders of Democratic women, completing arrangements for the New York convention. 3—New home of Prince Eric of Denmark and his bride at Arcadia, Cal., where they have a chicken ranch.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Adjourns and the Country's Eyes Turn to G. O. P. Convention.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CONGRESS adjourned on Saturday, and the country heaved one great sigh of relief. Business, which had been depressed, began to perk up; and stocks, which had been in something of a slump, regained some of their lost values. The people of the United States turned with interest, unmixed with excitement, toward Cleveland, where the Republican party was gathering for the purpose of nominating Calvin Coolidge for President.

In the closing days of the session, several pieces of projected legislation went by the boards. The McNary-Haugen bill designed for the relief of the farmers was defeated in the house by a vote of 224 to 154, and modifications of it were also rejected. The farm bloc did not wish any of the other farm relief bills passed, and then President Coolidge told the congressional leaders that he would not approve of any measure that included price fixing. That settled it for the present.

As for Muscle Shoals, that also went over until next session. The senate agriculture committee, reporting favorably the Norris bill providing government control of power from the site, denounced unsparingly the bill which would give the project to Henry Ford, and exposed the financial fallacies of the Detroiter's offer. The report was written by Senator Norris, who took full advantage of the chance to say what he thought of the administration. Pointing to Ford's denunciations of Secretary of War Weeks and indirectly of the administration at the time the Gorgas plant was sold, the report said:

"To appease his anger a vacillating administration publicly announced that the amount received for the plant would be credited on the $5,000,000 Ford offered for Muscle Shoals if his bid was accepted by congress. This kindly favor, perhaps superinduced by other considerations, so pleased Mr. Ford that his anger at the administration was not only turned into love and admiration, but he became so violently friendly that he himself withdrew as a candidate for President and announced his support of the executive who made such liberal concessions."

Senators Heflin, Ladd, Smith, Harrison and Caraway submitted a minority report favoring the Ford bid, but the best they could do was to obtain unanimous consent to make Muscle Shoals the first order of business after the next session on December 3.

Senator McCormick's resolution proposing the twentieth amendment to the Constitution by which congress is empowered to control the labor of persons under eighteen years of age was passed by the senate, the vote being 61 to 23. The house approved of the proposed amendment last April, so it now goes to the states for ratification.

Sixty bills for the modification of the Volstead act were left reposing in the room of the house judiciary committee, despite the efforts of their sixty authors and of others who declare that 2.75 per cent beer should not be called intoxicating.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE took the tax reduction bill and the Treasury department's analysis thereof on a week-end trip down the Potomac, and when he returned to the White House Monday he signed the measure. At the same time he issued a statement severely criticising many features of the bill and pledging himself to do all he can in the next session of congress toward the passage of a tax bill "less political and more truly economic."

The President said that in its administrative features the bill represents generally an improvement over existing law; that it will provide sufficient revenue for the fiscal year 1925, and probably thereafter if unforeseen expenses do not arise; that the retroactive tax cut of 25 per cent is expected by the people, and should be promptly given, and that it is desirable to have a definite determination of the taxes as applying to 1924 incomes while the income is still being received. For these reasons he gave it his approval.

SO FAR as the Republican national committee could do so, everything was fixed up for the Cleveland convention. Frank W. Mondell, former congressman from Wyoming, was selected as permanent chairman and Charles B. Warren, ambassador to Mexico, was chosen to be chairman of the resolutions committee which builds the platform. Mr. Coolidge picked on Marion Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, to present his name to the convention, and Doctor Burton accepted the grateful task. He told the press that he would speak not as a partisan but as a citizen and a friend and admirer of Mr. Coolidge.

Fred Upham of Chicago announced that he would resign from the post of treasurer of the party, and his election as national committeeman from Illinois was assured. Chairman Adams and Secretary Lockwood of the national committee also will retire. Roy O. West of Chicago will succeed the latter. He has been long prominent in politics and is even more silent than the President.

Naturally most of the pre-convention discussion was concerning the vice presidential nomination. There developed a strong demand that Frank O. Lowden be given the honor, and Mr. Coolidge let it be known that the Illinoisan would be "very acceptable" as his running mate.

No arrangements were announced for placing Senator Hiram Johnson in nomination for the Presidency, and the LaFollette headquarters in Washington said the Wisconsin senator's name would not be presented to the convention. His little block of delegates probably will vote for him to the end.

TURNING now to the Democrats, one reads with interest the statement by Franklin D. Roosevelt, manager for Gov. Al Smith, that the New York delegation as a whole will make no effort to have a dry plank inserted in the platform, nor will the New York Democratic organization sanction such an attempt.

Senator Ralston seemingly put himself out of the running by requesting the Indiana state convention to send an uninstructed delegation to New York.

It is probable that Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana will be permanent chairman of the Democratic convention. George Brennan of Illinois is for him, asserting that "aside from geographical reasons, the distinguished record made by Senator Walsh in disclosing to the country scandals without parallel in the history of the nation, should make his selection inevitable." Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi has been selected as temporary chairman and the keynote sounder.

IN SOME respects the report of the senate oil committee, prepared by Senator Walsh and submitted Thursday, was surprisingly mild. It charged flagrant disregard of the law in the Sinclair and Doheny leases, which were declared to be "indefensibly wasteful" and based on a policy which congress alone had authority to determine. Former Secretary Fall's secret negotiation of the leases was described as in disregard of the statutes, and his acceptance of $100,000 from Doheny was called "in the last degree reprehensible." The executive order by which President Harding transferred the oil reserves from the Navy to the Interior department was held in the report to have been illegal.

On the other hand, the report exonerated former Secretary of the Navy Denby and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of any part whatever in the negotiations leading to the leases, and declared that the committee found no facts of importance in support of the rumor that public officials had speculated in Doheny and Sinclair oil stocks. Furthermore, it said "the evidence failed to establish the existence" of any conspiracy between oil operators and others at the Republican national convention in 1920 for exploitation of public resources.

The sending of marines to drive claimants from Teapot Dome after the Sinclair lease had been signed was denounced "as a perfectly outrageous use of the armed forces of the United States," resorted to "to avoid a judicial inquiry into the validity of the Sinclair lease."

HARRY DAUGHERTY refused last week to testify before the senate committee that has been investigating him, so Chairman Brookhart—who has just been renominated by the Republicans of Iowa—drew up a partial report, and the future course of the inquiry will depend on the Supreme court decision as to the committee's powers. In a letter read by his attorney, Mr. Daugherty expressed his resentment against what he considered the unfair actions of the committee, and added: "At this point I take occasion to contradict and deny any inference, surmise or suspicion that I profited in any illegal, corrupt or unethical way, directly or indirectly, by reason of any activities of political associates or friends at any time; or that my conduct, either official or personal, was directly or indirectly influenced at any time, in any way, by venal and corrupt motives."

PREMIER POINCARE of France has resigned, and President Millerand has invited Edouard Herriot, leader of the radicals, to form a new ministry. But Millerand himself has, up to the time of writing, refused stubbornly to comply with the demands of his opponents and get out of office, and the members of the left are not willing to form a government under Millerand's presidency. Paul Painleve is the man the left bloc wants for president, and as a step toward that he was elected president of the chamber of deputies.

Opposition parties in Germany having been unable to get together for the formation of a government, President Ebert reappointed Chancellor Marx and his cabinet, despite the howls of the Communists and Nationalists. Marx told the reichstag that the Dawes report was "Germany's last chance of salvation" and that the government was prepared to receive the report as an unalterable and indivisible whole.

WHAT was at first reported to be a serious attempt at a revolution in Rumania turned out to be a peaceful demonstration by 10,000 peasants, led by General Averescu, who marched into Bucharest and presented a protest against the government of Premier Bratiano, and then quietly dispersed. The opposition to Bratiano is growing so strong that his resignation is predicted.

Albania, however, really has a revolution led by Rezed Schalja. The rebels are reported to have captured Scutari and Skodra, and there was a rumor that they had taken Tirana, the capital. The fighting is fierce. In response to the request of the American minister, Vice Admiral Andrews, commanding American naval forces in European waters, was instructed to hold a warship in readiness to proceed to Durazzo.

CHANCELLOR SEIPEL of Austria was seriously wounded by a young Communist, and thereupon the Hungarian police announced that this attack was part of a vast plot for the assassination of King George of England, President Millerand of France, Chancellor Marx of Germany and other national leaders. The plot was discovered when the Hungarian police arrested a man named Zetaron, member of a secret anarchist death society with headquarters in Lobben, Austria, for an attempt to kill Regent Horthy.

OUR world encircling army aviators, after a pleasant stop in Japan, flew last week 500 miles over the China sea to Shanghai, where they were given a great welcome. They planned to start for Amoy on Saturday.

Urges Expansion of Nation's Trade Abroad

Boston.—Union of the American people for exploiting existing foreign trade advantages was demanded by J. J. Donovan of Bellingham, Wash., speaking at the eleventh national foreign trade convention, who declared the present wealth of the United States could easily be increased many fold if such union existed.

Mr. Donovan, speaking on "American Foreign Trade Policy," made a comprehensive analysis of the wealth of the United States, pointing out that in the last two decades American foreign trade had grown from less than $1,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 yearly.

He said that this sum was the best proof there was no such thing as economic self-sufficiency left to any nation, and now the United States was definitely a part of the international world of human relationship.

Mr. Donovan pointed to the unparalleled development of the weapons of prosperity, namely, production, transportation, communications and finance within the United States, but said in the last three this nation was handicapped abroad.

"In view of what has been achieved, chiefly through the more or less haphazard efforts of many individuals, each working for himself and his own interest," he said, "there seems almost no limit to the accomplishment possible for American enterprise, initiative and skill if once they could be concentrated."

POULTRY

FEEDING BABY CHICKS IS IMPORTANT WORK

Feeding the baby chick is important because of the fact that a good start means good growth, early maturity, and healthy stock, says D. H. Hall, extension poultry specialist at Clemson college, who suggests below when, how, and what to feed the young chicks.

A good many people make a mistake by feeding the baby chicks too early after they are hatched. The chicks can go without food for at least 48 hours after they are hatched. During this period they are allowed time to absorb the yolk material left in their bodies and to put their bodies into condition for receiving other food.

The first food that should be given a baby chick is buttermilk, as it is a good protein and also contains much lactic acid. The lactic acid forms an unfavorable medium for the development of white diarrhea. White diarrhea is one of the most dreaded diseases of baby chicks, and to guard against this disease buttermilk should be kept before the baby chicks at all times.

After the baby chicks have had a drink of buttermilk, the next feed should be given as a soft feed. Hard-boiled infertile eggs mixed with an equal part of cornmeal is a mighty good starter. The eggs furnish protein and the cornmeal furnishes heat and energy. When the eggs cannot be obtained, it is a good idea to start the baby chicks off on one-half pound of meat meal mixed with five pounds of cornmeal, which can be fed damp with buttermilk.

After being fed either of the above mixtures for one week the chicks should be gradually weaned off to the regular mashes and scratch feeds. A good scratch feed consists of the following:

1 part pinhead oats
2 parts cracked wheat
4 parts cracked corn

The above should be fed as a scratch feed and the baby chicks allowed to scratch in the litter for it. The dry mash should contain the following parts:

40 pounds cornmeal
20 pounds wheat middlings
10 pounds wheat bran
10 pounds finely ground oats
15 pounds meat scraps
5 pounds peanut meal or soy bean meal

The above scratch and mash feeds can be fed to the baby chicks until they are three months old. After the chicks are three months old they can be placed on the regular scratch feed and mash.

Leg Weakness in Chicks From Lack of Vitamins

Feeding is a factor in prevention of poultry disease. A ration should be fed that contains not only the proper amount of fat, carbohydrates, and proteins, but also the essential vitamins. Vitamins are best supplied by green feed. Green feed should be given to the birds daily. A disease known as nutritional disease results from lack of the proper vitamins, but more important than this is the danger of lowering the resistance of the fowls and thus making them susceptible to more serious diseases, says W. R. Hinshaw, instructor in bacteriology, Kansas State Agricultural college.

Young chicks are especially susceptible to the deficiency disease caused by lack of vitamin D. Weak legs result from the lack of this vitamin, and this can be corrected by giving small quantities of cod liver oil. Direct sunlight has the same effect as cod liver oil in correcting this condition, so that sunlight may be considered a factor in health feeding. When direct sunlight is available nutritional rickets or weak legs can be prevented if the chicks are allowed to get plenty of it, according to Mr. Hinshaw.

Poultry Notes

Successful poultry raisers hatch early for winter-laying pullets.

* * *

If the turkey hen wants to wean the brood early, there's little use to interfere by cooping them together. In such a case the hen is likely to kill or maim part or all of the brood.

* * *

In getting the machine ready for the eggs, be sure that the incubator is running evenly and maintaining a uniform temperature. The machine should be run for several days before the eggs are placed in it.

* * *

Do not brood too many chicks in one flock, because it does not pay to raise too many chicks under one stove. If a great number is to be brooded it will be cheaper in the end to buy another stove.

* * *

Give a flying start to little chicks by feeding them chick grit and sour milk or buttermilk when they are first hatched.

* * *

Incubators should be of good construction and run where drafts, sudden temperature changes and direct sunlight cannot reach them.

* * *

Baby chicks hatched out during April must receive the best kind of food to keep them growing, for it will take a little pushing to mature them before winter.

* * *

Young geese and ducks are easily affected by the hot sun during the summer months. Sunstroke is very common, and the bird simply wilts down and dies.

* * *

The pullet that takes eight months or more to mature is not as a rule a paying proposition. It not only costs more to keep her until she lays, but the very weakness which made a late maturer of her prevents her from making a good record the rest of the year. In addition she misses the period of high-priced eggs.

SUFFERED SINCE YOUNG GIRL

Words Failed to Express Benefit Received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Texas. — "Words cannot express how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Every month I would have cramps and headache, and I felt like I was freezing to death. I suffered in this way from the time I was a young girl, and all the doctors said was 'operation.' For months I had a tired, sleepy feeling all day, and when night would come I would be so nervous I couldn't stay in bed. Our druggist recommended the Vegetable Compound to my husband and he bought four bottles. I have taken every one and I think I have a right to praise your medicine."—Mrs. J. B. HOLLEMAN, 2214 E. Marshal Street, Greenville, Texas.

For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women from girlhood through middle age.

It is a dependable medicine for troubles common to women. Such symptoms as Mrs. Holleman had are relieved by correcting the cause of the trouble. For sale by druggists everywhere.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON I.

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

J. H. Puelicher

Why banks? To facilitate the exchange of goods and services, says the economist.

FACILITATE = make easy.

GOODS = food, clothing, necessities, comforts, luxuries.

SERVICES = the work that goes into manufacturing, into crop-raising, into selling, buying, bookkeeping, financing—into all man's wants.

The FARMER sells his crop for money.

The WORKMAN sells his labor for money.

The MANUFACTURER sells his product for money, and the money is used to buy what the others have grown or produced—used in the exchange of goods and services which the banks facilitate.

Save The Forests

In Congressional halls at Washinton there are still remaining some men who honestly believe that the country's forests should be saved and protected from the onslaughts of the timber pirates and destructive forest fires which have swept the north-west and northern Michigan particularly in years gone by.

Congressman Davey is one of these and he has made a number of speeches along these lines and he finds still more could be said with impunity, all of which his hearers pay but slight attention to. Gifford Pinchot, our national forester head, has stated that this country is facing a timber shortage in 25 years unless the most impossible should happen. All over the timber country of the west and south magnificent trees are being cut off and nothing further is done to save this waste land.

Mr. Davey advocates the government buying up at a very low figure large acreages of this cut-over slashings, protecting it from fires and planting saplings of some quick growing trees for a period of years. This can be done and the results would be very promising toward saving our magnificent timber.

Michigan in years past has been a great white pine state—filled with gigantic pines which the lumbermen of other states were quick to discover. Forty-five years ago thriving lumber camps were operating in Isabella county and further north. The wail of the hungry saw and the boom of the woodsman's axe are stilled forever. Gone are the ponderous steam enginrs with their shrieking whistle. The silence of death broods over treeless wastes, broken occasionally by the clarion call of the goshawk or the skurrying of the red deer.

There is a much talked-of law in Germany which compels a man who cuts kown a tree to replace it. This seems a little high-handed but we are coming to it some of these days unless the better plan is put in operation.

Plan Field Day At Cass County Farm

Important soil experimental work being carried out on the Cass County farm, near Cassopolis, will be inspected at a big farmers round up and field day at the farm on Saturday, June 14, according to announcement made here this week by the soils department of the M. A. C. under whose direction the test work is being conducted.

The Cass County experimental fields are among the largest and most interesting in the state, the results being obtained there being of value to farmers over large areas The work has been carried on over a period of several years and information of more than usual importance is said to be available for inspection. The tests cover alfalfa sweet clover, wheat, and oats, according to Prof. C. E. Miller, of the college staff. The use of lime, including hydrated lime, marl, and limestone of different degrees of fineness in soil treatment, is illustrated graphically in the results of the various plots. Commercial fertilizers of different types and barn yard manure have also been made use of in the extensive experimental program involved.

Inspection of the various plots and explanation of the plan and results of the test program will feature the meeting, which is to last from one until five in the afternoon of the 14th. The farm is located two and one half miles south west of the city of Cassopolis.

The Railroad

"The Railroad is coming."

Until very recently such an announcement was enough to start a municipal celebration in a small town, which for historical enthusiasm was difficult to beat. The coming of the railroad has meant business, civilization, social intercourse, everything to communities which had no rail communication.

But a new era dawns. Today the cry is "the good highway is coming to town!" And in at least one instance, a town didn't wait for the highway, but finding it was being missed by the road, left the railroad and moved bodily to the highway!

Reno, a small community, six miles east of Paris, Tex., reversed the time honored custom of towns following the railroad, and moved away from the railroad to the new concrete highway that runs east out of Paris.

This town, on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, saw only four trains a day passing through it, while a half mile away a steady stream of traffic passes over the concrete highway. So the town packed up all of its three business houses and moved over. Only a swimming pool was left.

There is no real reason why every town shouldn't have a good highway running to, through, and away from it. What other towns are doing to improve their roads, all towns may do.

The good highway means today as much to any town as the railroad did ten, twenty, fifty years ago. It means quick transportation increased markets, better business, finer schools, more comforts. All this being so—and it is not disputed why should not the Nation help, not by helping build seven per cent of the mileage existing, as under Federal aid, but by a comprehensive building program, which will gridiron this Nation, north and south east and west, by a system of national highways which will give every town the transportation it needs? True, not every town in the Union could be reached on, let us say, a two hundred and fifty thousand mile trunk line system, but every town would be so close to one or another link of such a system as to make the connection so inexpensive that no town could afford not to make it!

Bears Give Trouble In State Of Washington

Ordinarily bears are regarded as game animals by Government hunters and are not taken except when individuals are known to be destructive to livestock. Many reports of depredation by bears in the State of Washington were received last year by the Biological Survey district headquarters from sheep men who use the national forests for grazing. Hunters were assigned to kill the bears which were suspected of doing the damage. They were either trapped at freshly killed carcasses or trailed with dogs from their kills. The stomach content of all the bears taken by these hunters employed by the United States Department of Agriculture during the past year revealed either beef or mutton.

In July a large grizzly bear was reported to be killing a number of cattle and sheep in the Chelan National Forest. A cooperative State hunter finally killed it, after trailing the grizzly for over two weeks with a pack of trained hounds. The bear was known to have killed 36 head of cattle and 100 sheep in the year before it was captured, but it had ranged the district for more than four years, and in this period caused enormous losses. In all 37 bears were killed during the year in this State.

Farms Assessed Higher Than Is City Real Estate

Reports given by representatives from several county farm bureaus that have been making investigations about the assessment of property for tax purposes who met for a conference in Lansing recently, showed that in many counties there is a gross inequality between assessment of farm and city property and in every county thus far studied farms are assessed substanially higher than city property.

Official facts regarding property transfers were secured from the Register of Deeds' office and the assessed valuation of each description of property determined by consulting the tax rolls in the County Treasurer's office. An analysis of the facts thus revealed shows that farms are being assessed well up to their cash value in most counties, while in one county the farms are assessed at more than their sale value City property assessments range from 40 to 80 per cent of sales value.

The county farm bureau delegates who met at Lansing made plans for presenting these assessment facts to the boards of supervisors at their June meeting. An equalization will be sought. The sentiment was expressed that rural supervisors would welcome these reports as they had realized for some time that farms were assessed higher than city property, but they had not had convincing proof to back up their contentions.

To Legionairres

It is not necessary to write to the War Department; the Navy Department, or the United States Veterans' Bureau, for blanks forms of application for adjusted compensation, or for any information concerning it. Full information with regard thereto will be published in the public press and detailed information will be contained in the circular that will accompany each application. When the blank forms of application and the circulars shall have been printed, they will be immediately distributed throughout the country to the post offices, to the posts of the American Legion and other veteran organizations, to the American Red Cross Chapters, and to the Army and Navy recruiting offices, and Army and Navy posts and stations, for immediate delivery to all persons who desire to apply for the adjusted compensation. It is expected that copies of application and circulars of instructions will be available for distribution on or before June 30, 1924.

Cash payment of the adjusted compensation to those entitled to $50 or less will not be made prior to March 1, 1925. The adjusted service certificates will bear date January 1, 1925, or later, but, under the law, no loan can be made on the adjusted service certificates until two years after the date of such certificates.

The War Department, Navy Department, and the United States Veterans' Bureau, have made extensive preparations to handle promptly all claims for the adjusted compensation. This great work will require the undivided attention of every employee, and it will be impossible to answer individual inquires concerning the matter. Such inquires would not only be useless but to answer them would delay action on the claims. Claimants will aid materially if they will fill up the blank forms of application to the best of their ability in accordance with their own knowledge or recollection of the facts, and refrain from writing to the War Department, Navy Department, or the United States Veterans' Bureau, concerning adjusted compensation.

University Will Hold Commencement

The eightieth annual Commencement at the University of Michigan will be held Monday morning, June 15 on Ferry Field when Seniors of the various colleges will receive their diplomas. Glenn Frank editor of the Century Magazine, has been announced as the Commencement speaker. In case of rain the exercises will be held at the Yost Field House, which is adjacent to the football field, where the outdoor ceremonies are planned.

William Lowe Bryan, president of Indiana University, will give the baccalaureate address at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in Hill auditorium.

Alumni class reunions will be held Friday with the annual alumni meeting at 10 o'clock Saturday morning in Hill Auditorium. In the afternoon the annual alumni mass meeting will be held in the auditorium.

The alumni classes which will hold reunions this year are: Literary '74; '79, '81, '83, '84, '94 '99 '01, '02, '03, '04, '20, '21, '22. Engineering '94, '14, '20, '21, 22. Medical '74, '77, '99, '01, '02, '03 '04, '09; Law '78, '85, '94. '99, '03 '04, '14; '22; Dental '99.

The annual Senior promenade will be held on the Campus Saturday night while returning alumni and visitors will be entertained with a band concert Friday night and baseball game between the Michigan team and the Meeji University, os Japan Friday and Saturday.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON VI

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

We hear of bank capital, surplus and stockholders. What economic services do they render the community?

J. H. Puelicher

BANK CAPITAL=The money necessary to engage in the business of rendering banking services to the community.

SURPLUS=A part of a bank's earnings not paid out as dividends to stockholders but reserved for possible losses or to expand activities as needed by growing business.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS=Protection to depositors, because if trouble arises, depositors must be paid in full out of these funds if necessary before stockholders are paid anything.

BANK STOCKHOLDER=Anyone able and willing to buy stock in a bank and to assume the risk of the business. A share of stock represents a fraction of ownership in the whole, and with ownership go responsibilities and liabilities. In smaller communities those who usually organize banks interest successful farmers, successful merchants and successful manufacturers because of the influence they bring.

DOUBLE LIABILITY=The obligation under the law that rests on a bank stockholder, in case his bank fails and the assets are not enough to pay depositors, to pay an amount equal to his bank stock, in addition to losing his original investment. This is not the case in corporations other than banks. Example: If a man owned $1,000 in bank stock and the bank failed, and after the assets had been used, the bank still owed money to depositors, the stockholder would be required to pay up to another $1,000 if necessary to meet the obligations to depositors.

Thus it is seen that bank capital and bank stockholders perform real economic services.

BETTER BEEF BY ELECTRIC PUMPS

Make Fresh Water Possible, and Iowa Man Finds Cattle's Weight Gains Accordingly.

It has been established conclusively, in the practice of successful farming, that fresh water, as distinguished from standing water, means better live-stock. And it has now been established, in addition, that an electrically operated pumping system on the farm is so efficient in providing a supply of fresh, running water, that it is comparable with that finest of all water supplies—a natural spring.

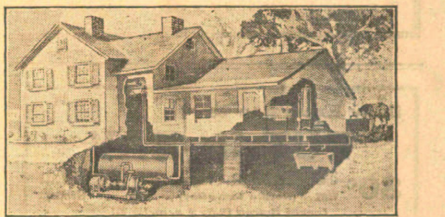
The experience of an Iowa farmer in this matter has just come to notice. This farmer, who is also a local banker, was raising beef cattle.

He made tests on the relation of water to the weight of his stock and noted that his cattle drank more water when it was pumped fresh from the ground for them, than when they drank water that had stood long in the tank.

Following a study of the matter, he and a neighboring farmer put in an electric power line for their farms, expending together about $1,100. After a year's operation, from that particular station, 57 carloads of cattle were shipped. Seven of these carloads were from three farms—a farm with a spring and the two farms equipped with electricity.

Difference Due to Water

The cattle in those seven carloads were the only cattle out of the entire 57 carloads that brought top prices on the market. Moreover, the average weight of the cattle in those seven cars was 58 pounds per head greater than the average weight of the cattle in the other cars. The banker-farmer attributed this entirely to his facilities for giving the cattle an adequate supply of fresh water at ground temperature, and he estimated that in this year alone he made approximately $400 on his investment.



Electrically Operated Water Supply System for Farm Use.

FARMS AND CITIES A MODERN CONTRAST

Inequalities Noted by One Who Has Electric Light and Heat Within Finger Reach.

In the thinly settled regions are many folks who yearn for the time when electricity will reach them. This is made plain by a letter which appeared in the Michigan Patron, official organ of the Michigan State Grange, a short time ago. This correspondent said:

"Reading about the Grange investigation of water power for farm use has set me thinking about the inequalities of our present opportunities. For instance, for three weeks I've been commanded to lie in bed and keep absolutely warm. Even though it has been 12 degrees below zero part of that time, at any moment I might do two things—with one hand I could reach up and by a twirl of my fingers flood my room with brilliant light, while with the other hand I could turn a current of heat into an electric pad at my side. Thus somewhere, perhaps out in a distant river, water was working to send me light and heat.

"But I happen to know that not many miles away there are farm men and women dairying by lantern light and gasoline power. And I think, too, of another farm woman who lives so close to a city she sees its twinkling lights every night. One night at Grange the lecturer asked this woman to tell what she'd do if she had $50 to make her work easier, and she stood up and named more improvements than $1,000 would install—all electrical. Among other things she said: 'Every member of my family needs a lamp to study or work by every night, and every morning I must wash and fill those lamps. What a help it would be to me to be spared this daily task!'"

WHY BANKS?

LESSON V

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

Why does not the banker pay savers as high interest on their money as he charges borrowers when he loans them that same money? Text books say he must charge more than he pays so as to meet overhead expenses, his unavoidable losses, and dividends.

J. H. Puelicher

OVERHEAD EXPENSES = cost and maintenance of the bank building, with costly equipment, such as steel vaults, so the depositors' money will be safe; light, heat, supplies, fire and theft insurance; taxes; and salaries to men and women employees of honesty and ability.

UNAVOIDABLE LOSSES = occasional unrepaid loans made to those who have the misfortune to fail in business. Although bankers exercise great caution and are experts in judging business conditions and character, they sometimes have such losses. These must be met out of the gross profits from interest charged borrowers above that paid depositors—as fire insurance companies meet losses out of reserve funds created by careful investment of premiums.

DIVIDENDS = money divided among stockholders out of clear profits left over after overhead, losses and all other interests of the depositors have been fully taken care of.

Thus bankers pay depositors less interest on their savings than they charge the borrowers of those savings so that they can earn funds to meet the expenses of rendering efficient, careful and valuable services to the depositors.

WHY BANKS?

REVIEW

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

Those who have been reading these lessons have found banks to be semi-public corporations, chartered, regulated, and examined by State or Nation, but owned by private stockholders.

J. H. Puelicher

We found that banks
1. Receive deposits.
2. Make loans.

We found deposits to be of two kinds—
1. Savings Deposits.
2. Commercial Deposits.

We found that interest is paid on Savings Deposits; that the people's savings loaned by banks to farmers, merchants, manufacturers, produce wages and profits, which make more savings.

We found that were it not for the savings of the past, there could not be capital with which to build schools, railroads, ships, telephone and telegraph lines, factories, and the many things which are a part of civilization.

We found that the banker pays the savings depositor interest for the use of his savings and that he loans these to business but charges business more interest than he pays the saver, so that he could pay his overhead expenses, absorb occasional losses and pay dividends.

We found that bank stock is sold in order to provide capital for the establishing of the bank; that a stockholder in a bank is compelled to pay, in case the bank should fail and the assets not be enough to pay depositors, an amount up to 100 per cent of his stock; that anyone who is able to buy and willing to assume the risk, may purchase bank stock when it is for sale; and that the banks of America are owned by many men and women scattered throughout the country, who have purchased bank stock.

We found that banks render in these ways essential economic services to their communities.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Prohibition In The Constitution

All good laws are broken. The process of a law, is something like this. Someone—man or woman—dreams a better dream for the world. Finally a few people accept the idea. That minority grows at last into a majority, and the idea is written into a law.

Then the minority proceed to break the new law as an infringement upon their liberty.

The law against stealing is still very unpopular in some quarters, yet there is no great demand for the repeal of that law.

The law against murder was broken several hundred times last year in the United States, but we have no organized effort against that statute.

There is always a group of financial pirates who want to repeal the law against usury.

An old man in Illinois moved to town and was arrested for spitting on the sidewalks. He moved back to the country where he could spit in peace.

I cannot think of a single law that does not pinch some of us some of the time. Every new law works a personal hardship some where. It takes time to get used to any new regulation.

For the life of me, I can not see how the opposers to the Constitution work their logic. Still, we hear on all sides that prohibition does not prohibit. I'll tell you how you may find out for yourself how it is working.

Last night I ate supper in the home of a laboring man. I asked him, "Do the men of your Union drink as much as they used to?" He said, "Laboring people are not drinking half as much. I am with them every day. I know."

Go to the farmers who employ hired help that is more or less migratory, and ask them if they are bothered as much with drinking help as they were five years ago.

Go to our prisons and have them tell you that there were 20,000 fewer men committed to prison in the past four years, than in the four preceding years, and that there were 500,000 fewer arrests for crime in the United States during the same time.

Walk into a savings bank, and ask one of its officers to tell you the totals of savings in the United States. He will tell you that every city, where there were formerly saloons, shows a ledger of mounting savings accounts.

Ask the Home Building Associations where the money of the people is going, and they will tell you that every month sees more than 2,000 new homes going up than occurred during the "wet" days of the past.

Then go to our schools, colleges and universities, and see the over crowded conditions everywhere, and know that many of these young men and women are getting a chance in life with the money that used to pass over the mahogany counter.

If that does not satisfy you, go to any city, and attend a Salvation Army mission. The army of blear eyed down and outs are not there any more.

Then know that last year, for every day in the year, three thousand people joined the Churches of America, Catholic and Protestant in all a few over a million. Sobriety is gaining in America. Should you still be dubious, then stand, in imagination, at the bedsides of the mothers of America, mothers whose pillows were wet because of the husband or son going astray through drink and ask them what they think of prohibition?

Conditions are not perfect. Thousands of men, many of them foreign born, or not citizens of the United States at all, are making many thousands of dollars making and bootlegging poisons. This is a condition that is perilous. Both the people and the Courts can remedy this, but not all at once. It takes time to clean up a nest of snakes.

Many rich people, for the time being, are joining with the thugs of te hlower world, in flaunting the law and the Constitution. They will come to their senses in time.

But the great mass of common people who work and try to live honestly are the hope of the country Already they are rising and demanding obedience to law as a national political religion.

The advice of Lincoln can not be improved upon, nor uttered too often to the rising generation; Let obedience to law be taught to the children in the home, and at school Let it be preached from the pulpits- Let it become the political religion of the Nation."

In the meantime, let us continue to work in the interest of this last fine hope of hnmanity. It will finally be realized.

Hereford Breeders To Take State Tour

A state tour for members of the Michigan Hereford Breeders Association will be held in connection with the Livestock Feeders Day at the M. A. C. on June 18, it was announced by officials of the association here last week.

Following the Feeders day program, the Herefords enthusiasts will leave Lansing early Thursday morning, June 19, and start north through Clinton County, visiting prominent Hereford herds as they go. The tour route will take them west from Ionia and Kent counties and then back northeast as far as Mt. Pleasant, in Isabella County, where the last meetings are scheduled for June 20.

Speakers of national reputation in the livestock world will address the Feeders meeting at two o'clock in the afternoon on June 18. Dean Skinner, of Purdue University, will discuss "Steer feeding and Beef production"; C. A. Stewart, of Chicago, executive secretary of the National Producers Association will talk on "Livestock Marketing" and Prof. G A. Brown, head of the M. A. C. animal husbandry department, will outline and explain the livestock feeding experiments at the college. Inspection of the pens that have been on experimental feeding work will be made in the morning, special work with hogs, horses and beef cattle being ready for announcement and final check by the visitors.

The New Salt

The new "iodized table salt" containing enough iodine to protect against simple goiter was placed on sale by all Michigan salt manufacturers on May first. This marks we believe, one of the most important an far reaching advances in Michigan's public health history

That thyroid enlargement, or simple goiter, is unusually common in Michigan has been known for some time. A recent survey made by this Department of 31.612 school children in four representative counties showed almost half of them to have enlarged thyroid. We believe that the solution of this important health problem has been found in the new iodized salt, a simple, inexpensive, and effective measure that is within the reach of everyone.

Simple goiter is an enlargement of the thyroid gland. It is not a dis ease. the gland becomes enlarged because of a lack in the food and water of a necessary food element iodine. Michigan soil, unlike that of most other states, does not contain enough iodine to keep the thyroid in normal condition; and ordinary table salt has been refined until it no longer contains the iodine that is commonly found in crude salt. The iodized salt has this essential food element restored to it.

Putting back into our food supply the iodine that is lacking will solve Michigan's simple goiter problem and everyday use of iodized salt will do this. It is a preventive; it will not take the place of medical treatment for the diseased thyroid.

Ask your grocer for iodized salt if you have not already done so. Use it on the table and for cooking substitute it for the salt you are now using. It looks and tastes exactly like ordinary salt and it costs only a trifle more. It is not a medicine, it is only a more complete food and its use can harm no one.

By promptly adopting the new salt and using it for all household purposes you will secure the protection against simple goiter that every Michigan resident needs.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ABOUT THE HOUSE MONEY

Aunt Emmy found Molly crying as if her heart would break.

"What's the matter, Molly dear?" she asked, patting the bride's shoulder.

"Oh, Aunt Emmy, it's that horrid money. The household money is gone again, and I don't know where it went. I can't tell Ted, and yet I can't finish out the week. And I was going to save some every week, too!" she wailed.

"So that's it! It certainly does beat all how silly people are about money. Now stop crying, Molly, and tell me how much you are short this week."

"Ten dollars," sobbed Molly.

"Dry your eyes and come out with me," comforted Aunt Emmy. "Everything will be all right. The bank is soliciting small accounts. I noticed they have thrift accounts, too——"

"I don't care," sobbed Molly. "I can't have a bank account. No money."

"You are going to open both a household checking account and a thrift account. A thrift account can be opened with one dollar, and you must put aside a certain sum every week. You should save two dollars each week. Money that you once get your hands on is mighty hard to save so when we go to the bank we will ask them to take two dollars out of your weekly household money deposit and put it in your thrift account. The thrift account will pay interest."

"But how can I keep my bankbook straight?" sighed Molly.

"You can add and subtract, can't you?" snapped Aunt Emmy. "You went to school, you know, and the bank will be glad to show you at first. Come on, Molly, let's be going."

At the bank Aunt Emmy gave Molly a check to start her account. "You can give this back to me at the end of the year, Molly. You can save it easily. Never buy by telephone. See everything for yourself. Keep accurate accounts, pay your bills promptly and don't carry money around with you."

When they came out of the bank Molly was the proud possessor of two pass books and a check book.

"I've always been afraid of banks," said Molly, "but I didn't know people in them could be so friendly. And besides getting things down in black and white this way will make it a lot easier to keep them straight. I just know it will!"

Aunt Emmy smiled knowingly.—ANNE B. AYMES.

SAVINGS MORE THAN DOUBLE IN DECADE

New York.—Reported savings deposits in banks and trust companies of the United States have more than doubled in amount during the past decade, and the number of accounts have increased by about 141 per cent, figures compiled by the Savings Bank Division, American Bankers Association, show.

"If distributed equally among our entire population, the savings deposits in 1912 would have given $89 to each adult and child in the country," the Division's report says, "but in 1922 the portion of each would have been no less than $158."

The officially reported savings deposits are as follows:

	Deposits	Accounts
1912	$8,425,275,000	12,584,31
1922	17,331,479,000	30,323,32
Increase ..	105.7%	140.9%

"This remarkable growth is attributable to improvement in the services of the banks for savers and to the more consistent canvass for accounts through advertising and soliciting," the report says.

Concrete Pavements Grow Stronger Year After Year

When you vote for a paved road or street, you want to know that you won't be called upon for assessments every now and then to repair or rebuild it.

Built according to present-day high standards, Concrete roads and streets permanently withstand the heaviest pounding and grinding of modern traffic. In fact, they grow stronger year after year.

That is because their definitely proportioned mixture of sand, pebbles or broken stone, and water, is held together by the everlasting grip of that tenacious binder, portland cement.

Concrete Pavements have the repair built out and the maintenance built in. That is why they pay you handsome dividends in satisfaction and service.

Firm, rigid, unyielding, and the last word in paving economy, Concrete Roads and Streets are also skid-proof. And their color is a pleasing, light gray—another very important advantage, especially for night driving.

• • •

Watch for advertisements telling about the many other uses of concrete. And remember that the Portland Cement Association has a free personal service to offer you. Whether you use concrete or have it used for you, this service will give you more for your money.

Our booklets R-3 and R-4 tell many interesting things about Concrete Roads and Streets. Which one would you like us to send? There is no charge.

Belgium Didn't Think Much of Bonapartes

A descendant of the illustrious family of Bonaparte, Miss Blanche Sterleight, is selling motorcars to "prospects" in New York. Miss Sterleight is a daughter of Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte. The latter's husband was a grandson of Joseph, brother of the great Corsican himself. Joseph was Napoleon's right hand in the critical days of the consulate. He it was who rushed the grenadiers to the chamber of deputies during the revolution when his brother was answering charges of extravagance in his campaign in Egypt and Italy. Later Joseph was awarded the throne of Spain. An old Flemish rhyme has it that Napoleon was "a butcher of men." Louis (king of Holland) "always broke his promises." Jerome (king of Westphalia) "dealt in ham" and Joseph was the "tyrant of Spain."

Old Vehicles in Favor

Yucatan clings to antiquated means of transportation, which include the carreta, the coche, the volan and the volanté, although the introduction of automobiles bids fair to eliminate these vehicles, says the Detroit News. The carreta is a heavy two-wheeled truck; the coche, a light four-wheeled, rubber-tired, rigid-topped carriage, with body supported on heavy leather straps, for travel on the rocky country roads, similar to the stage coach of America's old West, and the volante, a very heavy four-wheeled vehicle, somewhat like a victoria, but with the body supported on heavy leather straps used for rough travel in the rural districts.

Appalling Problem Confronts Americans, Life Tables Show

Average health span extends only from age 18 to age 31—Earning power dwindles rapidly after 40

Health—physical freedom and full vigor—ends at age 31 for the average person. Maximum usefulness ends at 40. These facts, shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920, form the most appalling problem every human being has to face!

What are the years after 40 going to mean to you? Will they be worth living? Can you earn your way during those years?

Not if you are "the average individual." What sort of person is "the average individual" in America? He works hard. He eats unwisely. He loads his body with drug stimulants, which appear to give energy, but actually borrow this energy from his own reserve.

Age 31—and he begins to slip. The reserve strength which his body sought to store up against these later years, has bit by bit been robbed. Age 40—he suffers loss of income. Age 50—what?

Remember the simple laws of health which everyone learned in school. Avoid stimulants. Avoid the sleepless hours, upset digestion, warning headaches, taut nerves and muddy complexions which so often accompany the use of the drug caffein.

Caffein is classified as a poison. Like strychnin, it is sometimes given by doctors in cases of heart failure. The average cup of coffee contains the usual dose of caffein administered in such cases. The alarming foolishness of taking this poison regularly into the system is borne out by the frightful limitation of health and usefulness as compared with the length of life.

You need the digestive aid and comfort of a hot drink. You can get such a drink without drugs. You can get it with a flavor which millions of people consider more delicious than any other. You can get it in a form which contributes, rather than robs, reserve strength.

In April the two friends set out afoot for the lower end of the Highlands. On the river they hired a Dutch farmer to take them on to Albany in his sloop. After two delightful days at home, General Schuyler suggested that they could do a great service by traversing the wilderness to the valley of the great river of the north, as far as possible toward Swegachie, and reporting their observations to Crown Point or Fort Edward, if there seemed to be occasion for it, and if not, they were to proceed to General Herkimer's camp at Oriskany and give him what help they could in protecting the settlers in the west.

"You would need to take all your wit and courage with you," the general warned them. "The Indians are in bad temper. They have taken to roasting their prisoners at the stake and eating their flesh. This is a hazardous undertaking. Therefore, I give you a suggestion and not an order."

"I'll go 'lone," said Solomon. "If I get et up it needn't break nobody's heart. Let Jack go to one o' the forts."

"No, I'd rather go into the bush with you," said Jack. "We're both needed there. If necessary we could separate and carry our warning in two directions. We'll take a couple of the new double-barreled rifles and four pistols. If we had to, I think we could fight a hole through any trouble we are likely to have."

So it was decided that they should go together on this scouting trip into the north bush. Solomon had long before that invented what he called "a lightnin' thrower" for close fighting with Indians, to be used if one were hard pressed and outnumbered and likely to have his scalp taken. This odd contrivance he had never had occasion to use. It was a thin, round shell of cast iron with a tube, a flint and plunger. The shell was of about the size of a large apple. It was to be filled with missiles and gunpowder. The plunger, with its spring, was set vertically above the tube. In throwing this contrivance one released its spring by the pressure of his thumb. The hammer fell and the spark it made ignited a fuse leading down to the powder. Its owner had to throw it from behind a tree or have a share in the peril it was sure to create.

While Jack was at home with his people Solomon spent a week in the foundry and forge and, before they set out on their journey, had three of these unique weapons, all loaded and packed in waterproof wrappings.

About the middle of May they proceeded in a light bark canoe to Fort Edward and carried it across country to Lake George and made their way with paddles to Ticonderoga. There they learned that scouts were operating only on and near Lake Champlain. The interior of Tryon county was said to be dangerous ground. Mohawks, Cagnawagas, Senecas, Algonquins and Hurons were thick in the bush and all on the warpath. They were torturing and eating every white man that fell in their hands, save those with a Tory mark on them.

"We're skeered o' the bush," said an elderly bearded soldier, who was sitting on a log. "A man who goes into the wildwood needs to be a good friend o' God."

"But Schuyler thinks a force of British may land somewhere along the big river and come down through the bush, building a road as they advance," said Jack.

"A thousand men could make a tol'able waggin road to Fort Edward in a month," Solomon declared. "That's mebbe the reason the Injuns are out in the bush eatin' Yankees. They're tryin' fer to skeer us an' keep us erway. By the hide an' horns o' the devil! We got to know what's a-goin' on out thar. You fellers are a-settin' eround these 'ere forts as if ye had nothin' to do but chaw beefsteak an' wipe yer rifles an' pick yer teeth. Why don't ye go out thar in the bush and do a little skeerin' yerselves? Ye're like a lot o' ol' women settin' by the fire an' tellin' ghos' stories."

"We got 'nuff to do considerin' the pay we git," said a sergeant.

"H—l an' Tophet! What do ye want o' pay?" Solomon answered. "Ain't ye willin' to fight fer yer own liberty without bein' paid fer it? Ye been kicked an' robbed an' spit on, an' dragged eround by the heels, an' ye don't want to fight 'less somebody pays ye. What a dam' corn fiddle o' a man ye mus' be!"

Solomon was putting fresh provisions in his pack as he talked.

"All the Injuns o' Kinady an' the great grass lands may be snookin' down through the bush. We're bound fer t' know what's a goin' on out thar. We're liable to be skeered, but also an' likewise we'll do some skeerin' 'fore we give up—you hear to me."

Jack and Solomon set out in the bush that afternoon and before night fell were up on the mountain slants north of the Glassy Water, as Lake George was often called those days. But for Solomon's caution an evil fate had perhaps come to them before their first sleep on the journey. The new leaves were just out, but not quite full. The little maples and beeches flung their sprays of vivid green foliage above the darker shades of the witch hopple into the soft-lighted air of the great house of the wood and filled it with a pleasant odor. A mile or so back, Solomon had left the trail and cautioned Jack to keep close and step softly. Soon the old scout stopped and listened and put his ear to the ground. He rose and beckoned to Jack and the two turned aside and made their way stealthily up the slant of a ledge. In the edge of a little thicket on a mossy rock shelf they sat down. Solomon looked serious. There were deep furrows in the skin above his brow.

After a few minutes Solomon turned and whispered:

"Four Injun braves jist went by. Mebbe they're scoutin' fer a big band—mebbe not. If so, the crowd is up the trail. If they're comin' by, it'll be 'fore dark. We'll stop in this 'ere tavern. They's a cave on t'other side o' the ledge as big as a small house."

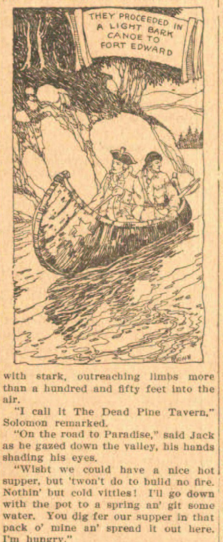
They watched until the sun had set. Then Solomon led Jack to the cave, in which their packs were deposited.

From the cave's entrance they looked upon the undulating green roof of the forest dipping down into a deep valley, cut by the smooth surface of a broad river with mirrored shores, and lifting to the summit of a distant mountain range. Its blue peaks rose into the glow of the sunset.

"Yonder is the great stairway of Heaven!" Jack exclaimed.

"I've put up in this 'ere ol' tavern many a night," said Solomon. "Do ye see its sign?"

He pointed to a great dead pine that stood a little below it, towering with stark, outreaching limbs more than a hundred and fifty feet into the air.



THEY PROCEEDED IN A LIGHT BARK CANOE TO FORT EDWARD

"I call it The Dead Pine Tavern," Solomon remarked.

"On the road to Paradise," said Jack as he gazed down the valley, his hands shading his eyes.

"Wisht we could have a nice hot supper, but 'twon't do to build no fire. Nothin' but cold vittles! I'll go down with the pot to a spring an' git some water. You dig fer our supper in that pack o' mine an' spread it out here. I'm hungry."

They ate their bread and dried meat moistened with spring water, picked some balsam boughs and covered a corner of the mossy floor with them. When the rock chamber was filled with their fragrance, Jack said:

"If my dream comes true and Margaret and I are married, I shall bring her here. I want her to see The Dead Pine Tavern and its outlook."

"Ayes, sir, when ye're married safe," Solomon answered. "We'll come up here fust summer an' fish, an' hunt, an' I'll run the tavern an' do the cookin' an' sweep the floor an' make the beds!"

Jack awoke at daylight and found that he was alone. Solomon returned in half an hour or so.

"Been scoutin' up the trail," he said. "Didn't see a thing but an ol' gnaw bucket. We'll jest eat a bite an' p'int off to the nor'west an' keep watch o' this 'ere trail. They's Injuns over thar on the slants. We got to know how they look an' 'bout how many head they is."

They went on, keeping well away from the trail.

"We'll have to watch it with our ears," said Solomon in a whisper.

His ear was often on the ground that morning and twice he left Jack to "snook" out to the trail and look for tracks. Solomon could imitate the call of the swamp robin, and when they were separated in the bush, he gave it so that his friend could locate him. At midday they sat down in deep shade by the side of a brook and ate their luncheon.

"This 'ere is Peppermint brook," said Solomon. "It's 'nother one o' my taverns."

"Our food isn't going to last long at the rate we are eating it," Jack remarked. "If we can't shoot a gun what are we going to do when it's all gone?"

"Don't worry," Solomon answered. "Ye're in my kentry now an' there's a better tavern up in the nigh trail."

They fared along, favored by good weather, and spent that night on the shore of a little pond not more than fifty paces off the old blazed thoroughfare. Next day, about "half-way from dawn to dark," as Solomon was wont, now and then, to speak of the noon hour, they came suddenly upon fresh "sign." It was where the big north trail from the upper waters of the Mohawk joined the one near which they had been traveling. When they were approaching the point Solomon had left Jack in a thicket and cautiously crept out to the "juneshin." There was half an hour of silence before the old scout came back in sight and beckoned to Jack. His face had never looked more serious. The young man approached him. Solomon swallowed—a part of the effort to restrain his emotions.

"Want to show ye suthin'," he whispered.

The two went cautiously toward the trail. When they reached it the old scout led the way to soft ground near a brook. Then he pointed down at the mud. There were many footprints, newly made, and among them the print of that wooden peg with an iron ring around its bottom, which they had seen twice before, and which was associated with the blackest memories they knew. For some time Solomon studied the surface of the trail in silence.

"More'n twenty Injuns, two captives a pair o' hosses, a cow an' the devil," he whispered to Jack. "Been a raid down to the Mohawk valley. The cow an' the hosses are loaded with plunder. I've noticed that when the Injuns go out to rob an' kill folks ye find, 'mong their tracks, the print o' that 'ere iron ring. I seen it twice in the Ohio kentry. Here is the heart o' the devil an' his fire-water. Red Snout has got to be started on a new trail. His ol' peg leg is goin' down to the gate o' hell tonight."

Solomon's face had darkened with anger. There were deep furrows across his brow.

Standing before Jack about three feet away, he drew out his ram rod and tossed it to the young man, who caught it a little above the middle. Jack knew the meaning of this. They were to put their hands upon the ram rod, one above the other. The last hand it would hold was to do the killing. It was Solomon's.

"Thank God!" he whispered, as his face brightened.

He seemed to be taking careful aim with his right eye.

"It's my job," said he. "I wouldn't 'a' let ye do it if ye'd drawed the chanst. It's my job—proper. They ain't an hour ahead. Mebbe—it's jest possible—he may go to sleep tonight 'fore I do, an' I wouldn't be surprised. They'll build their fire at the caverns on Rock crick an' roast a captive. We'll cross the bush an' come up on t' other side an' see what's goin' on."

They crossed a high ridge, with Solomon tossing his feet in that long, loose stride of his, and went down the slope into a broad valley. The sun sank low and the immeasurable green-roofed house of the wild was dim and dusk when the old scout halted. Ahead in the distance they had heard voices and the neighing of a horse.

"My son," said Solomon as he pointed with his finger, "do you see the brow o the hill yonder whar the black thickets be?"

Jack nodded.

"If ye hear to me ye'll stay this side. This 'ere business is kind o' neevarious. I'm a-goin' clus up. If I come back ye'll hear the call o' the bush owl. If I don't come 'fore mornin you p'int fer hum an' the good God go with ye."

"I shall go as far as you go," Jack answered.

"Ye kin go, but ye ain't obleeged," said he. "Bear in mind, boy. Tonight I'm the cap'n. Do as I tell ye—exact."

Love Produces Maladies

Medical scientists say that love produces in some people definite physical maladies ranging from catalepsy, in which the victim becomes rigid and unconscious, to deafness and complete loss of speech.

Fox World's Greatest Debater at Age of 19

Recent rivalry as to who is the "baby" member of congress has caused some of the bookishly inclined to hunt up records, revealing that although William Pitt was premier of England at twenty-four, and although Charles James Fox was acknowledged to be the greatest debater in parliament at about the same age, having got in when he was nineteen, there once was a young man elected to the congress of the United States when he was twenty-four years old and too young to serve under the Constitution.

This young fellow was John Young Brown of Kentucky, who could not take his seat until the second session of the Thirty-sixth congress, who later served in two other congresses and was governor of his state.

John Randolph of Roanoke, on account of his youthful appearance, was challenged by the clerk of the house, who asked how old he was. Randolph replied that he had better "go ask the people who elected me."

Henry Clay is the only man in history who served in the senate before he was thirty years old, "but he knew enough to keep his mouth shut about his age and no one else thought of it," the late Champ Clark commented. Clay was later secretary of state under John Quincy Adams and twice defeated for the presidency, by Andrew Jackson in 1832 and by James K. Polk in 1844.—Kansas City Star.

His Reputation

"Prisoner," said the magistrate, "you have already been sentenced 11 times for vagrancy, violent assault, embezzlement, theft and so on."

"Would you mind not speaking so loud, your worship?" was the reply. "My intended father-in-law is in court, and you might damage my prospects."

American Gottingers

Beginning with a visit by Benjamin Franklin in 1766, the flow of Americans to the famous University of Gottingen had resulted in 1910, according to the Gottinger Koloniebuch, in a list of American students numbering 1,196, of whom twenty had become college presidents and five ambassadors.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness are oftentimes symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Several weeks ago as we were walking down the road with thought of Einstein on our mind, a large auto suddenly whizzed past arousing us from our reverie. Of course we decided at once that the owner must be some city fellow who had been prospering in the oil business as we were aware of the fact that nobody in the rural districts could afford such a snick, piffian type of car as the one we had just comtemplated.

A few days later as we were strolling np the road wondering if King's ideas concerning the social consciousness were right or wrong, the same auto again whizzed by causing us to change our reflection to the subject of socialism. After reflecting upon the socialistic ideal of the public ownership of coal mines and other public utilities we came to the conclusion that the socialists should also include the public ownership of expensive automobiles in their program. Not so many days after the foregoing occurred, we learned that another traveling palace had been in the neighborhood of Jerome, which so aroused our fears lest the city capitalists might be planning to monopolize the community that we set about at once to discover who the owners of the Marmons or Lincolns might be and to our amazement learned that they were none other than our fellow townsmen George Morehouse and Harry Alley.

A message by cable from London girdled the earth in 80 seconds It was sent direct by telegraph from London, by cable to Halifax then over telephone lines to Banfield Creek, British Columbia. From there it wss cabled to Sydney, Australia, relayed across that continent by land wires and cabled to Dnblin, where it was relayed to Capetown, whence in turn sent back to London via the Azores.

The Spirit of '76

Those grand old marching gladiators with fife and drum whom we have seen pictured so often in story and song bid fair to pass to the realms of oblivion, since it is a fact that the great American public seems to be gradually slipping away from the time-honored institution of Independence Day.

If such is the case the deplorable state of public mind which causes it to forget the events of the Revolution and the birth of a nation, should in all cases be discouraged and stricken from the decalogue.

When we become so worldly and commercialized that no notice is taken of July 4th, we should be relegated to the junk heap, there to repose with other dead and useless material.

If we keep on in this manner 25 years hence will find the common younger generation has forgotten the meaning of the date

It is more than likely that we have so many important days on the calendar, Independence Day will have to be dropped.

The automobile, that 40-league steel boot, is almost entirely responsible for the falling-off of country celebrations. Good roads enter in a small way, the conditions. It is now possible to drive 35 or 40 miles and celebrate while 25 years ago "old dobbin" could hardly be expected to do over 5 miles on July 4th, since he usually had to be abducted from the plow or the mower, to carry his master's son and a sweetheart to the nearest town, where the occasion would be one round of red lemonade, peanuts and the essentials, winding up with a bowery dance and the return home after midnight. Such conditions will never again be with us. With them has gone the glory of the small-town 4th.

On top of this the state of Michigan has ruled that the next day after July 4th, 1924 sale and use of noise-making fire crackers and torpedoes shall cease for all time, and its a God-send, but the joy of celebrating has been extracted so far as the small boy is concerned. From now on he will not care very much about the day.

O Pshaw! What's the use of trying to advocate these dead and gone traditions anyhow? The small boys of ye olden time are long since grown up and the new ones' minds run in entirely different channels. May the Over-ruling Providence help our infidelity!

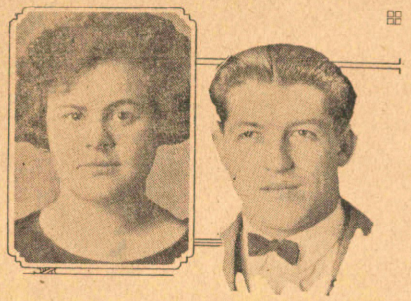
Mary Corbett formerly of this place who graduated from Hillsdale College in 1902, is now head worker of a Community school in Harland county, Kentucky. in a mountainous region where the roads are so poor that travel by auto is almost impossible. Most of her traveling is done by horseback or on foot. This work is among the primitive whites of the mountains who are known as "hill billies" a race made notorious by that versatile writer, M. Quad, of the Detroit Free Press, many years ago.

Prominent Couple Wedded



On Sunday last Rev. Virgil Hunt, pastor of the Congregational church in this village, and Miss Mildred Miner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Miner, of Hillsdale, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, at 2 o'clock, p. m., the double ring ceremony being used, Rev. Harry D. Henry, speaking the vital words that made them man and wife.

The bride is a graduate of Hillsdale College department of music and has appeared publicly many times both here and in Hillsdale where she has passed most of her life. She will be a splendid addition to the musical circles of our village and a wonderful help to her husband in his pastoral duties. The couple left the same afternoon for a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls after which they will be at home July 1st on East Main street.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Hunt and also is a graduate of Hillsdale College this month. The pleasing personality of himself and wife will be a real inspiration to the members of the Congregational church and Society.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Middleville—Mrs. Harriet Campbell, 81 years old, a resident here for 50 years, was found dead from heart failure in an easy chair in her home when a son, Charles, forced his way into the home when he found the doors locked.

Saginaw—George W. Baxter, 60 years old, publisher of the Saginaw Press, a weekly newspaper, and previously publisher of a semi-weekly in Boyne City, and daily newspapers in Kendallville, Ind., and Dowagiac, Mich., died here recently. He installed many of the early linotype machines in Michigan newspaper offices.

Iron Mountain—A "syndicate" of Iron Mountain sportsmen will experiment in crossing breeds of rabbits this summer, in an effort to develop a giant wild rabbit. Blooded Belgian hares have been purchased for the experiment. The offspring will be set loose in the woods of the county as soon as they reach a size that will insure ability to shift for themselves.

Lansing — Charles W. Seymour, chief of police at Highland Pork, was elected president of the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police organized here for the purpose of working for simplification of laws, thus allowing police officers to more effectively enforce the law without having their prisoners set free through technicalities. The organization is to meet annually at Lansing

Adrian—The Adrian street railways, one of the oldest street railway lines in the country is to suspend operation on or before July 1, it was announced after a conference between representatives of the company and the city commission. The line began operation in 1889 and is said to be the oldest electrically operated one in Michigan and the fifth oldest in the United States.

Ludington—Sale of a controlling interest in 47,000 acres of timber land in Hodgins and Whitman townships, Algoma district, Ontario, containing 350,000,000 estimated feet, principally birch and maple, to J. E. Bennett, of Free Soil, and Dirk Schurer, of Gaylord, has been announced here. The new owners will erect a mill at Northland, 20 miles north of Sault Ste Marie, Mich.

Kalamazoo—Permission to abandon the Kalamazoo, Lake Shore & Chicago railway, known as the Fruit Belt line, has been granted by the interstate commerce commission. The company has operated the old route of the Michigan Central railroad between this city and Lawton. Operation of motor buses cut so deeply into the passenger business of the road that passenger trains were abandoned about a year ago.

Grand Rapids—Disappearance last December of Arthur Payne 60 years old, a printer, was solved when Chester Courser, engineer at the Rowe hotel, found the body floating in the East Side canal near the hotel boiler plant. The body was identified by Mrs. Payne. Payne was believed to have been despondent as the result of a son, Earl, 19 years old, junior college engineering student, committing suicide by inhaling ether.

Flint—Mayor David R. Cuthbertson was recalled in a special election by a majority of 2,327 votes. There were 14,281 votes cast, with 8,304 favoring the recall and 5,977 voting to retain the mayor. In a statement made immediately after the final returns of the election were communicated to him, Mayor Cuthbertson declared he would use his right to become a candidate for re-election at the election which now is necessary.

Lansing—Pending the strike decision of the conductors and motormen of the Michigan Electric Railway Co., in several Michigan cities, Mayor Alfred H. Doughty, of Lansing, has reached an agreement with John F. Collins, general manager of the company, whereby the latter has promised that wages of the local men will not be cut but will remain the same as last year. The employes had asked for an increase beginning June 1, but the company posted a notice of a decrease instead.

Detroit—Raymond Sickora, 13 years old, of Lincoln Park, was drowned in the Detroit river at Elizabeth island, where he was attending a picnic of Ecorse school No. 3, of which he was a pupil. He had been playing ball with his schoolmates, and fell into the water while chasing a ball. Another boy jumped into the river in an attempt to rescue him, and in turn was rescued by Albert Yaeger, of Ecorse, who tried in vain to save Sickora. The body was recovered after a search of an hour.

Sault St. Marie—The five-year-old son of William Barnett pulled the trigger of a rifle which was lying on a bed in a lumber camp building at Strongs. In another camp building two houses away the owner of the gun, George Sheppard, 54 years old, of Newberry, was struck by the bullet and instantly killed, the shot having gone through the two buildings. Sheppard was a visitor at the camp and had laid his gun on the bed in one building while he was inspecting the camp. His body was brought to the Soo by Sheriff Arza Swart.

Manistee — Manistee's gas rate was automatically reduced from $1.75 to $1.60 at a special meeting of the city commission here, when Mayor John H. Rademaker ordered the city attorney and city manager to put into effect a resolution adopted by the commission, January 22, 1924, declaring that the gas rate should be reduced within 90 days if the Consumers Power company did not take action toward the construction of a new city gas plant. This plant was to have been completed 2 years ago, under an agreement with the city.

Lansing—The school census, just completed, gives Lansing 14,880 children of school age, a gain of 577 over last year.

Saginaw—Elizabeth Silas Hopper, widow of a Civil war veteran, and pioneer resident of Saginaw, is dead here at the age of 109. Born in 1815, she is thought to be the oldest woman in the state.

Iron Mountain—Announcement that the Ford Motor company will build a second sawmill plant here has resulted in a big influx of unemployed despite unofficial statements that operations would be curtailed here.

Iron Mountain—Gifts aggregating $10,000 equipment and cash to an Iron Mountain hospital, have been announced by a group of doctors, whose services have been contracted for by the Ford Motor company. The hospital is a public-owned institution.

Ishpeming—Surrounded by a forest fire which was sweeping swiftly through the Yellow Dog river valley Frank Krieg, of Birch, state deputy fire warden, and 12 men were trapped near Antlers and forced to run into the river for protection from the flames.

Croswell—The safe of the Farmers' Elevator was blown open by yegg men and $200 in cash stolen. The safe was banked with bags of corn to deaden the noise of the explosion. The safe of the Farmers' Elevator at Minden City was blown open April 8 in a similar manner.

Menominee—Evelyn Larson, 3 years old, was drowned, and Kermit Dean, 15, was seriously injured when the car in which they were riding turned over when it a heap of sand on the county highway five miles north of Menominee and landed in a deep ditch partly filled with water.

Detroit—The date of the general primary, September 9, has been decided upon by the common council as the date for the holding of the primary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Frank E. Doremus as mayor. The election will take place at the general election in October.

Benton Harbor—The House of David, confident of its ability to withstand the latest storm breaking against its wall, is ready with popcorn wagons, miniature railroad, vegetarian restaurant, ball teams and band for what they believe will be the most prosperous summer season in history.

Adrian—Virgil Bordner, 15, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bordner, living three miles west of Metamora, Ohio, is in a critical condition, the result of one leg being torn off at the knee when the boy became caught in the belt of a gasoline engine which he was helping to operate while grinding feed.

Petoskey—Members of the Michigan State Hotelmen's association will be guests in Petoskey, July 4, 5 and 6, at a regional meeting. Important questions on the program are affiliation with the American Hotel association and a plan for consolidation of the advertising of Michigan in general into one organization backed by state aid

Ypsilanti—Reed Pierce and Paul Cook, of this city, escaped probable death by jumping from their automobile as it plunged over a 60-foot embankment and fell bottom up in the Huron River north of here. Pierce, who was driving, lost control of the car when a front spindle broke. The car has been raised from the river

Detroit—Nearly 5,000 boys and girls from public and parochial schools of the city were guests of the Detroit Community Fund, recently, at its fifth annual picnic on Belle Isle. As in former years, the teachers in selecting the children, gave preference to those who had never visited Belle Isle. Last year over 500 such children were found, and for them the trip was a succession of delights

Lansing—The allotment of $2,226,824 by the federal government to Michigan for road building for 1924 is an increase of more than a quarter of a million dollars over the 1923 allotment, which was a few dollars less than $2,000,000. It is only exceeded by the allotment of 1921, which was $2,249,000. The 1923 allotment was $1,500,000. This money will be used principally on the construction of concrete roads on the cross state lines of M-16 and M-17 and the trunk lines running upstate.

Detroit—In 10 years Detroit has added 51 square miles to its territory, and the assessed valuation of the city, or the property value, has jumped $1,897,045,010. The city's budget has jumped from $10,267,999 in 1914 to $51,476,676.73 in 1924 all of which is raised by taxation. This year the city added to the assessed valuation $349,000,000, which brings the property value of Detroit up to $2,455,989,000. The new tax rate has not been definitely determined, but will be with a few cents of $21 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Detroit—John W. Reid, commissioner of public works, who recently made a tour of eastern cities in an effort to find a proper solution of Detroit's rubbish and garbage problems, has assigned an engineer to prepare a plan for a more efficient operation of this department. The various methods employed throughout the country will be considered in the report, together with the possibilities of using the street railway department during the night to haul garbage and rubbish, instead of the present motor truck system.

Detroit—Activity in building construction was maintained in May according to the monthly report of Frank Burton, commissioner of the Detroit department of buildings and safety engineering, which shows 4,811 permits issued for work of a total estimated cost of $16,790,708. This is an increase of 379 permits and of $3,814,947 in expenditure over May, 1923, when 4,432 permits were taken out for work amounting to $12,976,761. The May figures fall short, however, of the April, 1924 showing of 4,924 permits for work to cost $20,128,862

G. O. P. Convention Names Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE was nominated for President Thursday by the Republican national convention at Cleveland. Charles G. Dawes of Illinois was nominated for vice president Thursday night.

President Coolidge was nominated on the first ballot by a vote "practically unanimous." Before the first and only roll call was half completed the story was told. The result was: Coolidge, 1,065; LaFollette, 6 from North Dakota and 28 from Wisconsin, 34; Johnson, 10 from South Dakota. After announcement of the vote Thomas Scott, the one lone Coolidge delegate in the Wisconsin delegation, rose and moved to make the nomination unanimous. But amid the mighty chorus of ayes Wisconsin shouted "No."

"With the exception of a very few voices the nomination of Calvin Coolidge is made unanimous," declared Permanent Chairman Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming.

The one unexpected thing in the convention was the long search for a running mate for President Coolidge. Lowden of Illinois would not take it. Neither would Borah of Idaho. A host of prominent Republicans was considered—Hoover, Dawes, Harbord, Curtis of Kansas, Kenyon of Iowa, Hadley of Missouri, Beveridge and Watson of Indiana, among others. None of them came to a nomination.

Finally, in spite of his reiterated declaration that he would not accept, the convention Thursday afternoon nominated Lowden. Hard upon the nomination came another refusal from Lowden. Thereupon the convention took a recess to enable a committee to get in touch with him. He again declined.

Thereupon the convention reconvened and resumed balloting. Dawes and Hoover were voted for and finally the nomination of Dawes was made unanimous.

Charles G. ("Hell and Maria") Dawes is a national figure—also a world-wide figure. He is a college man, a lawyer and banker. He also knows his way around in politics. He has served his country well in several capacities. He was comptroller of the currency, 1897-02. In the World war he was quickly promoted to brigadier general and achieved fame as the purchasing agent of the A. E. F. He got back into private life in 1919 and in 1921 was appointed director of the federal budget system. There wasn't any budget, but Dawes quickly established one in good working order. It was when he was laying down the financial law and gospel to executive department heads that he got his nickname. As the head of the Dawes commission on German reparations he made the world sit up and take notice.

CALVIN COOLIDGE stands for election largely on two issues: his Republican regularity and his personal character. Events in the convention make that clear and emphatic. Representative Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, a G. O. P. stalwart of the old school, sounded the party regularity note in his keynote address Tuesday. The LaFollette platform was rejected Wednesday with an emphasis and enthusiasm that gave convincing evidence of the temper of the convention. The Coolidge platform was another proof. Then came the address of Chairman Mondell repeating the party regularity-loyalty-responsibility note of Burton and sounding a new note of the personal worth of the standard-bearer of the party and the country's confidence in his character. Said Mondell, who twice served his party as floor leader of the house:

"Never before in our history has the need and the necessity of dependable party majorities and of definite party responsibility been so clearly demonstrated as in the very recent past.

"Confidence in Coolidge is the most important and outstanding fact in the political situation today, and this confidence is as fine a compliment to the American people as it is to the President."

It was President Marion Leroy Burton of the University of Michigan who said the final word on the personal worth of Coolidge in his nominating speech. Tall and scholarly and eloquent Doctor Burton said he came not as one engaged in political activity but as a personal friend to tell the convention why the President should succeed himself. Then followed a masterly analysis of a striking and many-sided character and a tribute such as only a loving and understanding friend could pay. He pronounced his friend "in the most thrilling sense of the term an American, who has been thinking America, believing America and living America." And he nominated "the virile man—the stanch American—the real human being—Calvin Coolidge."

THE outstanding plank in the Coolidge platform, so far as public interest is concerned, is probably the world court plank. Here is its exact text:

"The Republican party reaffirms its stand for agreement among the nations to prevent war and preserve peace. As an important step in this direction we indorse the permanent court of international justice and favor the adherence of the United States to this tribunal, as recommended by President Coolidge. This government has definitely refused membership in the League of Nations and to assume any obligations under the covenant of the league. On this we stand."

MRS. JOHN D. SHERMAN of Estes Park, Colo., was elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs Wednesday at the Los Angeles convention, succeeding Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of Minneapolis. The General Federation, with headquarters in Washington, has a nationwide membership of 2,500,000 which is non-partisan and non-sectarian. It is easily the most influential body of women in the United States. Its activities are manifold. Its political power is shown by the fact that it was a large factor in the passage at the last session of congress of the child labor Constitutional amendment resolution, the McCormick-Hawes act providing for wild-life reservations along the Upper Mississippi and the forestry act. Mrs. Sherman has long been a leader in the Federation and has nation-wide acquaintance.

FIVE thousand doctors descended upon Chicago early in the week for the convention of the American Medical association and gave the public much scientific information without fees. Gland transplantation, declared the surgeon, was no good; all the glands of all the animals in Noah's Ark cannot increase the span of man's life or bring youth to old age. Insulin, asserted the doctor, does not cure diabetes and does not remove the necessity for dieting, but it does bring back lost weight and strength and allows the patient to resume a more normal life. Warning was sounded against the powder puff, the hair dye, and the freckle lotion as disseminators of skin troubles rather than aids to beauty. The cosmetics which American women use yearly to the extent of over $300,000,000 contain mercury, arsenic and even paraphenylendiamin.

It was said right out in meeting that if no effort is made at birth control nature will take charge of the situation by eliminating those least able to resist and the human plans for socialistic altruism will be wrecked in the struggle for mere existence. Resolutions denounced those sections of the national prohibition acts which limit the amount of alcohol a physician may legally prescribe.

And Dr. William Allen Pusey of Chicago, newly installed president, said that medicine, like the whole social organization, is proceeding toward a dangerous goal where government does for the individual what it thinks the individual should do for himself. "The day will come," he said, "when there will not be enough of the population left for production to care for the administrators."

JAPANESE are still showing their irritation against the United States because of the exclusion clause in the American immigration law. Following the raid by ruffians on the foreign colony's dance at the Imperial hotel, Tokyo put in a Sunday of homage at the grave of the "Unknown Martyr" who committed hara kari in protest against the act. A dockworker was arrested in an attempt to assassinate the American consul general. A circular is being sent through the mails by Japanese Christians urging the churches of Japan to separate from the missionary organizations. It also likens President Coolidge to Pontius Pilate. The proposed boycott against American goods is progressing in Japan, but is a failure in China. It is not likely to amount to much in Japan, one reason being that we buy more from the Japanese than they do from us.

Incidentally—and presumably entirely by way of coincidence—Washington announces that practically all of America's naval fighting forces will be concentrated in the Pacific next spring and summer for several months of maneuvers. The plans provide for a month of joint maneuvers in Hawaiin waters of almost the entire fleet and also for a cruise of the battle fleet, accompanied by the new light cruisers, to Australia and New Zealand.

MISS ELEANOR MARGARET GREEN of New York was married Tuesday in New York to Prince Viggo Christian Adolphe George of the royal house of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderbourg-Glucksbourg that reigns over the kingdom of Denmark. Prince Valdemar, father of Prince Viggo, who was best man, is an uncle of King Christian and a brother of Dowager Queen Alexandra of Great Britain and of the dowager empress of Russia. This is something new in international marriages, the bride being the first American woman to marry into a royal family occupying a European throne. The nearest parallel is the recent marriage of Miss Lois F. Booth of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada to Prince Erik, older brother of Prince Viggo. Princess Viggo is a granddaughter of Abram S. Hewitt, once mayor of New York, and great-granddaughter of Peter Cooper, the philanthropist. Robert Green, founder of the American family, came to Virginia in Colonial days. It is stated that both Prince Erik and Prince Viggo were required by Denmark to renounce all claims of succession to the throne.

IT WAS a lively week in French politics. After Premier Poincare resigned and Eduard Herriot, leader of the radicals, declined to form a new ministry, Frederic Francois-Marsal became premier, with a "cabinet of a day." The new premier read President Millerand's message to parliament, but his explanations and pledges apparently fell on deaf ears. So Millerand sent in his resignation, the presidential flag over the Elysee was hauled down and France was without a president. Millerand's letter of resignation was short, but he issued a communique to the people in which he bitterly assailed the left bloc—the new parliamentary majority—for forcing him out and declared himself guiltless of violating the constitution. He expects to be elected deputy from Muerthe et Moselle.

IS THERE to be a renewal of the struggle between Turkey and western Europe which appeared to be ended by the expulsion of the Greeks from Smyrna? Even veteran European diplomats are excited over the possibilities suggested by an occurrence on the Island of Rhodes. Two thousand more Italian troops were landed on this important island a few miles off the coast of Asia Minor, where Italy's zone of influence centers. A jubilee followed the landing at which the Italian governor declared:

"Italy will never sacrifice the duties which she undertook at the time of the occupation. Italy will make every effort to take advantage of the natural resources of the country which has been given into its keeping in Asia Minor."

Diplomats say that this declaration if the Italian colonial official had the Mussolini government behind him, is practically a declaration of war

Shipping Board Will Build Two New Liners

New York.—Two new passenger vessels, with a tonnage of 32,000 each, will be built during the next year by the United States shipping board, E. C. Plummer, vice chairman of the board, announced.

The vessels will cost approximately $15,000,000 and will measure 750 feet in length, with beams of 80 feet.

The Leviathan, Mr. Plummer said, has lost approximately $72,000 during this year, due to her entrance in the North Atlantic service. He said that although it costs more to operate American ships than foreign ones, "any loss incurred upon the ocean is more than overcome by the business development made possible through such directly controlled craft."

He promised that "the United States is on the ocean to stay."

An appeal for more sympathetic treatment by American newspapers of events related to American shipping was made by Meyer Lissner, commissioner of the United States shipping board.

He said that although "the record for safety on American flagships is second to that of no merchant marine in the whole world," there is a tendency to stress mishaps to American vessels. He charged that hardly any notice is taken by American papers of accidents on foreign ships "which would be fully exploited" if they happened to vessels operated by the shipping board.

COOLIDGE-DAWES HEAD G.O.P. TICKET

PRESIDENT NOMINATED ON FIRST BALLOT WITH ONLY FORTY-FOUR DISSENTING VOTES.

WISCONSIN BACKS LAFOLLETTE

Dawes Nominated for Vice-Presidency After Lowden Had Been Named And Refused to Run.

Cleveland — Calvin Coolidge was swept into nomination for the presidency by one of the largest majorities ever given by a Republican convention. Before the first and only roll call was half completed the story of his victory had been told, as state by state the votes of solid delegations from east, west, north and south were thrown to his support. No other name was presented formally to the convention, but 28 of the 29 Wisconsin votes and six from North Dakota were cast for Robert M. LaFollette and 10 of the South Dakota delegates followed out their primary instructions and voted for Hiram Johnson.

The totals were as follows:
Coolidge 1,065.
La Follette 34.
Johnson 10.
Necessary to a choice 556.

Burton Makes Nominating Speech

Mr. Coolidge's name was presented to the convention by Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, of the University of Michigan, and upon the conclusion of his nominating speech the delegates went into a 15-minute oldtime demonstration in which state standards were torn from their fastenings and carried on a howling stream of humanity around and around the big convention hall.

Dr. Burton, a former resident of the president's home state, spoke on behalf of Massachusetts, and the nomination was seconded by Vermont, California, Kansas, Oregon, Illinois, New Jersey, North Carolina and New York.

Long before the floodgates of oratory had been closed the delegates were clamoring for a vote, and when they had an opportunity they made quick work of the balloting.

When the roll was called for nominations for president, Alabama, the first state called, yielded to Massachusetts and Governor Cox, of Massachusetts moved that Dr. Marion Leroy Burton be accorded the privilege of placing in nomination "the candidate of Massachusetts." So it turned out Dr. Burton spoke as representing Massachusetts, the president's home, instead of Michigan, his own.

Dawes Wins on Third Ballot

Brigadier General Charles E. Dawes of Ill., the "hell and Maria general," was nominated for the vice-presidency by the convention after it once had nominated Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and he had refused to accept the place. His nomination was made on the third ballot, the first after the recess taken following Lowden's refusal.

The vote was: Dawes 682 1-2; Kenyon, 75; Watson, 45; Hoover, 234 1-2; Norris, 29; Dixon, 6; Wrigley, 1; Sanders, 4; Dupont, 11.

Absent 21; total 1,109; necessary to a choice 555.

Governor Cox of Massachusetts moved that the nomination of General Dawes be made unanimous. The noes from the Wisconsin side of the house were the only voices in dissent.

Lowden and Borah Refuse Office

Mr. Dawes was selected largely by a process of exhaustion. He emerged into the picture after two men, Frank O. Lowden and William E. Borah, had removed themselves by declination of the nomination tendered them, and several other men, originally favored over him, had been eliminated in the bitter in-fighting among the party leaders which attended the contest.

In a brief and spectacular fight in which William M. Butler, President Coolidge's campaign manager, had said to Senator Reed of Pennsylvania "it must be Hoover" and Senator Reed had replied "it can't be done, it must be Dawes, "the Dawes supporters, after the declination of former Governor Lowden, marshalled their forces and put the general across for the nomination.

Previously Mr. Butler's forces had passed the word that the administration men desired the nomination of Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio.

The nomination of Dawes came as the climax to one of the most spectacular scenes in Republican party history in which the convention once having nominated a candidate was obliged to undo its work and find an other.

Girl to Be African Missionary At 19.

Philadelphia—A missionary among the natives of West Africa when 19 years old will be the distinction held by Miss Isabel Fox, of Philadelphia, who aboard the Celtic recently made the journey to Nigeria, where she will serve her novitiate prior to taking the veil as a nun. She will, for the most part, instruct converts to Christianity among the native tribes. She will be one of the youngest missionaries ever assigned to the Dark Continent.

Would Keep Aliens in Fort Wayne.

Detroit—Because of the numbers of aliens who are trying to smuggle themselves into the United States in this region, negotiations have been entered into to obtain the use of Fort Wayne as a detention barracks for those awaiting deportation, Dr. P. L. Prentis, chief immigration officer here, said. About 100 aliens a day are being smuggled across the Canadian border into Michigan and Ohio. There are 125 now in jail, charged with violating the immigration laws.

HEADACHES GONE TIRED NO MORE

Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Hopes Other Women Will Benefit by Her Experience

Skowhegan, Me.—"I was sick most of the time and could not get around to do my work without being all tired out so I would have to lie down. One day when I was reading the paper I saw the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertisement and saw what it did for other women, so I thought I would try it. I have taken three bottles, and cannot begin to tell you what it has already done for me. I do all my work now and keep up the whole day long without lying down. I have no more headaches nor tired feelings. I hope every woman who takes the Vegetable Compound will get as much benefit out of it as I have."—Mrs. PERCY W. RICHARDSON, R. F. D. No. 2, Skowhegan, Maine.

You have just read how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped Mrs. Richardson. She gave it a trial after she saw what it had done for other women. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been thus praised by women. For sale by druggists everywhere.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON VII

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association

Bank deposits are broadly divided into two kinds:

1. SAVINGS DEPOSITS
2. COMMERCIAL DEPOSITS.

J. H. Puelicher

SAVINGS DEPOSITS=deposits more or less permanent, in a savings bank or savings department of a bank, on which interest is paid, and which are withdrawn against the depositor's receipt; they in effect represent conservative investment of funds accumulated through personal thrift.

COMMERCIAL DEPOSITS=deposits in a business account at a bank from which money is withdrawn by check; they represent an essential facility for the conduct of business.

Many persons and all business houses have checking accounts in which to deposit the cash and checks which they receive and against which to draw their own checks to pay bills, wages and purchases. Thrifty people almost universally keep their savings in a savings account.

The College Product

Eighteen hundred young men and women go out this June from the University of Michigan as graduates into the world of finance, business or what not? Is this not an indication that the day is coming when there will be nobody but high paid workers in all lines and professions, and when that time comes those who have no education will be the salt of the earth— poor starved individuals subject to the beck and call of these Masters of Industry who because of their superior training will force the uneducated man into the menial tasks at a small wage. This is a sordid picture but we can't help it.

It is really too bad that the management of the world is going to the educated bunch and the rest of us will be underlings. The best illustration we know of this point is the United States army of the present time. Go where you will you will find the privates are privates because they are unqualified for the officer's job.

The pompous heel-clicking individual who sports shoulder straps and spats is usually a College graduate. He went to the officer's training camp to be polished up and stiffened in the backbone until he is supposed to tell the moon when to rise and sit, and if he should find a vagabond private audacious enough to disobey his smallest command, he would simply swell up and burst.

Could the buck private rise from the ranks to the dignity of Captain or Colonel?

He could not. The day of the self-made man is past—they dont make themselves any more; the College degree makes the man and officer's togs cover him. The idea of a man rising from the ranks would create a horse laugh Hence it is quite proper for the average young person to beg, borrow or steal the wherewithal to pay for their higher courses.

We cast our eyes down the long galleries of time still echoing with the footsteps of the mighty dead, but we shall see no more Lincolns, Grants, Miles' or Sam Houstons. Notwithstanding that College education does not produce management or judgment—and in spite of the fact that battles of great magnitude have been won by men not highly educated but who studied in the rigid school of experience—and battles have been muffed by College officers—yet the College man must and will have the preference. You can draw your own conclusions? Eighteen hundred trained collegians going out each year as we see it should make Michigan a mighty smart state inside of twenty years.

To Boost Use Of State Marl Beds

Increased utilization of the many marl beds which are known to be present on Michigan farms will be sought in a special "marl extraction campaign to be put on during July and August, by the Agricultural Engineering department at the M. A. C.

A demonstration team will travel by motor truck from one location to another, carrying complete equipment to set up and operate marl extraction machinery. Marl will actually be dug at different demonstration points, in order that the assembled farmers may see the actual process.

The chief feature will be the showing of a small, individual marl extraction outfit, which is said to be suitable for the use of the individual farmer or the small neighborhood group. High overhead expense connected with large outfits is said to have been in the past a hindrance to widespread use of the natural marl desposits in the state. The M. A. C. has worked out designs for a small outfit which has proved to be a practical success, and this will be shown during the campaign.

Vast areas of Michigan soil need lime applications, and the use of local marl deposits is expected to result in more general treatment and lower expense. Marl, of course is used for the same purpose that lime is used in treating acid soil.

Many counties in central, southern and southwestern Michigan are included on the tentative schedule for the campaign, plans for which are being completed by L. F. Livingston, M. A. C. specialist in Agricultural Engineering.

OUR INLAND SEAS

Elsewhere in this issue will be noticed to advertisement of the Ashiey & Dustin steamer line out of Detroit for eastern points. If you have never yet taken a trip on our Great Lakes don't neglect the opportunity this summer to leave dull cares and office worries at home, and go to Detroit some warm day when the mercury hangs right around the 100° mark

Don't attempt to catch a train for that city, because if you do you will be the railroad company's victim. Trains don't wait for anybody.

To the dweller from inland there is nothing more profitable and invigorating than a cruise on the great fresh water seas of which most of us know so little and which have made Michigan the big summer resort point of the nation. Take your car and journey to Detroit on our splendid gravel highways at 15 or 50 miles per hour as suits your convenience and you will have to admit there is no comparison between the steam roads and motor travel.

Believe me there is no such experience anywhere as delightful as a trip to Put-in-bay, the Isles of Lake Erie or Cedar Point, the Atlantic Beach of Michigan-

It might interest you to know that some of the most palatial steamers in the world on fresh waters, ply on the lakes; they are close to 400 feet in length—great five deckers—veritable giants of the water, higher than a three-story building. Their stacks if laid horizontally, would almost permit a tall man to walk through their speed is that of a revenue cutter and their stability will defy the fiercest gales.

You mount the gang plank where the genial second officer is usually at hand to closely scrutinize your make-up. This does not mean you are a crook but there are certain restrictions on what you take aboard. If you carried a case of "40-rod" high test white mule the chances are this husky officer would interfere, as no boozing in any form is permitted on board.

Up forward of the cabin you will find the easiest seats where with your feet cocked on the rail you can observe the busy details of casting off the lines. Down below the surging crowd eddies back and forth, seeking to come aboard en masse, while a few mill around, expecting to step off the last minute.

The plank is ordered up, goodbyes are waved, the black smoke begins to belch from the funnel and away down below somewhere the monstrous engines begin their tireless vigil. There is no sound but you know they are turning over because the deck weaves while the dock seems to recede. You are leaving Michigan, a light puff of air from Canada fans your cheek and glancing to the bridge for the first time you espy the Captain. He is quite busy with his levers and right away you will learn he is your Czar. He is the only person aboard who carries the responsibility of safely landing 3,000 passengers at Put-in-bay. Once away from Terra Firma the Captain's word is law. He could shoot you for an infraction of the rules and go scott free

The trip down Detroit river is uneventful outside of passing the up-bound freighters and a yacht or two. The freighters sound their bellowing sirens and awake the echoes ashore. Our own orchestra strikes up a "Jazz" and you waltz away in cadence. "On with the Dance." Bois Blanc light drops behind and the open lake looks delightfully cool.

Off in the south-west quarter a faint smudge indicates a big barge and then there is a ghostly mirage which no scientist has as yet been able to explain. Towns fields and buildings somewhere on shore, miles away, yet brought out in dazzling clearness, inverted on the horizon are before you. If not superstitious you will not attach anything sinister to the mirage which is an old-timer. It was there wher Pontiac roamed the shores of Gitche Gaumee in his bark canoe.

Some one exclaims "Oh Shaw! Its gone!" and you see it no more

When you backed away from the dock in Detroit the mercury registered 94° in the shade without any air stirring, but down here a crisp breeze snaps the pennant at the fore-peak and chops the lake's liquid blue into an endless procession of white-caps. What an inspiration!

When The Infinite created pleasant spots he set Lake Erie at the head of the list.

Arriving at Put-in-bay is certainly an event for it is a historic place. All it costs you is 80 cents round trip from Detroit and we have tickets for sale at this office

Coolidge and the Clowns

When President Coolidge went to the circus he found the very clowns of wet propaganda. The jokes against the Constitution, in its relation to liquor, were very funny, and the unthinking crowd roared. But the President of the United States sat with unmoved features. What a spectacle it would have been for a President of the United States to jeer the Constitution! But why more of a spectacle than that of citizens doing the same thing? Imagine a picture in theBerlin newspaper—"American citizens laughing at thier own Constitution!„ Imagine theinhabitants of Spain studying the photograph of an arena wherein a pantalooned clown was throwing multitudes into hysterics with attacks on the law! The Spaniard would thank God he lived in a land of peaceful bullfights.

There is a reason for President Coolidge not laughing.

He probably knows what intelli. gent citizens generaly should know.

Namely, that on the stage, and on the movie screen, as well as in the pages of the newspaper, propaganda for the "wets" is organized. not for the joke of it, but for the subtle undermining effect of it.

But it is sad to see it invade that children's paradise, the Circus.

A New Fifty Cent Piece

A new coin, a fifty cent piece is now ready for distribution. It was struck by the United States Mint in Philadelphia in commemoration of the Huguenot-Walloon Tercentenary. The obverse bears the profiles of Admiral Coligny and William the Silent, two of the Huguenot cause; the reverse pictures the ship Niew Nederland, in which the Walloon colonists came to America.

The first of the coins was presented to President Coolidge in the presence of a distinguished group including Ambassador Jusserand, of France, Ambassador de Graeff, of Holland, and Ambassador de Cartier, of Belgium. In acknowledging the gift, President Coolidge declared that the observance of historical anniversaries preserved the spirit of the spiritual pioneers who gave its first character to the spirit of America. He paid special tribute to the settlers from Belgium, France, and the Netherlands because of their willingness to suffer for freedom of consience.

Farm Day At M. A. C. Set For August 1

Summer Farmers Day at the M. A. C., an event which has come to be accepted as an annual event in Michigan rural life, will be held on Friday, August 1, this year, according to announcement made here this week.

New features of entertainment and instruction will be included in the program for the day, an effort being made to provide a full day of activity for the thousands of farmers and their families who gather each year for the outdoor convention.

Speeches by nationally prominent agriculturists, a livestock parade or "style review" made up of prize winners at state and national shows special educational exhibits, and inspection of the extensive college experimental plots will feature the events of the day from the business side.

Band concerts, a big basket picnic lunch at noon, and informal gatherings of visitors from various sections will mark the entertainment side of the program.

Farmers Day has grown from a special Wheat Day, held on the M. A. C. campus in 1918 to consider war conditions. Since that time the day has been made an all college affair, with all departments of the agricultural division contributing to the program. More than 5,000 have attended for the past two years and it is expected that the attendance figures will be broken on August 1, at the seventh annual meeting.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON VIII

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

Why open a savings account in a savings bank?

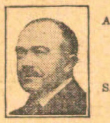
SAVINGS=money set aside by keeping expenditures below income which is essential to individual as well as to business success.

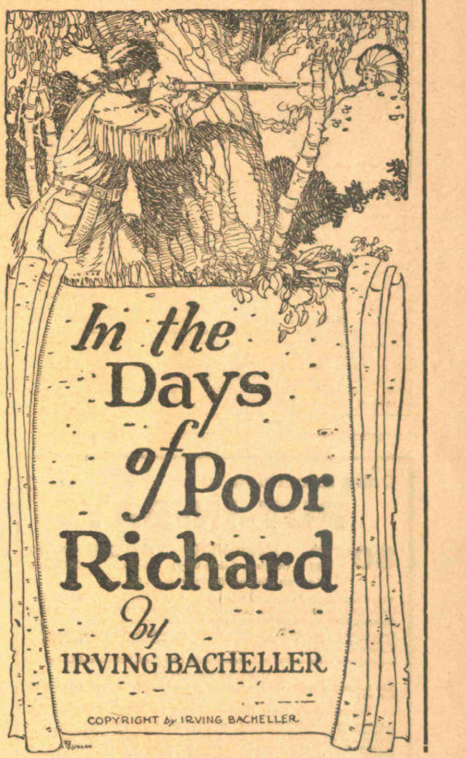


J. H. Puelicher

ACCOUNT=accurate record, as applied to savings in a bank, of deposits and withdrawals, showing also earnings from interest; savings banks will open an account with one dollar—the amount most depositors have started with.

SAVINGS BANK=a safe place to deposit savings where they will earn interest; the bank gives the depositor a pass-book, that is, an account book showing deposits, interest credited, withdrawals and balance. Many banks not called savings banks now conduct savings departments.

A savings account in a bank indicates and encourages thrift which is an essential aid to success. Unlike money hoarded, money in the bank is safe from loss by fire or thieves, earns interest and is put to use by the banks in developing the community.



THIS story is the capstone of a brilliant and enduring literary career. Mr. Bacheller was engaged upon the actual writing for three years, but it is the fruit of a life's reading and thinking, the flower of mature imagination.

Here in memorable narrative are the fine flavor of romance, the quick thrill of bold deeds, the universal appeal of courage and self-sacrifice. Again as in "A Man for the Ages," the author has found inspiration in the life and public services of a great American. Benjamin Franklin, the most human, wise, engaging and lovable character in our early history dominates the novel.

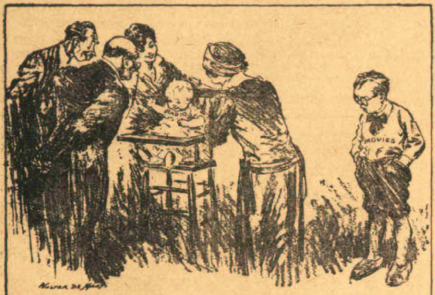
THE INFANT PRODIGY



The overnight development of the radio industry, even in a swiftly moving world, is one of the commercial romances of this century. Within the span of a little more than four years the ranks of the manufacturers, composed chiefly of those who had aided the army and navy during the war in the creation of the wireless telephone, have grown from a group of about fifty pioneers into an army of more than 3,000. Sales of radio material in 1920 amounted to a bare $1,000,000. It is estimated that the American public during the past year spent at least $150,000,000 in acquiring sets and parts of the instruments that tapped the ether. The strides that the industry is making may be indicated by the statement that expenditures for research by one of the large manufacturing groups during the next year will exceed the amount of the total sales just four years ago.

The industry is so new that the Government has been unable to take a census to determine its rank or proportions. Congress has not had time to frame legislation regulating it. Its past events have been kaleidoscopic, and the industry now is described by some as in a state of flux, although there are growing indications that it will settle down. For, with the changing phases, there is a distinct movement in the direction of standardization.—American Bankers Association Journal.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Driving It Home To The Driver

"Hey, there, on which end's the dog?"shouted one of a group of young fellows standing in front of the drug store, as a pug faced individual, leading by a chain a ferocious looking bull dog, stepped out of a store on the opposite side of the street. The speaker, Richard Deering, might well be pardoned for his levity, for it was difficult to tell which of the two, man or beast looked the more savage. Receiving no response to his query, Richard picked up a small stone and threw it in the direction of the dog, taking care, however, to aim far short of his mark. As the missile fell with a clatter on the pavement, James Gridley, the one for whom these various attentions were meant, looked up, scowled, hesitated, then crossed over and joined the festive group.

"Hello, James," said Richard, "you look like the end of a perfect, or rather, an imperfect day."

"Feel like one, too, " growled James. Instantly his friend became sympathetic. "Hard lines, old chap," he murmured. Tell us about it."

Thus urged, James began his tale of woe. "You see, it was this way. As you all know, after Dad died, I had to hoe my own row. and work my way through college. Its been pretty hard at times, and I therefore considered myself more than fortunate when I secured a job as chauffeur to the wealthy Mr. Bancroft; not much to do, and enough money in it to have enabled me to finish my course comfortably Well, the other day as I was driving the car home from the garage where I had taken it for repairs, Tom Gleason, who was standing in front of his house haled me and invited me in to sample his home brew. I was warm and thirsty and glad to accept his invitation. As ill luck would have it, the boss happened to pass that way, recognized his auto, and immediately organized himself into a reception committee of one to greet me upon my return With hat held over his heart, he bowed low, in most dramatic fashion, when he saw me coming. How now, sirrah, he inquired, what means this—my chariot at a stranger's door?"

"Why, sir, I began, "I—I"He stiffened, and coldly interrupted me. "Explanation is quite unnecessary, James.Your preVolstead breath tells the tale. I shall drive the car home myself. I have no confidence in a drinking chauffeur."

"Then pandemonium broke loose. Stung to the quick, I blazed forth' What's sauce for the goose, sir, is sauce for the gander. Your cellar is stored with the choicest of liquor You serve to your friends. But when I take only a small glass of beer, I am called to account. Apparently there is one law for the rich, another for the poor.

"Enough of your insolence, he fairly barked. I'm through. Call for your check tonight! With that he bounded into the car and in a flash was gone leaving me staring stupidly into space, hurt and angry. All that fuss about one miserable little glass of beer—beer that never did anyone any harm."

For a moment there was a dead silence. Then Robert Brunton, another of the boys, burst out laughing. "When you spoke of one miserable little glass of beer, Jimmie, you said something," he remarked but when you talk about harmless beer it is very evident that although you drive an automobile, you have advanced very little beyond the horse and buggy stage. Step on the gas, boy, step on her, and get up enough speed to overtake the times. How much of all you believe is so? Your great grandfather, your grand father, and father all held that beer was a health giving drink, and you have gone with the crowd. You wouldn't have changed your ideas on the subject for the whole world. Oh, 'tis positively to be compelled to give up one's most cherished illusions, but—it sometimes happens. I entertained views similar to yours until, one day, a friend took the trouble to give me a few scientific facts, and I just had to listen. Alcohol in any form is dangerous."

"Dangerous? Yes, in whisky, I'll admit, or other stronger drinks, but in beer—never. You are raving,"declared Gridley.

"He who laughs last laughs best" came the prompt retort. "I am not asking you to take my word. There is plenty of authority for my statement, but, naturally, not being a temperance lecturer, I do not carry a stock of information with me, and offhand can only refer you to Dr. A. Holitscher, who at the Fifteenth International Congress Against Alcoholism, held in Washington, D. C. a few years ago, discussed the same subject and said that while one might suppose that alcohol taken in the form of beer is less harmful than when taken in the form of distilled liquors, yet alcohol remains alcohol no matter how it is introduced into the system. As soon as it is absorbed into the blood, it is the quantity of alcohol that has been taken and not its form that matters"

"Oh, pshaw!I've seen any number of men who drank beer without experiencing any bad effects whatsoever," returned Gridley, a bit contemptuously.

"No visible bad effects,"corrected Richard. who up to this time had remained silent, though interested listener. Some men seem to develop a tolerance for liquor, but in the majority of cases there is a constant undermining of the system, a gradual poisoning that some day is manifested, perhaps, in lessened resistance to disease, slower recovery from accidents, or in numerous other ways, the source of which is unsuspected. Probably the worst feature of beer is that it creates a thirst for the stronger drinks. Alcohol is a habit forming drug, and every drunkard was once a moderate drinker. We hear much talk about the small quantity of alcohol in beer, but while the great dilution of alcohol in this drink may make it a little easier on the stomach, yet he who uses it takes just as much alcohol because he drinks more.

Soaking the Middle Class

Either Secretary Mellon is all wrong in his theory of tax reduction or the Michigan State Grange is all wrong in trying to force the enactment of a state income tax.

Mr. Mellon holds that by reducing the maximum surtax on incomes from 50 per cent to 25 per cent you coax the big investors out of tax exempt securities and into taxable investments by giving them a chance for as good a return on their money. He holds that investors who are now getting 4½ percent on tax exempt securities will be tempted to come back into productive industry and business and take 6 per cent return or better, if the government only removes one quarter of that return from them, instead of half. The whole Mellon plan is based on the theory that by reducing taxes you increase business enough to actnally increase the government revenue.

The purpose of the Grange is to increase income taxes by adding a state income tax; relieve real estate of all state taxation, or most of it, and so relieve the farmer of some of his present burdens. With the defeat of the Mellon plan, and the establishment of maximum surtax rates at 40 percent in the new law instead of 25 percent, it is obvius that the addition of a state income tax will drive large investors into tax exempt securities about as fast as ever. Since the Grange's income tax exempts all incomes under $4,000 it is also obvious that people of moderate wealth, most of which they have earned or are saving, are to pay for the state government. In other words, the poor and the rich are to be exempted from taxation and the middle class is to pay the freight.

The painting, "Blue Boy," by Gainsborough, is now in the possession of Mr. H. E. Huntington, of San Marino, California. The picture is said to have originated as a result of a dispute with Sir Joshua Reynolds as to the value of making blue the predominate color in a portrait.

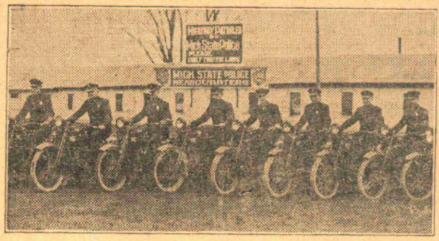
Will Make Michigan Highways Safe



Commissioner Harry H. Jackson of the Michigan Department of Public Safety has recently increased the number of State Police posts and has sent out upon the roads the new Highway Patrol squads, mounted on fast solo motorcycles. The members of these patrol squads are mostly men who have been trained during the winter at the State Police school in East Lansing. They have been thoroughly schooled in the law and also in first aid in case of automobile and other accidents. Above all, they have been drilled in courtesy.

While the first duty of the patrols will be to discourage speeders and thus make the roads safe, they will also attend to general police duty. It is planned to cover the fruit belt of the state and to give the utmost protection to farmers against orchard robbers.

While the State Police will operate from certain posts, they will not patrol the same stretches of highway each day but will be shifted from place to place so as to instill a more general respect to the motor vehicle laws and other laws.

Commissioner Jackson will give attention to all requests for patrol service which may be sent him at the Department of Public Safety, Lansing.

The current on the trial line was turned on for the first time on Christmas eve. At that time, however, the installation and wiring on the different farms provided only for electric lights. No farm equipment for electrical operation was installed until March ...

Widow Gets Husband by an Odd Proposal

Chicago.—Mrs. Leo Garfinkle got a husband the other day by a sly hint to William Printer, proprietor of a cafe.

"Why don't you get married again?" she asked Printer. "I have a good woman for you. I will arrange a meeting."

"No, thanks," said Printer. "She might not be my style. Now if she were you—yes, that would be different."

Concrete Pavements are Safe for Night Driving, too

No wonder motorists everywhere are enthusiastic boosters for Concrete Streets and Roads.

In addition to saving gasoline, prolonging the life of the car, and assuring greater comfort and ease of travel, Concrete Highways are safe highways.

They are safe by day, and safe by night—skid-proof, rigid and unyielding. They are also a pleasing light gray in color—even on a starless, moonless night you can hold your path surely and steadily when you motor on Concrete.

Remember, standard Concrete Pavement is made of a definitely proportioned mixture of sand and pebbles, or broken stone, held together by the everlasting grip of that tenacious binder, portland cement.

You want your pavements to be an investment—not an expense. You want to receive dividends in service and satisfaction. That means Portland Cement Concrete Pavement.

How Queen of Sheba Had Solomon Guessing

One "English to Foreigner" teacher is proud of her class of adult mothers, and when she can't get people to come down to visit it, to hear her ladies read and talk, she brings samples of their written work home to show off. And this is a composition she proudly handed to the Woman, the work of a truly ambitious, elderly person struggling to master the language in the country of her adoption.

"King Solomon and the Flowers."

"The queen of Sheba loved King Solomon very much. She knew that be is very wise so she wanted to play a trick on him by sending to him a wreath of flowers exactly the same, but one was neturel and the other one was imitation so it would be very hard for a uman beeing to see any differens. But mean while a bee flue in through an oppen window and after bussing around the room she sat down on the flowers from which she could get honey and to the immitation flowers the bee did not pay any attention. Then the king found out which is which."—New York Sun.

Song Birds Were Old German Dish

Song birds in apples, cooked in boiling lard, was a German delicacy of the Fourteenth century and was served by royalty at all notable dinners of state. A cook book compiled in 1452 has been discovered by writers on domestic science, who quote many recipes of the olden times when kings and nobles gorged themselves on every occasion, and appeared to be particularly fond of blackbirds baked in pies.

At nearly all great feasts a most popular dish was an enormous fish pie, supposedly of Spanish origin. This contained two pounds of butter, half a pound of bacon or pork, eight pounds of haddock, twenty to thirty eggs, one pound of veal, a pound of oysters, onions, spices and various other seasonings.

Beef tongue and cabbage is mentioned prominently in the old cook book, which is supposed to have been conceived by a nun in the Rosenthal convent in the Bavarian Palatinate. Even the nobility, it appears, was fond of cabbage in those days and put up great barrels of it each summer.

Life gives you just 13 years of real health—and happiness

Average Health Span extends only from age 18 to age 31, according to United States Life Tables, 1920

Assuming that you are the average person, you will enjoy health—physical freedom and full vigor—only from age 18 to 31. This astounding fact is shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920.

Your earning power will decrease rapidly after 40. That period commonly called "the prime of life" will actually be an age of decay.

This sounds sensational. It is sensational. But it is true—and it is something to which the wise man or woman will give serious thought.

Of course, it is not natural, or right. It is the direct result of an artificial mode of life—of careless eating, sleeplessness, and stimulated nerves. Nature provides a danger signal—fatigue—to warn when the body needs rest. The person who regularly deadens the fatigue signal by the use of a drug is overriding the warning of nature.

That is what coffee does. The average cup of coffee contains 1½ to 3 grains of the drug caffein—classified as a poison. This is a dose of caffein of the size often administered by physicians in cases of heart failure. It is a powerful stimulant. It appears to give new strength by deadening the fatigue signal. Actually, this new strength is robbed from the body's own reserve.

Coffee contains no nourishment. Its only virtues, as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A good, hot, drugless drink is a benefit with every meal.

Millions enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink made of whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening—nothing more. A drink with the rich, mellow, full-bodied flavor of this wholesome grain. Every member of the family can drink it every meal of the day, enjoy its deliciousness, crave it, knowing there isn't a sleepless hour, a headache, or a taut nerve in it.

For the sake of your years following age 31, we want you to try Postum for thirty days. You can't expect to overcome the effects of a habit of years in two or three days, or even a week. To make this a sporting proposition, we will give you a week's supply of Postum free. Enough for a cup with every meal for a week. But we want you to carry on for the full thirty days.

Carrie Blanchard, who has personally served Postum to over 500,000 people, will send you her own directions for preparing it. Indicate whether you want Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare, or Postum Cereal, the kind you boil. Either form costs less than most other hot drinks. CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

Solomon took the lightning hurlers out of the packs and unwrapped them and tried the springs above the hammers. Earlier in the day he had looked to the priming. Solomon gave one to Jack and put the other two in his pockets. Each examined his pistols and adjusted them in his belt. They started for the low-lying ridge above the little valley of Rock creek. It was now quite dark and looking down through the thickets of hemlock they could see the firelight of the Indians and hear the wash of the creek water. Suddenly a wild whooping among the red men, savage as the howl of wolves on the trail of a wounded bison, ran beyond them, far out into the forest, and sent its echoes traveling from hilltop to mountain side. Then came a sound which no man may hear without getting, as Solomon was wont to say, "a scar on his soul which he will carry beyond the last cape." It was the death cry of a captive. Solomon had heard it before. He knew what it meant. The fire was taking hold and the smoke had begun to smother him. Those cries were like the stabbing of a knife and the recollection of them like blood stains.

They hurried down the slant, brushing through the thicket, the sound of their approach being covered by the appalling cries of the victim and the demon-like tumult of the drunken braves. The two scouts were racked with soul pain as they went on so that they could scarcely hold their peace and keep their feet from running. A new sense of the capacity for evil in the heart of man entered the mind of Jack. They had come close to the frightful scene, when suddenly a deep silence fell upon it. Thank God, the victim had gone beyond the reach of pain. Something had happened in his passing—perhaps the savages had thought it a sign from heaven. For a moment their clamor had ceased. The two scouts could plainly see the poor man behind a red veil of flame. Suddenly the white leader of the raiders approached the pyre, limping on his wooden stump, with a stick in his hand, and prodded the face of the victim. It was his last act. Solomon was taking aim. His rifle spoke. Red Snout tumbled forward into the fire. Then what a scurry among the Indians! They vanished and so suddenly that Jack wondered where they had gone. Solomon stood reloading the rifle barrel he had just emptied. Then he said:

"Come on an' do as I do."

Solomon ran until they had come near. Then he jumped from tree to tree, stopping at each long enough to survey the ground beyond it. This was what he called "swapping cover." From behind a tree near the fire he shouted in the Indian tongue:

"Red men, you have made the Great Spirit angry. He has sent the son of the thunder to slay you with his lightning."

No truer words had ever left the lips of man. His hand rose and swung back of his shoulder and shot forward. The round missile sailed through the firelight and beyond it and sank into black shadows in the great cavern at Rock creek—a famous camping place in the old time. Then a flash of white light and a roar that shook the hills! A blast of gravel and dust and debris shot upward and pelted down upon the earth. Bits of rock and wood and an Indian's arm and foot fell in the firelight. A number of dusky figures scurried out of the mouth of the cavern and ran for their lives shouting prayers to Manitou as they disappeared in the darkness. Solomon pulled the embers from around the feet of the victim.

"Now, by the good God A'mighty, 'pears to me we got the skeer shifted so the red man'll be the rabbit fer a while an' I wouldn't wonder," said Solomon, as he stood looking down at the scene. "He ain't a-goin' to like the look o' a pale face—not overly much. Them Injuns that got erway 'll never stop runnin' till they've reached the middle o' next week."

He seized the foot of Red Snout and pulled his head out of the fire.

"You ol' hellion!" Solomon exclaimed. "You dog o' the devil! Tumbled into hell whar ye b'long at last, didn't ye? Jack, you take that luther bucket an' bring some water out o' the creek an' put out this fire. The ring on this 'ere ol' wooden leg is wuth a hundred pounds."

Solomon took the hatchet from his belt and hacked off the end of Red Snout's wooden leg and put it in his coat pocket, saying:

"From now on a white man can walk in the bush without gittin' his bones picked. Injuns is goin' to be skeered o' us—a few an' I wouldn't be surprised."

When Jack came back with the water, Solomon poured it on the embers and looked at the swollen form which still seemed to be straining at the green withes of moose wood.

"Nothin' kin be done fer him," said the old scout. "He's gone erway. I tell ye, Jack, it g'in my soul a sweat to hear him dyin'."

A moment of silence full of the sorrow of the two men followed. Solomon broke it by saying:

"That 'ere black pill o' mine went right down into the stummick o' the hill an' give it quite a puke—you hear to me."

They went to the cavern's mouth and looked in.

"They's an awful mess in thar. I don't keer to see it," said Solomon.

Near them they discovered a warrior who had crawled out of that death chamber in the rocks. He had been stunned and wounded about the shoulders. They helped him to his feet and led him away. He was trembling with fear. Solomon found a pine torch, still burning, near where the fire had been. By its light they dressed his wounds—the old scout having with him always a small surgeon's outfit.

"Whar is t' other captive?" he asked in the Indian tongue.

"About a mile down the trail. It's a woman and a boy," said the warrior.

"Take us whar they be," Solomon commanded.

The three started slowly down the trail, the warrior leading them.

CHAPTER XVIII

The Voice of a Woman Sobbing.

Over the ridge and more than a mile away was a wet, wild meadow. They found the cow and horses feeding on its edge near the trail. The moon, clouded since dark, had come out in the clear mid-heavens and thrown its light into the high windows of the forest above the ancient thoroughfare of the Indian. The red guide of the two scouts gave a call which was quickly answered. A few rods farther on, they saw a pair of old Indians sitting in blankets near a thicket of black timber. They could hear the voice of a woman sobbing near where they stood.

"Womern, don't be skeered o' us—we're friends—we're goin' to take ye hum," said Solomon.

The woman came out of the thicket with a little lad of four asleep in her arms.

"Where do ye live?" Solomon asked.

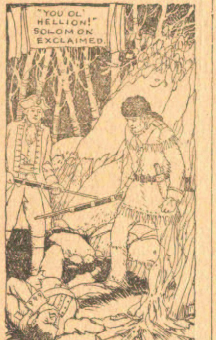
"Far south on the shore o' the Mohawk," she answered in a voice trembling with emotion.

"What's yer name?"

"I'm Bill Scott's wife," she answered.

"Cat's blood and gunpowder!" Solomon exclaimed. "I'm Sol Binkus."

She knelt before the old scout and kissed his knees and could not speak for the fulness of her heart. Solomon bent over and took the sleeping lad from her arms and held him against his breast.



"YOU OL' HELLION!" SOLOMON EXCLAIMED.

"Don't feel bad. We're a-goin' to take keer o' you," said Solomon. "Ayes, sir, we be! They ain't nobody goin' to harm ye—nobody at all."

There was a note of tenderness in the voice of the man as he felt the chin of the little lad with his big thumb and finger.

"Do ye know what they done with Bill?" the woman asked soon in a pleading voice.

The scout swallowed as his brain began to work on the problem in hand.

"Bill broke loose an' got erway. He's gone," Solomon answered in a sad voice.

"Did they torture him?"

"What they done I couldn't jes' tell ye. But they kin't do no more to him. He's gone."

She seemed to sense his meaning and lay crouched upon the ground with her sorrow until Solomon lifted her to her feet and said:

"Look here, little womern, this don't do no good. I'm goin' to spread my blanket under the pines an' I want ye to lay down with yer boy an' git some sleep. We got a long trip tomorrer.

"'Tain't so bad as it might be—ye're kind o' lucky a'ter all is said an' done," he remarked as he covered the woman and the child.

The wounded warrior and the old men were not to be found. They had sneaked away into the bush. Jack and Solomon looked about and the latter called but got no answer.

"They're skeered cl'ar down to the toe nails," said Solomon. "They couldn't stan' it here. A lightnin' thrower is a few too many. They'd ruther be nigh a rattlesnake."

The scouts had no sleep that night. They sat down by the trail side leaning against a log and lighted their pipes.

"You 'member Bill Scott?" Solomon whispered.

"Yes. We spent a night in his house."

"He were a mean cuss. Sold rum to the Injuns. I allus tol' him it were wrong but—my God A'mighty!—I never 'spected that the fire in the water were a goin' to burn him up sometime. No, sir—I never dreamed he were a goin' to be punished so—never."

They lay back against the log with their one blanket spread and spent the night in a kind of half sleep.

Every little sound was "like a kick in the ribs," as Solomon put it, and drove them "into the look and listen business." The woman was often crying out or the cow and horses getting up to feed.

"My son, go to sleep," said Solomon. "I tell ye there ain't no danger now—not a bit. I don't know much but I know Injuns—plenty."

In spite of his knowledge even Solomon himself could not sleep. A little before daylight they arose and began to stir about.

"I was badly burnt by that fire," Jack whispered.

"Inside!" Solomon answered. "So was I. My soul were a-sweatin' all night."

The morning was chilly. They gathered birch bark and dry pine and soon had a fire going. Solomon stole over to the thicket where the woman and child were lying and returned in a moment.

"They're sound asleep," he said in a low tone. "We'll let 'em alone."

He began to make tea and got out the last of their bread and dried meat and bacon. He was frying the latter when he said:

"That 'ere is a mighty likely womern."

He turned the bacon with his fork and added:

"Turrible purty when she were young. Allus hated the rum business."

Jack went out on the wild meadow and brought in the cow and milked her, filling a basin and a quart bottle.

Solomon went to the thicket and called:

"Mis' Scott!"

The woman answered.

"Here's a 'ow'l an' a lettle jug o' soap, Mis' Scott. Ye kin take the boy to the crick an' git washed an' then come to the fire an' eat yer breakfust."

The boy was a handsome, blond lad with blue eyes and a serious manner. His confidence in the protection of his mother was sublime.

"What's yer name?" Solomon asked looking up at the lad whom he had lifted high in the air.

"Whig Scott," the boy answered timidly with tears in his eyes.

"What! Be ye skeered o' me?"

These words came from the little lad as he began to cry: "No, sir. I ain't skeered. I'm a brave man."

"Courage is the first virtue in which the young are schooled on the frontier," Jack wrote in a letter to his friends at home in which he told of the history of that day. "The words and manner of the boy reminded me of my own childhood.

"Solomon held Whig in his lap and fed him and soon won his confidence. The backs of the horses and the cow were so badly galled they could not be ridden, but we were able to lash the packs over a blanket on one of the horses. We drove the beasts ahead of us. The Indians had timbered the swales here and there so that we were able to pass them with little trouble. Over the worst places I had the boy on my back while Solomon carried 'Mis' Scott' in his arms as if she were a baby. He was very gentle with her. To him, as you know, a woman has been a sacred creature since his wife died. He seemed to regard the boy as a wonderful kind of plaything. At the camping places he spent every moment of his leisure tossing him in the air or rolling on the ground with him.

"One day when the woman sat by the fire crying, the little lad touched her brow with his hand and said:

"'Don't be skeered, mother. I'm brave. I'll take care o' you.'

"Solomon came to where I was breaking some dry sticks for the fire and said laughingly, as he wiped a tear from his cheek with the back of his great right hand:

"'Did ye ever see sech a gol' durn cunnin' leetle cricket in yer born days—ever?'

"Always thereafter he referred to the boy as the Little Cricket."

Jack wrote in another of his letters that, as they fared along, down toward the sown lands of the upper Mohawk, Solomon began to develop talents of which none of his friends had entertained the least suspicion.

"He has had a hard life full of fight and peril like most of us who were born in this New World," the young man wrote. "He reminds me of some of the Old Testament heroes and is not this land we have traversed like the plains of Mamre? What a gentle creature he might have been if he had had a chance! How long, I wonder, must we be slayers of men? As long, I take it, as there are savages against whom we must defend ourselves."

The next morning they met a company of one of the regiments of General Herkimer who had gone in pursuit of Red Snout and his followers. Learning what had happend to that evil band and its leader the soldiers faced about and escorted Solomon and his party to Oriskany.

Mystery in Letter "O" Found in Windsor Castle

High up on the wall near the Norman gate, at Windsor castle, is a stone upon which is engraved the letter "O." The letter is about five inches in diameter, and deeply cut in the hard stone. How did it come there and for what does it stand?

Tradition says that it records the height of Oliver Cromwell's giant porter, who was stationed at the gatehouse to keep away intruders. Seeing that the letter is eleven feet from the ground, this was a "tall" statement and even when it is explained that the roadway has been lowered, it leaves one with the impression that this "Roundhead" must have been a giant indeed.

The probable explanation is that this huge fellow, having little else to do but parade up and down, passed his spare time in carving the initial letter of his master's name.

This gigantic porter was a great character, and frequently preached in the parish church of Windsor, much to the annoyance of the incumbent who, in those days, had to keep a still tongue in his head. The strange thing is that this servant of Cromwell kept his position at the Restoration and, curiously enough for a man of his religious scruples, treated as one of his most treasured possessions a large Bible given to him by "Sweet Nell of Old

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Some individuals in this section believe that Bob LaFollette is an up to date example of what happens to a fellow who has enough courage to put principal above party. La Follette is something like the prophets of old who were never appeciated until they were dead. Bob could probably have been president years ago, if he had fallen in line with his party machine rather than fighting for the common people.

Everyone is invited to attend church services Sunday as Rev. Dellinger expects to deliver a discourse on Sodom. It is expected that election of Sunday school officers will take place. The Rev. preached an interesting sermon Sunday on the devil and devils. The pastor asserted that the chief purpose of the Devil in the present age is to spite God and that the the devils best method is to influence human beings to commit sins in disobedience to the will of God; that the devil was man's worst enemy while God was man's best friend; that Jerome like most other towns had plenty of devils in human form and that they were also quite numerous in this section. The minisister also discussed the methods which were employed by the devil in tempting Christ.

Dr. Morgan of Johannesburg, Mich., is spending a few days in this village and shaking hands with former acquaintances. He stopped off en route at Grand Ragids where his son resides. The doctor is employed as surgeon by a hardwood lumber company.

Superintendent Young has established a series of free moving picture shows in the near-by towns which will be put on by the business men. Next Saturday evening, June 21, he will appear at Allen with the film "The Inner Toice" featuring E. K. Lincoln.

At a meeting of Abigail Rebekah Lodge No, 42, the following officers were elected: N. G.. Addie VanAken; v. g., Margaret Painter; rec. sec., Ida Relyea; treas., Sarah winchell; d. d. p., Muriel Owen; rep., Allie Holkins; alternate, Ida Relyea. Installation will be in July.

The German Government discourages radio to a great extent. Listeners-in must have a license for which they pay six dollars a year. Sets can serve but one wave length and it is forbidden to tune in on foreign broadcasting stations. No one may build his own and no one under twenty one may have a set.

The supply of white cedar in Japan is controlled by the Imperial family and is considered practically sacred. All the wood 15 inches and up in diameter is reserved for the building of temples A Japanese paid $1,100 in gold in America for a choice beam of white cedar 18 inches square, 20 feet long, with perfect diagonal grain.

The first Outdoor Movies opened Wednesday evening under ideal conditions and a very good crowd estimated at 700 people present of all ages and descriptions. The films are high grade and come out in fine shape on the screen. More seats will be provided if it takes the entire lumber yard. With the good roads surrounding the town there is no reason why our outdoor movies should not be a wonderful success.

Birthday Club Meets

Mrs. Orson Crapser entertained the Birthday Club Tuesday in honor of Mrs. Grant Warner of Sturgis, a former member of the club. Those present were Mrs. Susie Haight, Maud Lynch, Mollie Bleech, Vernice Fouty, Lizzie Holcomb, Minnie Shepard, Minnie Wilcox, Jennie Roberts, Mae Crane, Ella Knowles and daughter, Elna, Rena Knowles and little sons. A fine pot-luck dinner was an important feature of the occasion and a most enjoyable time was the verdict of all present.

Bross School Reunion

The sixth annual reunion of the ex-teachers and ex-pupils of the Bross district will be held at the school house on Saturday, June 28, with dinner at noon and program. These get-togethers are one of the most pleasant features of our community because they invaribly bring home the old-timers whom we otherwise might not see for years. Keeping up old acquaintance like the days of "Auld Lang Syne" should not be forgotten.

Reunion of The Shepards

The Shepard family reunion was held this year at the spacious home of Mrs. Celia Duguid in this village Thursday, June 12, with 55 present and a pot luck dinner at noon. The afternoon was passed with visiting and outdoor sports.

War Relics to be Disposed of Advice from Congressman Arthur B. Williams is to the effect that an act has been passed authorizing the distribution to the various states of a large amount of enemy war devices and trophies captured during the World War by our army. It provides that the Secretary of War shall allot to each state a pro rata share of the trophies, based on a percentage of the nunber of men in the World War armed forces from each state. The further distribution to the communities of the states is to be made by the governors therecf.

The captured enemy material shipped to the United States from France after the war consists of approximately 2,582,332 articles Of this total, about 2,196 are guns, howitzers, or mortars, 4,000 are vehicles, and the remainder are rifles, machine guns, badges, buckles, cans, helmits, knapsacks, and other small articles.

The governor is to be informed of the states apportionment and requested to indicate what portion thereof would be acceptable. Failure of a state to accept any or all of its allotment within a reasonable time would leave the unaccepted property available for sale or destruction by the Secretary of War.

Congressman Williams suggests that Legion Posts, communities and others entitled to any portion of this allotment should communicate with the governor and make their requests known.

A Moonshine Raid

Two farms near Pulaski and Concord were raided by Jackson county officers assisted by Deputy Sheriff Clyde Wilbur of Jonesville on Friday last and a quantity of liquor aad mash was found and duly confiscated.

Henry Swank formerly of the vicinity of Hoxie and Tony Kulinich, (notice the foreign accent,) were arrested on Swank's farm where they found two complete stills in the barn and other strong evidence of a booze factory. Mrs Mary Skalski was arrested at her farm after the officers found repairs for a still, a quantity of mash and some of the moonshine also. Her husband was also arrested and both have been let out of jail on bail, thus saith the Concord News.

This is awful—we used to know Henry when he was a barefoot boy with socks on. We supposed the red-haired little geezer would grow up to be a nice Sunday school boy, instead of a bad man of the Bacchus type. When we heard how Henry had repudiated the erswhile noble traditions of his family coat-of-arms we wept which is the first time since we attended the funeral of a subscriber who owed us four years' back subscription.

USE CONCRETE FOR PERMANENCE

Concrete Pavements Remain True and Even

Right here in your own state you as a motorist have abundant opportunity to know the advantages of concrete pavements.

Wet or dry, Concrete Pavements are skid-proof. They are free of bumps and holes. Built according to present-day high standards, they withstand the pounding grind of the heaviest traffic.

You will find that even under the heat of desert sun, their surface remains true.

And should night overtake you, you can follow the light gray surface of Concrete easily and with every sense of security.

Think, too, of the all around economy of Concrete Roads and Streets—the saving in gasoline, the longer life of your car—repairs built out, maintenance built in.

Remember that standard Concrete Pavement is made of a definitely proportioned mixture of sand and pebbles, or broken stone, held together by the everlasting grip of that tenacious binder, portland cement.

* * *

Watch for advertisements telling about the many other uses of concrete. And remember that the Portland Cement Association has a free personal service to offer you. Whether you use concrete or have it used for you, this service will give you more for your money.

Our booklet R-4 tells many interesting things about Concrete Streets. Write this office for your copy.

Plans to Trap Weevil

Hudson Maxim, inventor, recalls that the Indians used to scent their traps with the odor of the female beaver. This attracted the males and large numbers of them were trapped. The sense of smell which is extremely keen in insects guides them to the discovery of their mates, he says. For instance the male silkworm can detect the female by smell at a distance of two miles. He suggests that a scent, prepared from the bodies of female boll weevil moths or perhaps made synthetically, might be used to lure males of the species to traps or poisons.

English Woman at Forge

The village blacksmith as Longfellow saw him would be interested could he see his vocation usurped by the "weaker sex." The first woman in England to work at the anvil is Miss Florence Swann, who manages her father's wheelwright and engineer's business in the town of New Cross. What adds interest to Miss Swann's work is that she was a milliner before the war.

English Critic's Error

"Gammer Gurton's Needle," a comedy by Bishop Still, printed in 1575, was thought for some time to be the first English comedy, owing to an English critic's error as to the date of its publication.

There is not a moment without some duty.

Will blind confidence lead you to physical disaster at age 31?

This is the experience of the average American, United States Life Tables, 1920, indicate

For the average person, health—physical freedom and full vigor—extends only from age 18 to 31. Then the slump. After 40, earnings fall off rapidly. What do these startling facts (taken from the United States Life Tables, 1920) mean for you?

It is time to check up. It is time to take stock of the present, and face the future with open eyes. Blind faith in the power of the human body to absorb punishment has failed miserably. Unwise eating, stimulated nerves, sleeplessness; disregard of the simplest laws of health; the lashing of the overwrought body to new exertions by the use of drugs—physical decay beginning at age 31! This is the tragic chronicle.

Nature provides a danger signal—fatigue—to warn when the body needs rest. Certain drugs have the power to deaden the fatigue signal. One of the most common of these drugs is caffein—a drug classified as a poison. The average cup of coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffein—a dose equal to that often administered by physicians in cases of heart failure.

Caffein, by deadening the danger signal of fatigue, appears to give new strength. Actually, this strength is robbed from the body's own reserve, stored up for life's emergencies.

Coffee contains no nourishment. Its only virtues as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A good, hot, drugless drink is a benefit with every meal.

Millions enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink made of whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening—nothing more. A drink with the rich, mellow, full-bodied flavor of this wholesome grain. Every member of the family can drink it every meal of the day, enjoy its deliciousness, crave it, knowing there isn't a sleepless hour, a headache or a taut nerve in it.

For the sake of your years following age 31, we want you to try Postum for thirty days. You can't expect to overcome the effects of a habit of years in two or three days, or even a week. To make this a sporting proposition, we will give you a week's supply of Postum free. Enough for a cup with every meal for a week. But we want you to carry on for the full thirty days.

Carrie Blanchard, who has personally served Postum to over 500,000 people, will send you her own directions for preparing it. Indicate whether you want Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare, or Postum Cereal, the kind you boil, for your week's free supply. CHAPTER XIX

The First Fourth of July.

Mrs. Scott and her child lived in the family of General Herkimer for a month or so. Settlers remote from towns and villages had abandoned their farms. The Indians had gone into the great north bush perhaps to meet the British army which was said to be coming down from Canada in appalling numbers. Hostilities in the neighborhood of The Long House had ceased. The great Indian highway and its villages were deserted save by young children and a few ancient red men and squaws, too old for travel. Late in June, Jack and Solomon were ordered to report to General Schuyler at Albany.

"We're getting shoveled eroun' plenty," Solomon declared. "We'll take the womern an' the boy with us an' paddle down the Mohawk to Albany. They kind o' fell from heaven into our hands an' we got to look a'ter 'em faithful. Fust ye know ol' Herk'll be movin' er swallered hull by the British an' the Injuns, like Jonah was by the whale, then what 'ud become o' her an' the Leetle Cricket? We got to look a'ter 'em."

"I think my mother will be glad to give them a home," said Jack. "She really needs some help in the house these days."

The Scotts' buildings had been burned by the Indians and their boats destroyed save one large canoe which had happened to be on the south shore of the river out of their reach. In this Jack and Solomon and "Mis' Scott" and the Little Cricket set out with loaded packs in the moon of the new leaf, to use a phrase of the Mohawks, for the city of the Great river. They had a carry at Wolf Riff and some shorter ones but in the main it was a smooth and delightful journey, between wooded shores, down the long winding lane of the Mohawk. Without fear of the Indians they were able to shoot deer and wild fowl and build a fire on almost any part of the shore. Mrs. Scott insisted on her right to do the cooking. Jack kept a diary of the trip, some pages of which the historian has read. From them we learn:

"Mrs. Scott has bravely run the gauntlet of her sorrows. Now there is a new look in her face. She is a black-eyed, dark-haired, energetic, comely woman of forty with cheeks as red as a ripe strawberry. Solomon calls her 'middle sized' but she seems to be large enough to fill his eye. He shows her great deference and chooses his words with particular care when he speaks to her. Of late he has taken to singing. She and the boy seem to have stirred the depths in him and curious things are coming up to the surface—songs and stories and droll remarks and playful tricks and an unusual amount of laughter. I suppose that it is the spirit of youth in him, stunned by his great sorrow. Now touched by miraculous hands he is coming back to his old self. There can be no doubt of this: the man is ten years younger than when I first knew him even. The Little Cricket has laid hold of his heart. Whig sits between the feet of Solomon in the stern during the day and insists upon sleeping with him at night.

"One morning my old friend was laughing as we stood on the river bank washing ourselves.

"'What are you laughing at?' I asked.

"'That gol durn leetle skeezucks!' he answered. 'He were kickin' all night like a mule fightin' a bumble bee. 'Twere a cold night an' I held him ag'in me to keep the leetle cuss warm.'

"'Hadn't you better let him sleep with his mother?' I asked.

"'Wall, if it takes two to do his sleepin' mebbe I better be the one that suffers. Ain't she a likely womern?'

"Of course I agreed, for it was evident that she was likely, sometime, to make him an excellent wife and the thought of that made me happy."

They had fared along down by the rude forts and villages traveling stealthily at night in tree shadows through "the Tory zone," as the vicinity of Fort Johnson was then called, camping, now and then, in deserted farmhouses or putting up at village inns. Setting out from their last camp an hour before daylight they had heard the booming of cannon at sunrise. Solomon stopped his paddle and listened.

"By the hide an' horns o' the devil!" he exclaimed. "I wonder if the British have got down to Albany."

They were alarmed until they hailed a man on the river road and learned that Albany was having a celebration.

"What be they celebratin'?" Solomon asked.

"The Declaration o' Independence," the citizen answered.

"It's a good idee," said Solomon. "When we git thar this 'ere ol' rifle o' mine 'll do some talkin' if it has a chanst."

Church bells were ringing as they neared the city. Its inhabitants were assembled on the river front. The Declaration was read and then General Schuyler made a brief address about the peril coming down from the north. He said that a large force under General Burgoyne was on Lake Champlain and that the British were then holding a council with the Six Nations on the shore of the lake above Crown Point.

"At present we are unprepared to meet this great force but I suppose that help will come and that we shall not be dismayed. The modest man who leads the British army from the north declares in his proclamation that he is 'John Burgoyne, Esq., lieutenant general of his majesty's forces in America, colonel of the Queen's Regiment of Light Dragoons, governor of Fort William in North Britain, one of the commons in parliament and commander of an army and fleet employed on an expedition from Canada!' My friends, such is the pride that goeth before a fall. We are an humble, hard-working people. No man among us can boast of a name so lavishly adorned. Our names need only the simple but glorious adornments of firmness, courage and devotion. With those, I verily believe, we shall have an ally greater than any this world can offer. Let us all kneel where we stand while Rev. Mr. Munro leads us in prayer to Almighty God for His help and guidance."

It was an impressive hour and that day the same kind of talk was heard in many places. The church led the people. Pulpiteers of inspired vision of which, those days, there were many spoke with the tongues of men and of angels. A sublime faith in "The Great Ally" began to travel up and down the land.

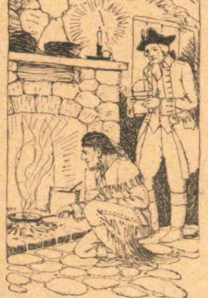
The Ambush.

Mrs. Scott and her little son were made welcome in the home of John Irons. Jack and Solomon were immediately sent up the river and through the bush to help the force at Ti. In the middle and late days of July, they reported to runners the southward progress of the British. They were ahead of Herkimer's regiment of New York militia on August 3 when they discovered the ambush—a misfortune for which they were in no way responsible. Herkimer and his force had gone on without them to relieve Fort Schuyler. The two scouts had ridden post to join him. They were afoot half a mile or so ahead of the commander when Jack heard the call of the swamp robin. He hurried toward his friend. Solomon was in a thicket of tamaracks.



CAMPING NOW AND THEN IN DESERTED FARM-HOUSES.

"We got to git back quick," said the latter. "I see sign o' an ambush."

They hurried to their command and warned the general. He halted and faced his men about and began a retreat. Jack and Solomon hurried out ahead of them some 20 rods apart. In five minutes Jack heard Solomon's call again. Thoroughly alarmed, he ran in the direction of the sound. In a moment he met Solomon. The face of the latter had that stern look which came only in a crisis. Deep furrows ran across his brow. His hands were shut tight. There was an expression of anger in his eyes. He swallowed as Jack came near.

"It's an ambush sure as hell's ahead," he whispered.

As they were hurrying toward the regiment, he added:

"We got to fight an' ag'in big odds—British an' Injuns. Don't never let yerself be took alive, my son, lessen ye want to die as Scott did. But, mebbe, we kin bu'st the circle."

In half a moment they met Herkimer.

"Git ready to fight," said Solomon. "We're surrounded."

The men were spread out in a half-circle and some hurried orders given, but before they could take a step forward the trap was sprung. "The Red Devils of Brant" were rushing at them through the timber with yells that seemed to shake the treetops. The regiment fired and began to advance. Some 40 Indians had fallen as they fired. General Herkimer and others were wounded by a volley from the savages.

"Come on, men. Foller me an' use yer bayonets," Solomon shouted. "We'll cut our way out."

The Indians ahead had no time to load. Scores of them were run through. Others fled for their lives. But a red host was swarming up from behind and firing into the regiment. Many fell. Many made the mistake of turning to fight back and were overwhelmed and killed or captured. A goodly number had cut their way through with Jack and Solomon and kept going, swapping cover as they went. Most of them were wounded in some degree. Jack's right shoulder had been torn by a bullet. Solomon's left hand was broken and bleeding. The savages were almost on their heels, not 200 yards behind. The old scout rallied his followers in a thicket at the top of a knoll with an open grass meadow between them and their enemies. There they reloaded their rifles and stood waiting.

"Don't fire—not none o' ye—till I give the word. Jack, you take my rifle. I'm goin' to throw this 'ere bunch o' lightnin'."

Solomon stepped out of the thicket and showed himself when the savages entered the meadow. Then he limped up the trail as if he were badly hurt, in the fashion of a hen partridge when one has come near her brood. In a moment he had dodged behind cover and crept back into the thicket.

There were about 200 warriors who came running across the flat toward that point where Solomon had disappeared. They yelled like demons and overran the little meadow with astonishing speed.

"Now hold yer fire—hold yer fire till I give ye the word, er we'll all be et up. Keep yer fingers off the triggers now."

He sprang into the open. Astonished, the foremost runners halted while others crowded upon them. The "bunch of lightning" began its curved flight as Solomon leaped behind a tree and shouted, "Fire!"

"'Tain't too much to say that the cover flew off o' h—l right thar at the edge o' the Bloody Medder that minnit—you hear to me," he used to tell his friends. "The air were full o' bu'sted Injun an' a barrel o' blood an' grease went down into the ground. A dozen er so that wasn't hurt run back ercrost the medder like the devil were chasin' 'em all with a red-hot iron. I reckon it'll allus be called the Bloody Medder."

In this retreat Jack had lost so much blood that he had to be carried on a litter. Before night fell they met Gen. Benedict Arnold and a considerable force. After a little rest the tireless Solomon went back into the bush with Arnold and two regiments to find the wounded Herkimer, if possible, and others who might be in need of relief. They met a band of refugees coming in with the body of the general. They reported that the far bush was echoing with the shrieks of tortured captives.

"Beats all what an amount o' sufferin' it takes to start a new nation," Solomon used to say.

Next day Arnold fought his way to the fort, and many of St. Leger's Rangers and their savage allies were slain or captured or broken into little bands and sent flying for their lives into the northern bush. So the siege of Fort Schuyler was raised.

CHAPTER XXI

The Binkussing of Colonel Burley.

Solomon had been hit in the thigh by a rifle bullet on his way to the fort. He and Jack and other wounded men were conveyed in boats and litters to the hospital at Albany where Jack remained until the leaves were gone. Solomon recovered more quickly and was with Lincoln's militia under Colonel Brown when they joined Johnson's Rangers at Ticonderoga and cut off the supplies of the British army. Later having got around the lines of the enemy with this intelligence he had a part in the fighting on Bemus Heights and the Stillwater and saw the defeated British army under Burgoyne marching eastward in disgrace to be conveyed back to England.

Jack had recovered and was at home when Solomon arrived in Albany with the news.

Solomon spent a part of the evening at play with the Little Cricket and the other children and when the young ones had gone to bed, went out for a walk with "Mis' Scott" on the river front.

Mrs. Irons had said of the latter that she was a most amiable and useful person.

"The Little Cricket has won our hearts," she added. "We love him as we love our own."

When Jack and Solomon were setting out in a hired sloop for the Highlands next morning there were tears in the dark eyes of "Mis' Scott."

"Ain't she a likely womern?" Solomon asked again when with sails spread they had begun to cut the water.

Goldbeating Is Most Ancient Art in World

The recent regilding of the railings outside of Buckingham palace reminds one that gold-beating is at once the most ancient and the most modern art in the world. It is believed that the art was introduced into this country by the Romans about 2,000 years ago, says the London Tit-Bits. Probably they got it from the Greeks, who in turn were instructed by the Egyptians.

Although powerful machinery is used for goldbeating, the final process has to be done by hand. Seen in its virgin state, in a crucible just taken from the furnace, the gold glistens like diamonds, and after being poured into a mold and cooled in a special bath a 200-ounce brick of 22-carat quality is worth about £900.

The men who beat gold by hand wield hammers weighing fourteen or twenty-one pounds each. The skill of the workers is such that gold can be beaten to the thinness of 1-282,000th of an inch, and one ounce can be made to cover an area of more than 200 square feet.

A skilled craftsman takes a week to beat two and a half ounces of gold into leaf, and one ounce produces 2,500 gold leaves three and a quarter inches square.—London Tit-Bits.

How American Fliers Gained Day on Trip

"A newspaper date line—'Paramashru Island, Kuriles, May 17'—has done more to make the international date line an understandable reality to millions of readers than could numerous chapters in school geographies," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"This unusual date line appeared in the morning papers of May 17 that had gone to press about 4 o'clock in the morning. The dispatch told of the arrival the same day, Saturday, at 11:35 in the morning, of America's round-the-world fliers — apparently seven and a half hours after the papers were printed.

"But because the fliers had hurdled the date line immediately after leaving the last Aleutian island they had jumped twenty-four hours into the future. Their arrival was really about sixteen and one-half hours before the papers went to press. They had begun to speak a different language from America—their 11:35 Saturday was the same as 11:35 Friday in the United States."

Rivers Carry Salt Into the Ocean

At first it strikes one as strange that, although the sea must originally have been formed of distilled water—that is, congealed watery vapor—and though all the rivers that flow into it, estimated to amount in the aggregate to 6,500 cubic miles of water every year, are fed exclusively by rainfall, which is also distilled water, it should nevertheless be extremely brackish, very salt indeed in the tropics and less salt at the poles.

Yet it is chiefly the rivers that account for the saltness of the sea. It is estimated that they carry something like 100,000,000 tons of saline matter into the ocean every year and, further, that the ocean holds in suspension no less than 140,000,000,000,000 tons of salt, a sufficient quantity, if extracted, to cover the dry surface of the earth to a depth of 400 feet, says London Tit-Bits.

It is believed that 90,000,000 years have been required for the sea to attain its present saltness.

The marriage ring and the prize ring often lead to the stage.

Our Transportation Modern Discovery Not Invention

Lost in the mists which shroud the beginnings of history is the first man. Wanting to get a log from one place to another, he rolled it instead of carrying it. In one year or many thousands of years, no one knows how many, early man conceived the idea of smoothing the path over which he rolled his logs. The first stone removed from the hillside down which a log was to be rolled, the first hole in the ground filled up that the log might not stick, marked the beginning of road building.

In the course of time it occurred to some man that the smaller the log the easier it rolled. From this beginning the log sections which were the first wheels, were born; in India today can be seen bullock carts, the wheels of which are flat sections, cuts from logs. Mounting these "wheels" on an "axle" which was a smaller tree, was a true invention, but the making and use of the first wheel must have been a pure discovery.

Road building, too, was discovery rather than invention. Early man must soon have found out that heavy loads cut into the soft earth, so rather than wait for the mud to dry he was led to harden the roadbed by the first means at hand. Whether this was accomplished by placing of flat rocks in the path of the first carts, or covering the mud with boughs, grass, branches of trees (progenitors of corduroy roads) history does not say. The Romans showed the world what cut stone in courses could do towards making permanent roads (the Appian Way is still a useable stone road) and McAdam taught us what crushed stone may do, but these were but improvements upon the original discovery.

It is a long stretch of years from a log section to balloon tires, from a grass covered path to a modern cement, brick, macadamized, oiled or tarred roadbed, but while these modern implements are the very best we know and the product of the brains of many inventors, the original means of transportation they improved were not inventions, but discoveries of means which nature had placed ready for man's use.

New Car Is Low Priced

Announcement is made that the Schuler Motor Car Company, Slinger, Wis., is expected to start production in July of the Schuler roadster to be sold at $295 and a coupe to be sell at $495. The cars will be equipped with starter and electric lights, three speed gearset and a 19 horse power twin V-type water cooled valve in head engine. The first model was displayed some time ago at the Wisconsin State Automobile show. The company is capitilized at $1,000,000.

Annihilating Distance

We note with pride the accomplishment of one flying pilot Russell Maughan, who recently made the shortest trip from coast to coast ever recorded by an aeroplane. The goldon age is certainly near when the span of America from New York to the Golden Gate is accomplished in one actual day.

The statement is hard to credit but is true never-the-less, and the glory of the aeroplane inventor grows apace. The Wright brothers or rather the one who lives to-day can certainly look ahead to the development of his pet invention with feelings of satisfaction, and if he were inclined to be vain he would suffer with "swell head."

The time of running in the air from New York City to SanFrancisco is given as 21 hours and 48½ minutes. Think of it! This is a wonderful age and is going to be still more so in a few years. Babies of to-day are going to see the trip made in a few years from sun to sun, so greatly will speed be increased.

The use of the aeroplane in war will become a science so keen as to put most of the battleships out of commission, and it will be possible to girdle the earth for less than one-half of the expense of the present in a ridiculiously short length of time. Builders of the aeroplane are going to increase its size, as volume seems to be no handicap; safety devices will be used to protect the passengers while in the air from falling to earth, and these giant planes will be prevented from disaster and falling by stabilizers probably filled with some form of lighter-than-air gas. Stations will be constructed above the street levels with large landing platforms, and power devices for giving the aeroplanes a momentum sufficient to launch in the air; elevators will lower passengers to the street after landing. Already the government has established light houses in a trail across the continent to guide airmen in their night trips.

These "light houses" are great steel towers equipped with big searchlights which can shoot a bright electric ray up or down, and in all directions like the tail of a comet, and visible for many miles. So much for aerial travel.

Now a few words for motor traffic on the surface would not be far-fetched. The good roads program which America has entered upon will soon cause a revolution in auto travel. Already it is common for 7-day trips to be made into Florida from Michigan and with the perfecting of carburetors on these machines more speed from less gas will be the rule.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Northrup arrived home in Jackson on Monday of this week at about 8 o'clock p. m., from the town of Ritchie, in Florida where they left on Wednesday of last week, having driven 1,600 miles on good roads the entire distance by the way of Washington, D. C., in six days.

This time will be reduced considerably by more direct routing and better highways, so that in all probability four days will be necessary only for a trip from Jacksonville, Florida, to Michigan or other points of equal distance.

The railroads as far as known are the worst sufferers and to compete they will be obliged to put on motor bus service and depend solely upon freight traffic.

However Verne's "20,000 Leagues" is actually being outdone in the accomplishments of the day.

What shall we say of astronomy? Over in California astronomers are constantly working and have annihilated millions of miles between ourselves and Mars with the great lenses. These powerful glasses have shown wonderful panoramas on the planets, and important announcements can be expected at any time. Of course that age-old question as to the inhabitants of Mars and Jupitor is expected to bob up, and no one will ever be the wiser, but scientists are going to be able to tell you the exact length of the seasons and a lot of other data.

Science will not be downed!

Wool Marketing Plans of Bureau Meet With Favor

Michigan farmers are looking with favor upon the State Farm Bureau's plans for marketing the 1924 clip through the Ohio Wool Growers Association. Nearly 100,000 pounds of wool have already been assembled and forwarded to Columbus and contracts for a large amount of additional wool have been received. These amounts compare very favorably with the records of previous years for this early in the season. In many parts of the state shearing has been delayed and wool marketing is just getting under way.

There are probably two factors which are making the State Farm Bureau's wool marketing experience so successful this year. In the first place, the local dealers are offering unreasonably low prices which are apparently much lower than the market justifies. It appears that they are trying to make good the losses which they have sustained the last few years in trying to discredit co-operating wool marketing.

The second factor which is contributing to the success of the Bureau's wool marketing arrangement is the very favorable contract which it is possible to offer through the co-operating of the Ohio Wool Grower's Association.

Because of the large amount of wool in the Ohio pool this year, the Michigan growers have been guaranteedthe very low handling charge of 2¾ cents per pound to Farm Bureau members and a half cent additional to non-Farm Bureau members. Each wool grower must stand his own freight, which in most cases will run about a half cent per pound.

Another attractive feature of the 1924 contract is that a cash advance of 75 per cent of the estimated value of wool is made upon its delivery at the Columbus warehouse, if such advance is desired and requested.

PROBATE ORDER

STATE OF MICHIGAN The Probate court for the county of Hillsdale. At a session of said court held at the Probate Office in the city of Hillsdale in said county on the 10th day of June, A. D. 1924.

Present Hon. Arthur L. Guernsey. Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Jonathan Smith Mentally Incompetent. B. H. Bump, Supt. of Poor having filed in said court his petition alleging that said Jonathan Smith is a mentally incompetent person, and praying that Henry Haynes or some other suitable person be appointed as guardian of his person and estate.

It is ordered that the 15th day of July, A. D. 1924, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that notice thereof be given by personal service of a copy of this order upon said Jonathan Smith and upon such of his nearest relatives and presumptive heirs at-law as reside within said county, at least fourteen days previous to said day of hearing.

And it is Further Ordered: That notice thereof be given to all others of his nearest relatives and presumptive heirs-at-law by a publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing in the North Adams Adcocate, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Both Parties Give Ear To Farmers

It is extremely interesting and significant that both the Republican and Democratic political parties are giving very careful attention to the agricultural planks written into their platforms at recent national conventions. Now that farmers are organized both locally and nationally in an effective way and have established the Farm Bloc in Congress, the politicians are increasingly desirous of keeping in the good graces of the rural voters.

Desires of the farmers were resented to both national conventions by representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation. O. E. Bradfute, president, and Gray Silver, Washington representative, are representing the Federation at the Democratic Convention in New York this week. One of the planks which they will present will contain a request to "take whatever steps may be necessary to bring the purchasing power of agriculture back to normal."

At the Republican National Convention at Cleveland the wishes of organized agriculture were represented by S. H. Thompson, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association and member of the A. F. B. F. executive committee, and Edw. B. Reid, assistant Washington representative of the Federation. The success of their efforts is well indicated by the following extracts from the platform as finally adopted

"We pledge the Party to take whatever steps are necessary to bring back a balanced condition between agriculture, industry and labor.

"The crux of the problem from the standpoint of the farmer is the net profit he received after his outlay. The process of bringing the average prices of what he buys and what he sells closer together can be indirectly expedited by reduction in taxes, steady employment in industry and stability in business.

Michigan At Cleveland

The Michigan delegation at the national convention voted once for Kenyon of Iowa for vice president but the judge did not develop much strength. The second ballot was for former governor Lowden of Illinois, who is doing a fine work as a farmer and stock breeder and passing on the results of his own experience to others for their benefit. He was nominated on the second ballot, but declined. On the third ballot the delegation, with one exception, voted for Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, who did such splendid work in the world war, getting supplies to the front for our soldiers, who had charge of inaugurating the national budget system, that has saved the country a great amount of money, and who has made a success of the many undertakings that have occupied his busy life. General Dawes is a man who does things. He goes straight at the mark and accomplishes results. He is big enough for president, should he be called upon to fill that high office.

"Death Valley Scottie," famons character in the old-time gold camp is prospecting near Barkerville, British Columbia, where he claims he knows there is gold, having found it in quantites in 1874 in that district. On a recent trip to Quesnel he brought back some gold on the running board of his car in the form of a gold bridge in the head of a skelton he found on the Little Cottonwood.

CATARRH

Catarrh is a Local disease greatly influenced by Constitutional conditions. ELECTRIC IRRIGATION HELPS WESTERN FARMS

Provides Artificial "Rainfall" Whenever Needed for "Basic Industry" of Agriculture.

Progress in agriculture, particularly as applied to the western farmer, is symbolized by one thing, prosaic enough in itself—the irrigation ditch.

The farmer no longer blames the weather for crop failures, and "hopes for better conditions next season." Nowadays, if the rainfall does not suit him, he produces his own rainfall by a twist of the wrist, or the push of a button, in exactly the quantity he desires, and at precisely the time it is needed. Furthermore, he puts it on the particular piece of ground which he wishes to cultivate.

Desert Land from Lack of Rain

The application of electric power to irrigation, through the rugged electric motor, has simplified and economized the process for the farmer, especially the farmer with small holdings.

What electric power can mean is evident when it is realized that agriculture is a great "basic industry"; that hard times invariably follow crop failures; that irrigation is the solution of the western farmer's problem; and that electric power for irrigation pumps is making irrigation easier, more efficient, more reliable and less expensive.

It has been found, incidentally, that in most cases the farmer wants to install too large an irrigation system. The ideal plant is the one that operates continually and has a storage reservoir so that a large, expensive pump is not needed.

When a small installation of this sort is at work, with a storage reservoir capable of holding all the water pumped over a period of twelve hours, the plant could be run all night, and in the morning the farmer would find a full reservoir, from which he could water his land as needed through the day; and at night the reservoir would be empty, thus completing the cycle.

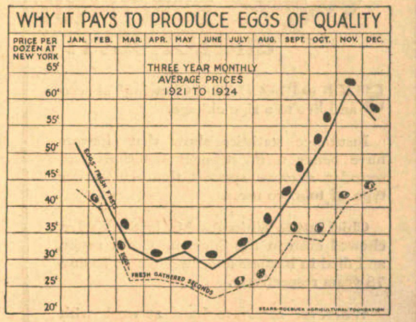
How Much Does It Cost to Borrow?

It all depends on how and where you borrow, as shown in this table of approximate rates compiled for the Journal of the American Bankers Association:

Institution	Method of Borrowing	Rate
COMMERCIAL BANK	DISCOUNT OWN NOTE	5½ %
	SECURED LOAN	5½
	BROKER'S CALL LOAN	4½
COMMERCIAL PAPER	THROUGH BROKER — 3 MONTHS	5½
	— 6 MONTHS	5½
SAVINGS BANKS AND INSURANCE COMPANIES	DIRECT MORTGAGE	6
	MORTGAGE EXTENSION	6
AGRICULTURAL BANKS	FEDERAL FARM LOAN BANKS	6
	JOINT STOCK LAND BANKS	6
INVESTMENT SECURITIES	REAL ESTATE MORTGAGES	6/7
	MUNICIPAL BONDS (1ST GRADE)	4½
	INDUSTRIAL BONDS " "	5
	RAILROAD BONDS " "	5
FINANCE COMPANY	ADVANCE AGAINST RECEIVABLES AT 1/25 % PER DAY	14.6
	ADVANCE AGAINST AUTOMOBILE PAPER AT 1½ % PER MONTH	18
PERSONAL LOAN SOCIETY	GOOD SECURITY OR ENDORSEMENT	6
	UNSECURED OR CHATTEL MORTGAGE HOUSEHOLD GOODS. 3½ % MONTHLY	42
MERCANTILE CREDIT	TERMS 2% 10 DAYS, NET 30 DAYS	36.00
	" 2 10 " " 60 "	14.50
	" 3 10 " " 60 "	36.00
	" 5 10 " " 4 MONTHS	16.36

The above figures show that for the class of notes acceptable at a commercial bank, the rates charged are about 5½ per cent, whereas for loans at a store they run as high as 36 per cent, and for chattel mortgages, 42 per cent. The rates given here represent the direct cost charged by the institutions named; in each case the total cost to the borrower is made slightly higher by indirect costs, such as stamp taxes, legal, brokerage or other fees. Thus the total cost to the borrower, who discounts his own note at a bank for 5½ per cent, is 5.74 per cent due to deduction of interest in advance, stamp tax and computation on a 360 day basis. In the case of mercantile credit the total cost sometimes goes over 38 per cent and for chattel mortgages over 45 per cent. The above figures, however, give the comparative charges as made by the loaning institutions themselves.



That everything with a shell on goes, isn't the rule any longer. On the market today, it still goes, but at a price below a first-class egg. Opportunity for the greatest success in egg production lies in producing an article that is better than the average, then selling it as such. It isn't hard to find a market willing to pay a premium of 6 to 7 cents a dozen over firsts and from 9 to 13 cents a dozen over seconds, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The premium on fresh-gathered firsts at New York City during a three-year period over fresh-gathered seconds was substantial as shown by the accompanying chart. During February, March and April, when practically all eggs are good, the prices of extra firsts average only from 1 to 4 cents higher than for seconds. In May the spread begins to widen. In August the margin on extra firsts is around 9 cents. It continues to widen until in November, when the high peak is reached, with extras at 62 cents a dozen and seconds at 41 cents. It costs a little more and it takes a lot of extra effort to market high quality eggs. Yet the gain is ample return for the extra expense and labor.

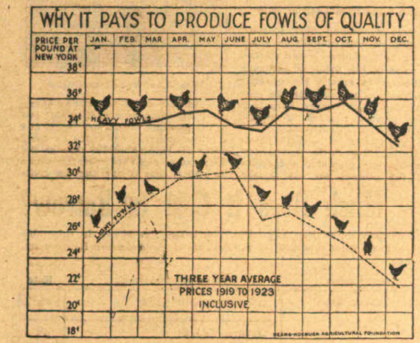
WHY IT PAYS TO PRODUCE FOWLS OF QUALITY



It's the extra pound of flesh on the fowl that cheapens production costs and commands a premium price for the poultryman. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation the extra pound can be put on for from 5 to 7 cents, which increases the value of each pound to the consumer by making the entire carcass more plump and attractive, so it commands a fancy price over lighter birds. Heavy hens sell from 5 to 11 cents more than light hens. It's true all down the line—turkeys, ducks, capons, hens and young frys—the extra pound brings the extra dollar.

Over a period of three years the New York market shows heavy fresh-killed milk-fed fowls or hens weighing 5 pounds or over to average from 4 to 11 cents higher per pound than the light fowls weighing 3 pounds. The five-year average for the month of September shows the heavy fowls to average 9 cents over the light weight, the margin broadening during October and November, reaching its height in December, when the heavy fowls range to 11 cents a pound over the light weights.

The average weight of the ordinary fowl as it comes from the farm is 3¼ to 4 pounds. The poultryman with the eye for business will add an extra pound or so and receive the top prices. The farmer who takes thin, underfleshed poultry to market is beating himself.

Why, I wonder, is this fact so frequently lost sight of?

"Atta boy, Dick. Land on him hard. Give him all that you've got, especially any and everything that pertains to his chosen occupation." advised Robert. "Put his fossilized notions in the crematory."

"Bob knows my most vulnerable spot," said Richard. "Any allusion to the harmlessness of beer has about the same effect upon me that a red flag has on a bull. I want to snort, and bellow and paw up the ground! Now lend me your ears, James, for here is something of special interest to one who, of course understands how important it is that chauffeurs, railroad men, pilots, etc., should be able to pick up signals quickly, observe them instantly especially the red danger signal. In 1916 and 1917 a scientist named Schultz performed experiments to determine the effects of alcohol on the ability to distinguish colors. He employed alcohol in various forms—in beer, Rhine wine, champagne, brandy, etc. The wine taken amounted to about one and one half glassfuls; the beer, to a half pint glass. In nearly all cases there was marked diminution in the ability to distinguish shades of red and green; this impairment was worse for red than for green. The greatest diminution of clearness of vision occurred after taking beer.

"A special series of tests arranged to ascertain whether half a pint of beer could impair sight of a signal appearing only for an instant. Out of 100 persons tested, 44 saw less well after taking the beer. There were 18 with whom the diminution was marked."

"I begin to see what you are driving at," said Gridley. You mean that with a few beers in me, I might not know what I am driving at. Impairment of vision, for even a second, might easily become serious in one who has charge of an automobile."

"Exactly," answered Richard. Drink and the motorists simply do not go together, but neither, for that matter, do drink and the workingman. In olden times, when man used only simple tools, nothing more elaborate probably than a sharp knife, he might go at his work all befuddled and do no harm to himself or others, but in these days of complex machinery, one drunken mistake may mean tragedy. Human life, costly machinery, and continuous operation all are at stake, all call for clear brains."

"Another thing that gets me," continued Richard, "is the clamor by some for light wines and beer, which they seem to class as temperance drinks. In the good old days the court rooms were crowded every Monday with those who had been arrested for intoxication. Curiously enough, ninety percent of the stuff then sold over the bars was beer and light wines." A whistle blew. Surely that can't be six o'clock! How time does fly. Goodbye James we must be off. Good luck to you. See you again soon!"

"Goodbye, boys," said James "Thanks for your sympathy, and believe me, after all you've told me. I'm on the water wagon for life. Can't afford to take any chances."

That evening Gridley, outwardly composed, but with much inward trepidation, stood in the presence of his erstwhile master awaiting "execution", but the ax never fell Mr. Bancroft, who was seated at his library table writing, suddenly paused, looked up, and smiled. Well James," he said, pleasantly, "you certainly gave an awful jolt this afternoon, but hang it, lad, you were in the right. I've long been numbered among those who were shouting for personal liberty. I wanted to be sure that the man at the wheel was perfectly sober. You got me on another count, too. While technically, I was within my rights in serving my pre-prohibition stock I was really breaking the spirit of the law. I encouraged others to serve liquor, thus creating a demand that eventually could only be supplied by the bootlegger. If there were no buyers there would be no vendors. Tom Gleason violated the national prohibition act in making home brew, you were an accessory when you allowed him to serve it to you. We break the laws of our country, and yet consider ourselves 100 per cent American! Right now I give you fair warning. I will not tolerate a chauffeur who drinks. At the same time, I cannot consisently curtail your personal liberty, I give you permission to indulge every time I do. But—er—since I like my chauffeur and should hate to lose him, I think he may safely bank upon my permanent good behavior Mr. Bancroft looked away for a moment then turned to his employe and waved him affectionally to the door. "Home, James," he said, a bit tremulously, as one who is stirred by some deep emotion.

The Democratic Party Bosses

As usual the Democratic party wants to do something which it cannot handle this coming election and in all probability the entire chances of the party will be nol-prossed by a few of the business managers who want to stick to old traditions. McAdoo and wet Al Smith of New York whom everybody supposed were only logical candidates, are reported to be knocking each other and it is said that only one result can come out of it—that means the elimination of both of these chaps to the glory of some "dark horse" who might look good to voters on both sides of the fence. McAdoo undoubtedly has more confidence in himself and more backing than any man the Democrats have been able to resurrect in some years, but it isn't going to do him much good if the liberals get after his goat. The people have evidently learned a valuable lesson during the past four years and that lesson is going to be demonstrated in the coming election. Most of the worries of the "Old Party Managers" lately have been how to keep up party lines and at the same time rake in the popular vote. Party managers are going to be an excrescence before long and the people will run their own politics. Just to show how they can do it, they'll take care of Senator Jim Couzens of Michigan so he won't do any damage to the temperance cause.

Ashley & Dustin Line

Michigan folk residing within easy riding distance by automobile or trolley of Detroit when planning their summer outing are sometimes prone to overlook the fact that the metropolis is the gateway to the most delightfull lake and river trips in the world and the center of famous lake-side and island resorts like Cedar Point, which is known as the Atlantic City of the West, and Put In Bay island, in Lake Erie, which are visited annually by thousands of pleasure seekers from Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

The steamer Put In Bay, of the Ashley & Dudley line, makes daily trips between Detroit, the Put In Bay Islands, Sandusky and Cedar Point. The steamer leaves the dock at the foot of First street at 9 a. m. arriving in Put In Bay at 12 noon, and in Sandusky at 2 p. m., arriving back in Detroit at 8 p. m.

The steamer Put In Bay is one of the largest day excursion boats sailing out of the Port of Detroit and was built to carry 4,000 passengers, but for the sake of additional comfort and safety only 3,000 passengers are permitted to board the steamer. Finzel's Society orchestra supplies delightful music throughout the trip and the passengers who are so inclined may dance the hours away in the huge ball room of the steamer without additional cost. On the broad decks of the steamer the tourists can breathe the fresh air of river and lake and enjoy the picturesque beauty of the Lake Erie islands in daylight.

Many hotels and cottages offer reasonable rates to summer visitors by the day or week in Put In Bay, Lakeside, Ohio, and Cedar Point, Ohio, and the many attractions at these resorts assure a wonderful vacation at a reasonable expenditure —Advertisement.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON IX

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman
Public Education Commission, American Bankers Association.

What means has a savings depositor to prove that he has deposited his money in a bank? A person leaving his money as a deposit in a bank is given a pass book.

J. H. Puelicher

PASS BOOK=A small account book in which is written down by the bank a complete record of the deposits and other credits, the withdrawals or debits and the depositor's balance.

DEPOSITS=Money left with the bank by the depositor or some one for him creating a credit.

CREDITS=Items representing deposits or other amounts which are credited, that is, added to the customer's account; interest earned by his money is also added to his account from time to time by the bank and is a credit just as money actually deposited by him.

WITHDRAWALS=Money drawn from the bank by the depositor, or by some one duly authorized by him to do so, creating a debit.

DEBITS=Items representing amounts withdrawn which are subtracted from the depositor's balance.

BALANCE=Difference between credits and debits.

It is best to deposit savings in a bank because your money is safe; it earns more money; a systematic record is kept; it stimulates more savings and your money is always available when required

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democratic Convention May Last Many Days—Boom for Houston Started.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DEMOCRACY'S hosts—meaning the representatives of the Democratic party—assembled in Madison Square garden, New York, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Presidency and vice presidency, and the indications at this writing are that they will be there for some time before they make a choice. However, William G. McAdoo, who admittedly will have the largest vote on the first ballot, predicted as he arrived in New York that he not only would win the nomination, but would win it before many ballots had been cast. Leaders of the opposition to McAdoo scoffed at his claims.

This is intended to be a review of the events of the past week, not a forecast, but it can be said that the fight was centering on the proposition to abandon the time-honored rule of the Democrats which requires a two-thirds majority for a nomination. McAdoo's generals naturally were for this change. Brennan of Illinois, who is determined to defeat the Californian, declared if the two-thirds rule were abolished, so, too, must be the unit rule—in which case the change would do McAdoo little good. One other thing the new boss of the party said: "I want to see an anti-Ku-Klux-Klan plank in the platform, and they won't be able to make it too strong to suit me."

Next to the suggestion that the platform include a moist plank, that matter of the Klan is perhaps the most annoying that the committee on resolutions has to handle. A good guess is that the Democrats, like the Republicans, will evade both issues.

Toward the end of the week there developed a sudden and rather strong boom for David F. Houston for President. He will be remembered as secretary of agriculture and then of the treasury under Woodrow Wilson, and his boosters asserted that, shortly before his death, Mr. Wilson advised the nomination of Mr. Houston in 1924. Mr. Houston, who now resides in New York, is president of the Bell Securities company and director in various financial concerns.

HAVING established their headquarters in Chicago, the Republicans are merely waiting for the Democrats to put up a ticket to open the battle. Congressman Everett Sanders of Indiana has been made director of the speakers' bureau, and it is the intention to start the campaign in the Middle West, probably in Nebraska. Charles G. Dawes, vice presidential nominee, is likely to be sent there to make his first speeches. Mr. Dawes, addressing his fellow townsmen of Evanston, Ill., last week, said a number of things that should be pleasing to the American public regardless of party affiliations. In language characteristically vigorous he denounced "the curse of demagoguery in political discussions" by which, he said, the real facts and the economic principles involved in questions of national policy are continually obscured. He pledged himself to adhere, in the coming campaign, to the truth and to the common sense conclusions to be drawn therefrom, and concluded: "As to the demagogue on the stump, whatever may be his party, I want it distinctly understood that in the coming campaign I ask no quarter and will give none. I know that I will have the sympathy of all good citizens irrespective of party and I hope our political opponents will follow the same course. Let common sense reign."

UP IN St. Paul, Minn., assembled the so-called Farmer-Labor progressive national convention which had been denounced in advance by Senator LaFollette and Samuel Gompers because it was known that the Communists who take orders from the Moscow Internationale would try to dominate it. These Reds, led by William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg, though seemingly in the minority, actually did get control of the convention, but when the Minnesota delegation threatened to bolt they toned down the platform until it was only pink and then decided to nominate Duncan McDonald, head of the Illinois Workers' party, for President. This, however was only tentative pending the meeting of the Cleveland convention of the committee for progressive political action on July 4. It was understood that if the Cleveland meeting put up some other candidate, McDonald might be withdrawn and that man indorsed. Many of the delegates in St. Paul wanted to nominate LaFollette, despite his scathing denunciation of the convention, but were persuaded this would be worse than useless.

William Bouck of the state of Washington was nominated for vice president.

W. J. Taylor of Nebraska made a fiery speech denouncing the Russian redness of the convention and then led a bolt of 40 farmer delegates who refused to submit to the dictation of the Communists.

In the St. Paul platform are several interesting planks. One declares against "Jim Crowism" and calls for "full equality, economic and political, for the negro." Another urges a system of land tenure to abolish landlordism and tenantry and designed to secure the land to the user. Of course the platform contains a resolution demanding the recognition of the soviet Russian government.

The Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota, which last week renominated Senator Magnus Johnson, took no part in the convention.

WHILE the Japanese government was doing its best to put a stop to the boycott on American products, Secretary of State Hughes formulated and sent to Ambassador Hanihara his reply to Japan's note of protest against the exclusion clause of the immigration law and compared them with the old "gentlemen's agreement," showing that there is no material difference, congress having only exercised its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration instead of leaving it to international arrangements. The secretary concluded his note by expressing the conviction "that the recognition of the right of each government to legislate in control of immigration should not derogate in any degree from the mutual good will and cordial friendship which have always characterized the relations of the two countries."

BECAUSE of the insistence of the Obregon government that H. C. Cummins, British agent, get out of Mexico at once, Great Britain has severed all relations with Mexico, and there is no telling now when it will grant recognition to the present regime there. British interests in Mexico have been entrusted to the United States and Chile. Prime Minister MacDonald and his cabinet decided that the Mexican attitude was impossible for any self-respecting government to endure. Sir T. B. Hohler was getting ready to sail for Mexico to investigate the question of according recognition, but his mission has been called off. Mr., Cummins, who had entrenched himself in the British legation, was ordered home immediately. All the British had asked of Mexico was that Cummins be permitted to remain until the arrival of Hohler. This was refused in a note that was considered impertinent. Expulsion of Cummins was ordered because he sent "rude messages" to the Mexican government in trying to protect the interests of British subjects. He did everything he could in behalf of Mrs. Rosalie Evans, a widow, who has been fighting pluckily to prevent the expropriation of her estate.

FOR a time last week it seemed the rule of the Fascisti in Italy was about to come to an end, because of the great scandal arising from the kidnaping and brutal murder of Matteotti, a Socialist deputy who is said to have had in his possession full details of a huge bank failure in which certain Fascist chieftains were involved. So threatening was the situation that Mussolini's ministers tendered their resignations and the king called on the members of the Order of Annunciation—mostly former premiers and members of the royal family—to help form a general cabinet. Mussolini, however, arose to the emergency, displaced and replaced various high officials, directed the arrest of the guilty men and began a general housecleaning of the Fascist government. One of the accused is said to have confessed. By the end of the week the excitement over the affair was waning, but it was admitted that the scandal had dealt Fascism a severe blow. The truth is that the Fascist movement had begun to degenerate from a high moral crusade into a mere politicians' party, many of the members of which were concerned mainly in obtaining and retaining public office. Mussolini's dictatorial methods had begun to irk the people, and while he may continue in power, his rule is likely to be less autocratic.

EDOUARD HERRIOT, France's new premier, went to England Saturday to spend the week-end with Prime Minister MacDonald in conference over the application of the Dawes plan. Before he started he conferred with Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium, and then said France and Belgium were in complete accord concerning the matter. Herriot also received Herr Brietscheid, German Social Democrat deputy, who told him the majority of the reichstag favored carrying out the Dawes plan and that France could count on Germany's sincerity in executing it. The necessary bills for carrying out the Dawes plan will not be introduced in the reichstag before the middle of July, being complicated and extensive.

Herriot disappointed the extreme radicals and many Germans in several matters. First, he declared his policy was to retain control of the Ruhr until Germany had given the requisite guarantees. Then he selected for his minister of war General Nollet, head of the allied control commission in Germany. This caused a great protest from German Nationalists and Monarchists, especially as Herriot said he chose Nollet because he knew more about the military situation in Germany than any other man and that while France's policy would be to take action against the growing militarism in Germany, France would nevertheless help the young German democracy.

Premier Herriot told the French parliament that he was preparing to recognize Russia, and that the French embassy at the Vatican would be suppressed. He said complete amnesty would be granted all war prisoners except those condemned for treason.

PARLIAMENTARY elections in South Africa resulted in victory for the Nationalist-Labor coalition and gave momentum to the movement for an independent republic. Gen. Jan. Smuts, former premier, was defeated by a labor candidate, and General Hertzog, advocate of secession from the British empire, was elected. He may be the new premier.

FOR the fourth time Lieut. Ernest de Muyter of Belgium won the James Gordon Bennett balloon race with the balloon Belgica, and thus gained permanent possession of the trophy. He traveled about 500 miles and landed in Scotland.

America's globe encircling aviators made good progress last week, flying from Tourane, French Indo-China, to Saigon and then 500 miles to Bangkok, Siam. They expected to reach Rangoon before the week ended.

POST OFFICE employees of Canada struck and tied up the postal service across the Dominion from coast to coast. Business was seriously hampered and its demoralization was feared unless an early settlement was arranged. The workers have been asking an increase of salary, but instead are facing a decrease. Their union has proposed that the government shall place the postal service employees under the industrial disputes act immediately for a settlement of the salary schedule. In the meantime the men will accept the present salary and all benefits antedate April 1, 1924.

"Well, if that is your attitude you will be out till h—l freezes over," was the declaration of James Murdock, Dominion minister of labor.

Against Invasion of Mongolia by Chinese

Peking, China.—In spite of the resentment felt by the Mongolians toward their Russian masters it is doubtful whether they would welcome release at the hands of the Chinese in the opinion of Prince Na, one of the senior Mongolian nobles who with nine other princes has become an exile rather than submit to Russian rule.

Na was one of 24 princes who ruled one of the four provinces of Outer Mongolia before Baron Ungern-Sternberg and his "red" troops took possession of the country some five years ago. At that time the Russian invaders and their following of young Mongols gave the Mongol princes their option of submitting or leaving their country. Ten out of eighty-three chose exile.

There have been various reports in circulation to the effect that the Chinese military authorities were considering plans for the recovery of Mongolia by means of an armed expedition. Interviewed on the subject, Prince Na, who in spite of his long absence appears to have kept in touch with events and conditions in his own country, expressed the opinion that such an effort would be ill-advised. In the first place, he said, it is doubtful whether such an expedition could be successful, and in the second place it is an open question whether the Mongols themselves would welcome a Chinese army in their territory.

Don't judge by disappearances.

Michigan Happenings

The construction of a concrete wall capable of enclosing a complete new prison plant, on the north farm at Jackson prison, was authorized by the state prison commission meeting. An appropriation of $300,000 for the purpose is available. The plan is to start the work this fall and employ prison labor exclusively. The hope of the commission members and several state officers is to eventually obtain a model plant on the new Jackson site, with perhaps a large farming, cement producing or quarrying institution in the northern part of the state.

A proposal, originating in organized labor circles, to provide by amendment of the workmen's compensation law, for compulsory state insurance, eliminating private insurance companies from the compensation field and requiring employers to carry state insurance with no alternative, was attacked by representatives of employers and insurance companies at the hearing concluded in the circuit court room at Marquette, by Governor Groesbeck's special commission to determine remedies for existing defects in the law.

The net earnings of the Detroit street railways for the month of May was $67,106.58, which is a slight decrease from the revenue derived from operation for the same month of last year, the financial statement issued by the department, showed, so the statement also maintains that the service per passenger has been increased although the department is finding it difficult to "cope successfully in the adjusting of service and expenses with the speedily abnormal decrease in traffic demands."

Five members of the Michigan Central Railroad section crew from Ypsilanti narrowly escaped death when their hand car was struck and demolished by a special train near the city limits. The noise of a passing freight train prevented the men from hearing the approaching passenger train until the moment it struck the car. The men leaped to safety. The train was delayed here an hour owing to damage to the engine.

The labor barometer of the Employers' Association of Detroit shows a net increase of 2,137 men employed by its members for a recent week, according to the report of Chester M. Culver, general manager. The aggregate working force of the firms now reporting is 204,211, of which 142,885 are working on reduced schedules. These men are employed in 33 shops and an average 40.2 hours for the week.

Actual work in completing the reading room of the Michigan Union of the University of Michigan has begun and by the time the students have returned, this room, one of the few unfinished portions of the Union, will be finished. The money, $21,500, for the completion of the room has been furnished by Mrs. Catherine B. Pendleton, of Detroit, in memory of her husband.

A state-wide quarantine of circuses, state fairs and carnivals, has been ordered by Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner until the quarantine is lifted, it will be impossible for any company to show or move without permission from the state health department. Dr. Olin indicated he will allow them to move nowhere but out of the state.

An order received by F. E. Morse, agent for the Detroit, Bay City & Western railroad, was to the effect that all passenger, mail and express service be discontinued. The order was from Willis C. Ogborn, receiver for the railroad, which will continue to handle freight, but only on an irregular schedule.

By action of the Council July 24 will hereafter be a civic holiday in Detroit, in commemoration of the landing at the site of future Detroit, July 24, 1701, of Sieur Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac.

While fishing in the River Raisin, eight miles west of Monroe, a man feeling something heavy on his hook and line, raised the body of a baby girl. The child had a stone tied to its neck.

Nearly $16,000 in checks taken in the holdup of the Walker Advertising Company pay car, at Detroit, recently, has been recovered, together with the bandits' car.

Mrs. Harriet Campbell, 81 years old, a resident of Middleville for 50 years, was found dead from heart failure in an easy chair in her home when a son, Charles, forced his way into the home when he found the doors locked.

E. F. Steuver, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rhinehard Steuver, was drowned at Martin's Resort, at White Fish Lake while attending the annual high school picnic. A group of girls and boys witnessed the fatality.

Detroit Edison company's net income for May was $386,514.11, as compared with $357,403.68 for May 1923, while the total for the first five months of this year was $3,115,581.88, which compared with $2,458,818.62 for the similar period of last year.

An amendment to the compiled ordinances of Detroit, increasing the salary of the office of Mayor from $8,000 to $15,000 a year, has been finally adopted by the council and signed by Acting Mayor Martin.

Swamp-Root a Fine Medicine

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Study Electric Eel

Attendants at the New York zoo having been stunned by current from the electric eel, an investigation has been begun of the creature's power plant. Previous attempts at measuring the current have failed because the apparatus used was not sufficiently sensitive to register the sudden and intense shocks delivered. These, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, are said to be powerful enough to stun a horse and are described by keepers who suffered them, as "sledge-hammer" blows that caused black and blue marks on the skin. A German professor, according to R. L. Ditmars, curator, has obtained light of dazzling intensity by connecting the current to bulbs, but the flash was over in an instant, defying attempts to measure it.

Watch Cuticura Improve Your Skin. On rising and retiring gently smear the face with Cuticura Ointment. Wash off Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water. It is wonderful what Cuticura will do for poor complexions, dandruff, itching and red, rough hands.—Advertisement.

The Only One

Joyce plays golf and he prefers a solitary round with only the caddie present. He had a new boy one day recently, and played as usual.

"I fancy I play the worst game in the world," he confessed to the caddie.

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, sir," was the consoling reply. "From what the boys were saying about another gentleman who plays here, he must be worse than you are."

"What's his name?" asked the player hopefully.

And the caddie replied: "Joyce."

Helpful Advice to Overworked Women

MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN
1920 ELM ST., NEW ALBANY, IND.

DAY in and day out, week in and week out the tired, over-worked housewife and mother toils on, sweeping, dusting, cooking, cleaning and mending. Is it any wonder that after a time a weakness, such as Mrs. Chapman had, develops and the wife and mother pays a toll in physical weakness and pain for her efforts of love, the natural result of overwork?

Women who find themselves afflicted with weakness, pain, headaches, backache, nervousness, irritability and melancholia will be interested in Mrs. Chapman's letter, and should realize that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is especially adapted to overcome such conditions.

Mrs. Chapman's Letter Reads as Follows:

NEW ALBANY, IND.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a weakness which many women have from over work, and from which I suffered for quite a while. I wasn't fit to do my work and my sister advised me to take this medicine. After the first few days the pains were not so severe as they had been and after taking a few bottles I am not bothered any more. I am doing my housework every day and highly recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman suffering from female trouble. Only yesterday a friend called me on the 'phone and knowing what it did for me wanted to know what to ask for at the drug-store, as she meant to give it a trial."—MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN, 1920 Elm Street, New Albany, Indiana.

Another Case of Nervous Breakdown

MEMPHIS, TENN.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do any of my work except a little at a time and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw a little book on to my porch and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health."—MRS. O. J. HINCKLEY, 475½ E. Georgia St., Memphis, Tenn.

One bright sunshiny morn in June the sky was black and dreary as we were gazing at the moon with eyes a trifle bleary, an aphis crept into one ear and bade us look afar, and there we saw Will Ostrom out riding in his Star. But casting foolishness aside, and with an eye on duty we hereby truthfully confide Will's auto is a beauty. Without intending any harm, we're hoping every minute that Will may grab us by the arm and take us riding in it. But if he fails to take us out We'll try another ryme and Will may suffer from the gout in the good old summertime.

Philo McGee drove five miles to attend services at the M. E. Church Sunday, and Philo didn't have an auto but used a horse and buggy. The question we desire to have solved is if a fellow can drive five miles to church in a buggy, how many miles can a fellow drive to church if he has a Ford? Rev. Dellinger did not preach his sermon on Sodom and Gomorrah as a number of people who desired to hear the sermon could not attend until next Sunday when the Rev. will talk about the destruction of the cities of the plain The minister made a number of interesting statements Sunday. For one thing he asserted that he had never seen a section of country where there were so many divorced people as in Michigan. The pastor also declared that our government contained so much corruption that foreign nations had lost faith in it and that the United States was hardly a safe place in which to raise children. He also praised La Follette for defying the Republican party and Faris, the prohibition nominee. Mr. Dellinger stated the women were the back bone of the nation in a religious way. However some time ago we read statements written by Kathleen Norris, the famous author, to the effect that American women didn't have much more than a chipmunk. Of course, we don't want to cause any arguments between Kathleen and O. D. but for policy's sake we think we must agree with the latter as it is getting so these days that in politics art and religion the women are the backbone while the men are only the wishbone—thats all.

W. C. T. U. Visits Poor House

The beautiful custom of cheering the lives of those who reside at the county infirmary at Hillsdale was observed by the County W. C. T. U. on Sunday last and a very good program was carried out, members from North Adams assisting in the work. We are more than glad to announce that the inauguration of this work is strictly attended to by the ladies. Following is the program as copied from the Hillsdale Daily:

The exercises were held on the lawn opening with congregational singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds" with Miss Muriel Payne at the piano. A splendid address was given by Rev. Elizabeth M. Evans, pastor of the First Baptist church. Other numbers were duet "Swinging Little Blossoms" Ruth and Ruby Todd, Allen; reading "Schoolman's courtship" Mrs Roy Townsend, Wheatland; pantomime "The Sweet story of Old" Hazel Walworth North Adams; reading "Twilight Pastoral" Mrs Fowler, Wheatland; musical reading "When I was Young" Eunice Townsend, wheatland; piano solo Roland Ayers; reading' Hark :he Herald Angels Sing" Mrs. Laura walworth, North Adams; closing hymn, "God be with You till we meet Again," Prayer and benediction by Rev. Evans.

The forty inmates of the home were given oranges, candy and flowers.

The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. M. J. Rainey, Co. Flower Mission Superintendent.

DETROIT'S GRAND RIVIERA

Out Farmington Way—The American Home Community

The northwest Grand River district presents a vista of happiness and contentment seldom, if ever, found around a city of Detroit's size and industrial importance.

It calls to those who appreciate the environment associated with smaller communities, but with the added advantage of easy access to the places of employment of the big city.

Floral Park, Farmington

The new Grand River suburb of dynamic Detroit, Floral Park is in the very heart of the new natural development now in progress at Farmington. It is bounded by the two main thoroughfares—Grand River Avenue and Orchard Lake Road—both affording rapid transportation to all surrounding towns and Lake resorts It offers to the worker in the big city and his family, pure air, green fields, and being adjacent to Detroit's vast River Rouge Park, it offers all the elements of an ideal community, wherein the shop or office worker may rear his family establish his abode and really live

It is the junction and transfer point for the entire community.

Floral Park with its ideal natural advantages, its many improvements and home-site conveniences cannot avoid being the logical center for the great suburban community development now in progress in Floral Park, Farmington An inspection of Floral Park is decidedly to your best interests. Its advantages as a place for home-site investing will appeal to you.

The owner for whom we are selling Floral Park subdivision has always been of the opinion that Floral Park lots were priced too low, especially with the developments in that territory. During the last year, however, in order to boost sales and following our usual custom of benefit to the purchaser, we have been able to stand off any increase in price up to this time.

But when 300 lots on FloralPark are sold, prices on both residence lots and business frontage lots will advance $200 each. Up to date, 233 lots have already been sold.

This property is sold with all improvements guaranteed at purchase price.

"Leading Detroit Music Company has a fine Player Piano near North Adams, slightly used and partly paid for. Wonderful opportunity for party who will take over and pay the balance in small monthly payments. Write for full, confidential information to P. O. Box No. 471, Detroit, Michigan." 5t3

Mrs. B. P. Hewitt visited her brother George Cheever and family and nephew Ivan Ellis and wife in Detroit from Saturday until Monday. She reports George as doing very well, having partially regained his eyesight and he is still employed by the Brass Co. at a good salary. He has a splendid home in the city and the misfortune of blindness has not so seriously interfered with his welfare as was feared. Ivan Ellis is pastor of a mission in the city and he and wife who are both preparing to enter the foreign missionary field, expect to go to Los Angeles soon to begin training along that line.

Boyd Is Still in the Lead

For the second time within a year attempts to establish a newspaper in Frank Boyd's territory at River Rouge in Detroit have quashed. A former attempt had been made last fall by a former employee of a newspaper near the city but lost out because of the incompetence of the man behind the gun. This last effort was made by Pipp the editor of the renowned Pipp's Weekly of Woodward Avenue in Detroit. Pipp was formerly employed by Henry Ford on the Dearborn Independent but through some disagreement left the Independent and launched out for himself. His little pamphlet known as "Pipp's Weekly" has been circulated far and wide throughout Michigan. The public at River Rouge would not support a paper which depended solely upon real estate firms for its main dividend therefore as we said before Mr. Pipp petered out and Boyd has the field to himself as he certainly deserves. For he has worked very hard to establish a business which shows signs of becoming opulant and now that it is well grounded Brother Boyd feels he can take a breathing spell occasionally so he has sold out a half interest to one Mason, a competent newspaper man of Rouge. The firm is now Mason & Boyd, Mr. Mason taking the active management and Mr. Boyd doing the editoral and senior part of the enterprise. By the way we are sorry to learn Mrs. Boyd has again been obliged to enter the hospital. We glean most of this interesting news from Wyandotte Record of Wyandotte, Mich.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Mrs. Shaw Calls Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a God-Send to Sick Women

Cambridge, Maine.—"I suffered terribly with pains and soreness in my sides. Each month I had to go to bed, and the doctor told me I simply had to go under an operation before I could get help. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and I told my husband one day to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I took the third dose I felt better. I took it four times a day for two years, getting better all the time, and now for four years I don't have any pains. After taking the medicine for two years I had another child—a lovely baby girl now four years old—the life of our home. I do praise this medicine. It is a Godsend to women who suffer with female troubles and especially for pains at the periods. I surely was very bad once, and I know that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation." — Mrs. JOSIE M. SHAW, Route No. 1, Cambridge, Maine.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 98 out of every 100 were benefited by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Turks Must Kill Crows

To relieve the city of Constantinople and its suburbs of a destructive plague of crows the authorities are issuing free powder and shot, and every male citizen is required to present at least one dead crow to the nearest police station or pay a fine of 125 piastres.

Always present in large numbers this year these crows, or more precisely rooks, have become a pest and have done much damage. They have ravaged the truck gardens around the city and on the Prinkipos islands, those beautiful resorts in the Sea of Marmora, they have caused a water famine. The water supply of the islands is solely from cisterns, and the birds have so fouled the roofs as to make the water unpotable.

Weak and Miserable?

Is a lame, aching back keeping you miserable? Are you tortured with sharp, stabbing pains? Feel weak, tired—"all-played-out"? Then look to your kidneys, for these are common signs of kidney weakness. Cruel Old Punishment

Breaking on the wheel was a barbarous mode of capital punishment formerly in use in various countries of Europe. It was practiced in Scotland as late as 1604, in France until 1789, and in Germany until 1827. In this mode of punishment the victim was bound to a wheel, with his arms and legs extended along the spokes, and while the wheel was rapidly revolved his limbs were fractured by blows from an iron bar in the hands of the executioner. The French word "roue" is derived from this form of punishment.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Marshall—The board of supervisors, by a vote of 20 to 16 reduced the assessment of all farm property in Calhoun county 10 per cent from the assessment of last year.

Lansing—State leaders and about 90 delegates of the W. C. T. U. held a golden jubilee here recently, to celebrate the start of the organization in the state 50 years ago.

Lansing—The administrative board voted $3,000 for improvements of the Yanks' convalescent camp, at Union Lake, in Oakland county. Sheriff George Walters, of Detroit, represented the camp authorities in urging state aid.

River Rouge—The rate of taxation in River Rouge has been raised to 12 mills, an increase of one mill over last year's rate. The assessed valuation of River Rouge real estate was estimated at $23,000,000, an increase of $1,500,000 over last year.

Owosso—Clayton Thomas, prominent retired farmer, had a narrow escape from death when a small coupe he was driving was hit by an interurban car, six miles south of Owosso. The car was demolished, but Thomas escaped with a broken collar bone.

Port Huron—The board of supervisors recently authorized the appointment of a committee of three supervisors to visit the auditor-general's office at Lansing relative to returned taxes, and to devise a plan whereby the total amount of returned taxes can be reduced.

Detroit—A new method of smuggling aliens across the Detroit River was uncovered with the discovery in a Michigan Central refrigerator car of 11 men who, after they were locked up said they had paid a Windsor man from $25 to $35 each to get them into the United States.

Ann Arbor—Michigan will supply the dearth of dentists in the British colonies. Nine students from South Africa were included in the 1924 graduating class of the dental college. Immediately following their graduation they left for various points in South Africa, to establish practices.

Freesoil—A strange insect which has been working havoc among cherry trees of this vicinity has been identified by Prof. R. H. Pettit, entomologist of M. A. C., as the cherry leaf bettle. According to the professor this insect has been troublesome in northern Michigan for years but is just making its appearance this far south.

Lansing—L. T. Hands, state insurance commissioner, recently cited the Associated Employers' Reciprocal Insurance company, of Chicago, to appear to show cause why its state license should not be revoked. It is alleged that the company misrepresented its financial condition when it secured permission to do business in Michigan.

Grand Rapids—George Brockway, 16 years old, was pushed through a store window when the automobile he was cranking, apparently in gear, started, pushing him ahead of it. John Sweet, looking at jewelry in the window, escaped by jumping. Persons who ran to the spot upon hearing the crash, found the youth sitting on the window sill, unhurt.

Mt. Clemens—Construction work has been started on a new concrete bridge to span the Clinton River, on the road which connects Mt. Clemens and Pontiac. A 100-foot river channel 90 feet wide will be dredged at this point at a cost of $2,000 to permit the construction of the new bridge and removal of a dangerous curve in the road. The project, which is being financed by the State, will cost $100,000.

Lansing—The state conservation commission has adopted a resolution prohibiting of state owned motion pictures of the Kirtland Warbler and Nathan Leopold until after the trial of the Chicago youth. John Baird, director of conservation, announced sometime ago, that he would ask the commission to take such action. The resolution suggested that after the trial the portion showing Leopold be cut out.

Lansing—The sale of $3,000,000 worth of highway bonds for work in the fiscal year has been authorized by the state administrative board. Bids will be received July 8. The state administrative board has authorized Governor Grosbeck and Highway Commissioner Rogers to investigate a proposal that the Michigan avenue road, M-17, between Ann Arbor and Detroit, be made a double highway from Dearborn west to the Telegraph road. The route is now a double road from Detroit to Dearborn.

Adrian—The new assessed valuation of Lenawee county was placed at $73,010,766 by the board of supervisors. An increase of only $128,110 is represented over the taxation paid last December. The value of farm property was decreased from a year ago, by $457,220, while village and city property was increased $292,695 and the value of personal property, $292,647. Farm values, in comparison with the tax levy of a year ago, have a downward tendency, while village and city property shows a slight increase.

Manistee—Contracts have virtually all been signed by raspberry growers of the Onekama and River road regions to let the Onekama farm bureau local market their crop, which will be by far the largest in the history of the county, according to present indications, and will exceed 50,000 crates. The local growers expect to avert the disaster which would otherwise occur if they should dump their tremendous crop into the Milwaukee and Chicago markets as in past years without any regard for the amount the market is able to handle.

Kalamazoo—At the twentieth annual commencement of Western State Normal school, 567 students received degrees, the largest class in the history of the school.

Monroe—By a vote of 175 to 63, taxpayers here decided to bond the city for $58,000 to erect and furnish an addition to the Lincoln school building in the Fourth precinct. Many women voted.

Detroit—While he was trying to live up to a "dare" by swimming from the Belle Isle bridge to a canoe house, Chester Halstead, 18 years old, was seized with cramps and drowned before a rescuer could reach him.

Flint—Gift of $100,000 by C. S. Mott, vice-president of the General Motors Corporation to the building fund of the Young Women's Christian Association, as a memorial to his wife who was killed recently in a fall from a window of her bedroom, while ill, was recently announced.

Houghton—Struck by a speeding motorist while carrying his baby son in his arms, Peter Mitchell, 36, an Indian, was instantly killed while the child was thrown clear and miraculously escaped unhurt. Other Indians at the Indian mission at Assinins gave chase but the speeder escaped.

Detroit—Edsel B. Ford Monday refused a check for $89,000 tendered to him by the insurance company for settlement growing out of the theft of valuable gems taken from the Ford home last week. Mr. Ford said that he preferred to wait until the insurance company had a chance to recover the jewelry.

Port Huron—Albert McMahon, the 17-year-old youth who confessed to setting fire to several barns in Riley Township, has been placed on probation by Judge Harvey Tappan. The youth in his confession said he fired the barns for the excitement of seeing them burn. In one fire several head of valuable cattle were killed.

Port Huron—The only casualty attributed to the electrical and wind storm recently was reported in the death of Harvey Hall, 10 years old, who was injured fatally when blown from the top of a sand wagon and crushed beneath the wheels. Two brothers riding with him were also swept from the wagon but escaped injury.

Detroit — Although the adjusted compensation applications have been received by the Service Central bureau and the Wayne County Council branch of the American Legion, only applications can be accepted at this juncture by these organizations, from disabled ex-service men or dependents of the deceased, it has been announced.

Ironwood—Fearing that a fallen electric transmission wire was endangering members of the family with whom he was boarding, Arcangelo Laguila, 43 years old, attempted to pick it up and was electrocuted. The wire fell when a motorist ran his automobile into a pole. Another man standing near Laguila at the time narrowly escaped death.

Ann Arbor—Scholastic failure ended college careers for 206 University of Michigan literary students when the grades were compiled for the final summary by Dr. Arthur G. Hall, registrar. This total is divided into two groups, 175 of whom were sent home and 31 of whom were notified that they will not be accepted again as students at Michigan. This list is from a group of 5,000 students.

Port Huron—The wreck of the steamer Tampa which has been berthed in Belle River at Marine City for the last 10 years was struck by lightning not long ago. The hull burned to the water's edge. Twelve years ago the Tampa was sunk in the Detroit River opposite Walkerville while in collision with the steamer John W. Gates. The steamer was in commission for 25 years and at one time was the flagship of the Whitney fleet of Detroit.

Highland Park—Another step toward a new public library was taken by Highland Park, when the city council approved a contract with New York architects for the submitting of plans and specifications for the library, which will occupy the present building site on Woodward avenue, between Massachusetts and Rhode Island avenues. The proposed structure is to cost $500,000. A bond issue for that amount was approved by the people several months ago.

Detroit—Detroit's City tax rate for the fiscal year will be $20.96529809 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation, according to final figures announced Saturday by the Board of Assessors. As compared with the 1923-24 tax rate, $22.468898, the new rate is $1.5036 less on each $1,000 of the new total assessed valuation, $2,455,989,000, which is a total saving to taxpayers of $3,692,830.06. The new assessed valuation is $345,999,590 greater than the 1923-24 assessment, an increase of approximately 14 per cent.

Lansing—Lansing's 1924 tax rate averages seven cents higher for each $1,000 than that of last year, figures published by the city comptroller here show. The average tax rate that property owners will pay this summer is $8.54 per $1,000, while it was $8.47 last year. The general city tax is $8.04, but the ward highway taxes raises it to $8.54. The total assessed valuation of the city was set at $144,999,085, an increase of about $14,000,000 over that of last year. The budget of $1,159,799.88 is 10 per cent higher than last year.

Pontiac — Wholesale condemnation proceedings in connection with the "Wider Woodward" plan have been commenced in Oakland county probate court by Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, against owners of property along the Pontiac-Detroit road. He has petitioned for the appointment of three commissioners to hear the condemnation matter. Hearings will be held July 21 regarding the advisability of appointment of the commissioners. Defendants include Adolph Sloman, of Detroit, and the Michelson Land & Home Co.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democratic Convention War of Fighting Factions and Mad Tumult.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

WHEN the Democratic national convention, which opened Tuesday in Madison Square Garden, New York city, adjourned Thursday evening to Friday morning the net results were these: Two keynote speeches; many tumultuous demonstrations; a platform committee desperately struggling with seemingly insuperable complications, and an apparent deadlock between the forces of McAdoo and Smith, with favorite sons in plenty and going strong. Of the rival McAdoo and Smith demonstrations the New Yorker staged the longer and noisier. In the only test vote—that Thursday afternoon on the question of adjourning to Thursday night or Friday morning—the Smith forces won by a vote of 555½ to 513. The convention decided to stick to the two-thirds rule—which may or may not have been a victory for Smith. There are 1,098 delegates; necessary to nominate, 732. Each state is a law unto itself as to the unit rule.

As to the platform the situation was this: The subcommittee was still at work on a draft to be submitted to the full committee. This draft contained alternative planks on several controversial subjects, including the League of Nations, the Ku Klux Klan and prohibition. It was hoped to have the platform ready for the convention sometime Friday. There was every prospect of a fight on the floor over the League of Nations and Klan planks.

Those who had been placed in nomination were: Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, William Gibbs McAdoo of California, Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Willard Saulsbury, former senator from Delaware; David F. Houston, cabinet officer in the Wilson administration; Samuel M. Ralston, former governor of Indiana; Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Gov. Jonathan M. Davis of Kansas, Senator Woodbridge N. Ferris of Michigan.

THE feature of Tuesday, the opening day, was the address of Senator Pat (Byron Patton) Harrison of Mississippi, temporary chairman and official keynoter. In congressional life he is "chief bear-baiter" of the Republicans—a party duty which he cheerfully performs with his tongue in his cheek. But nothing like that here. His tongue was hung in the middle with both ends working. He lambasted. He flayed. He blistered. He charged the Republicans with responsibility for pretty nearly all the evils of the day, except the World war and the foot-and-mouth disease. Exhausted by his own eloquence, he brought in an artful and eloquent reference to Woodrow Wilson and sat down to rest and receive congratulations for 13 minutes by the watch while the vast assemblage made demonstration of regard for the dead leader. Then he brought his keynote to a brass-band close.

Wednesday Thomas J. Walsh, United States senator from Montana, tireless watcher beside the oil well of Teapot Dome and a dark horse with many admirers, took command of the convention as permanent chairman and made the second keynote speech. The committee on platform not being ready to report—for many and divers reasons—Chairman Walsh started the nominations.

Alabama nominated Senator Oscar W. Underwood, its spokesman being Forney Johnston of Brimingham. Underwood is the original anti-Klan man. Johnston led artfully up to a climax where he named the Ku Klux Klan right out in meeting. A large part of the convention thereupon went plumb crazy in a long, riotous anti-Klan demonstration marked by parades and fist fights. Its significance was that it was spontaneous and not staged.

Arkansas nominated Senator Joseph T. Robinson through Gov. Charles T. Brough.

THEN came California and McAdoo. Former Senator James D. Phelan (1915-21), chosen because he is a Roman Catholic, made the nomination while the great crowd got set for the demonstration to follow. It started at 3:30 with staged and boosted accessories and spontaneous fist fights—it was in part a pro-Klan demonstration. At 4:35 it was still going strong with the Smith forces trying to drown out the McAdoo shouters and the band inaudible. Then George Brennan of Illinois, in command of the anti-McAdoo forces, caught the eye of Chairman Walsh, and moved to adjourn. Walsh declared it carried without consulting the milling and shouting crowd.

Thursday was Smith day, Connecticut yielding to New York. Four years ago a vigorous young man seconded the nomination of Smith at San Francisco and won for himself the vice presidential nomination. Thursday this same young man, Franklin D. Roosevelt, manager of the Smith campaign, fighting against the inroads of infantile paralysis, had virtually to be carried to the platform to make the nomination. The convention paid him a fine personal tribute. The Smith demonstration which followed lasted from 12:30 to 1:55 and was the wildest and noisiest ever staged in a national convention. The McAdoo forces said it at least explained the puzzle of the 1924 convention, "Who got the tickets?"

HARLAN F. STONE, the new attorney general of the United States, filed suit Wednesday in the United States District court in Chicago, charging the Standard Oil companies of eight states and 44 other oil companies with violation of the anti-trust act. Yes; this is the Sherman anti-trust act and the Standard Oil company of 1911, when Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis said "Guilty" and imposed a fine of $29,000,000. The petition is aimed primarily at the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, parent organization of the series of corporations into which the old company was split, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana (covering the 15 Central states); the Texas company, the Gasoline Products company and the Standard Development company.

The other interests named in the bill, including the Standard Oil companies of California, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, New York and Ohio, are termed "secondary defendants" and are concerned as holders of contracts with the five "primary defendants."

Specifically, the charges allege that the defendants are "engaged in a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states and with foreign nations in gasoline, kerosene and other hydrocarbon products."

UNITED STATES Ambassador Kellogg at London was instructed Wednesday from Washington to attend the allied conference of premiers to be held July 16 in London to discuss execution of the Dawes plan. The statement given out at the White House was as follows:

"It is the desire of the administration that the Dawes plan should be put into effect as speedily as possible. This is the first essential step to economic recovery abroad in which this country is vitally interested. It is with this in view that in response to the invitation extended by Prime Minister MacDonald, instructions have been given to Ambassador Kellogg to attend the conference in London on July 16 for the purpose of dealing with such matters as affect the interests of the United States, and otherwise for purposes of information. Colonel Logan will go to London to assist the ambassador."

It is now expected that in attendance will be Premier MacDonald of Great Britain, Premier Herriot of France, Premier Theunis of Belgium, Premier Mussolini of Italy and Baron Hayashi, Japanese ambassador to the Court of St. James.

LIEUT. RUSSELL MAUGHAN, United States army aviator, flew from New York to San Francisco Monday in 21 hours and 48 minutes. Seventy-two years ago Ezra Meeker crossed the continent in five months—and is still alive and telling about his record journey.

So the span of a single life covers the transportation development of America from the ox team and covered wagon at two miles an hour to the airplane at 156 miles. In between are the stage coach, pony express, railroad and the march of the American people across the continent.

Maughan, in accomplishing the seemingly impossible, won fame for himself and prestige for the air service and for his country. His flight is epochal, from both military and commercial viewpoints. Incidentally, a transcontinental all-night air-mail service goes into effect next Tuesday.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy, whose speedy downfall had been predicted by his opponents as the result of the abduction and murder of Socialist Matteotti, is today more than ever his country's national hero. Incidentally he confounded the prophets and set all diplomatic Europe agape by his magnificent gift to the Italian people. In an epochal address before the senate Tuesday, confirmed by an address Wednesday to the Fascisti majority in the lower house, he promised to reform the Fascist government and to return to constitutional parliamentary government. He promised this:

"First, I will cause the institution of parliament to function regularly and nobly as an organ of legislative power, restoring to it its capacity and its prestige.

"Second, I will regularize under the constitution the situation of the national militia.

"Third, I will repress the superimposed illegalisms in the organization of the Fascist party.

Even the Socialists do not doubt Mussolini's sincerity and good faith. By giving up the dictatorship he is apparently more powerful than ever.

GEN. JAMES BARRY HERTZOG Tuesday accepted the premiership of the Union of South Africa, succeeding Premier Jan Christian Smuts, resigned. Smuts, soldier-statesman, reckoned in other parts of the British empire as one of the greatest figures of his time, is the champion of the policy of strict allegiance to the British home government. Hertzog, the Nationalist-Labor leader, is champion of the movement of the South African party to establish an independent Dutch-governed republic. The recent election campaign was fought on this issue. The result was a substantial majority in parliament for the South African party. Thus the first avowedly republican government in the British empire will soon be in existence. It is apparently a second blow at the principle of imperial unity. It will be remembered that Premier King of Canada declined to submit to parliament the treaty made by Great Britain with Turkey—the so-called Lausanne treaty—on the ground that Canada had no share in making it.

BRIG. GEN. CHARLES G. DAWES, Republican candidate for vice president, will have his first conference with President Coolidge Tuesday. He and Mrs. Dawes will be guests at the White House for several days. Chairman William M. Butler of the Republican national committee and other leaders will attend the conference. At an Association of Commerce meeting before leaving Chicago General Dawes said that he would make no speeches until the campaign opened, when he would do "his best." Presumably "Hell Maria" Dawes can be relied upon to enliven the campaign.

Chairman Butler Thursday in New York began to arrange for the opening of eastern headquarters for the Republican campaign. He said the Coolidge clubs of the country would be organized and centralized in a bureau at New York, as an adjunct to the campaign.

The Democrats are "chortling with glee" over an alleged discovery in connection with the appointment of William Hodges, a Denver lawyer, as treasurer of the Republican national committee. They expect to link up Republican funds with Wall street through the fact that Hodges was a classmate at Columbia law school with Dwight Morrow, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., who was a classmate of President Coolidge at Amherst.

Dame Fashion's Frown Affects the Red Man

Cass Lake, Minn.—Dame Fashion who, ever since the Indians relinquished their land, has smiled upon the red men, making their characteristic creations popular with the white brethren, now is frowning upon the offerings of the dexterous tribesmen.

Dr. W. B. Heagarty, superintendent of the Ojibway Sales agency, says the Indian's contributions to curio collections such as beaded things, blankets, lace handkerchiefs and miniature birch-bark canoes, must be revolutionized to further capitalize the modern white man's passion for novelties.

The superintendent blames fashion alone for the complicated situation which the agency, promoted by the Episcopal diocese of Duluth, now is attempting to solve by teaching its Indian proteges that, to continue in the bloodless fight against the high cost of living, they must cater to the more or less fantastic whims bestowed by custom upon their white neighbors.

In years past, according to Doctor Heagerty, the Indian, or rather his squaw, found a ready market for the waste-paper baskets, work baskets, miniature canoes and other trinkets which they made with their own hands. But now fashion decrees that it is no longer correct to have these curios around the house, so sales have fallen to virtually nothing.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best-- Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Women Make Better Listeners Than Men

About the worst lecture audience one can find is an audience made up of the inhabitants of the average medium-sized industrial city. The mark of the machine is on such people. Their spontaneity is withered, their originality killed.

Their faces are burdened with the heavy dullness engendered by the monotony of the occupations to which they are tied. Subtleties of argument are wasted on them and they are impervious to all humor except the slapstick kind.

An agricultural audience is superior to an industrial one in intelligence, in sympathy, in tolerance, in every quality which a lecturer values in an audience. And most of the 6,000 or 8,000 towns which every year are visited by lecturers are agricultural towns.

There is, however, one audience better than an assemblage of farmers and their wives, and that is the audience provided by the average social or literary club. When it is a woman's club this is, indeed, the best audience in America. It is distinctly superior, for instance, to the average men's club for its capacity of sustained interest in a serious subject.

Radio in the Jungle

The railways of Burma, India, are reported to have adopted a method of radio communication to replace the ordinary telegraph in regions where the thick growth of the jungle and the many rivers make cable work difficult. Successful tests have been carried out between Rangoon and Bassein. Engineers in London predict that this experiment presages a general use of radio for railway and survey work in tropical countries.

She Was

A Lyons township farmer brought a load of produce to Ionia the other day and sold it. Thought he, "I will surprise my wife." He bought a suit of clothes, a hat and a pair of shoes and put them under the seat. On his way home he drove down to Redemsky's park and halting his team on the banks of the Grand he got out, took off his old clothes and threw them into the stream. Then he looked under the seat for his new outfit. They were gone! Finally he got back in the wagon and said: "Giddap, Maud, we,ll surprise her anyhow."

Announce Feeding Results At M. A. C.

Results of a six months' feeding experiment with steers were announced by the animal husbandry department at the M. A. C. last week.

Three lots of ten steers each, weighing 460 pounds per head, were put on experiment last December, the test ending June 15. The thirty head were then sold on the Detroit market, topping the market for the week at a figure of $10.25 per cwt.

Lot No. 1 in the experiment was fed on a self feeder of grain after the end of thirty days, with silage and oilmeal twice per day, and alfalfa in the rack. Lot No. 2 received a limited feed of grain, with oilmeal, silage and alfalfa; while Lot No. 3 received the same ration as lot No. 2 except that they received grain insead of oilmeal.

Lot No. 1 showed a profit of $4.83 per steer; lot No. 2 earned $2.04 per steer; and lot No. 3 $3.66 per steer, according to the careful cost sheets kept throughout the experiment.

State Club Champs To Camp At M. A. C.

Two hundred and fifty boys and girls club champions, gathered from 30 different counties of the lower peninsula of the state, will meet at the M. A. C. from July 7 to 11 for the sixth annual Boys and Girls Club Week.

Winners of county and state championships during the past year are eligible to attend the camp, which is being planned by R. A. Turner, state leader, and his staff of assistant leaders.

The work of the week will include both entertainment features and a schedule of class work. Classes in livestock, farm crops, poultry, farm carpentry, food study, canning and clothing club work will be held each morning, with the recreation programs in the afternoon. A big banquet tendered by the state board of agriculture and trip to the state capitol at Lansing will be features. The boys and girls will be housed in college dormitories during their stay on the M. A. C. campus.

Burning of Lights Will Cure Overcharging Load

Many motorists in driving along the road casually in the daytime have wondered why they would pass so many cars with the headlights turned on full. There is always an explanation for everything.

In touring especially at speed, the battery is liable to be overcharged. This will cause the battery to heat, which is anything but good for it. The active material in the plates loosens and falls to the bottom of the cells, causing the battery to operate at reduced efficiency. Although practically every car's electrical system is fitted with an automatic cutout to prevent such overheating, it is often the cas that this device does not stand guard over the battery the way it should.

The safe way is, of course, to burn the lights—at least part of the time—when on a long drive. This helps to take the load off the battery and will prevent it overheating.

The Klan In Politics

Some one has remarked that the Klansters would eventually show up in the presidential nominations, and they were right. The Klan has put up about the worst "show" in little old "Nu Yawk" that this country has ever been obsessed with. Dante's Inferno is quite tame in comparison but has anybody been benefitted?

Down at Cleveland the Republicans held a convention comparatively quiet: they met and mentioned a few possibilities but they got right down to business and nominated their men at once without any flap-doodle work, while the long-haired Colonels are at it going on the second week and God only knows what the outcome will be. Colonel Bryan of Florida seems to be there with his oratory (which is about all he produces) McAdoo and Smith continue to see-saw on the gubernational teeter board, the Klansters bump up against everybody and everything. Once in a while for variety, someone attempts to raise the good old stars and stripes over a bunch of would-bes, then again some trembly ones want to scoot under the Imperial emblem of the Ku Klux and of course the result is always the same in hoodlum assemblages—it depends upon who has the best jiu jitsu.

The Democratic National Convention as far as we can see, has been up to date one of the worst parodies on politics the Nation has ever known, and still the foolish rumpus goes on. Nobody is getting anywhere, and most of the delegates have fell asleep or gone out for a drink at this writing. If the Convention had been wise enough to put the forty-rod boot to the K. K. K. right at the opening session and lifted it clean over the Woolworth Building most of the wrangling would have been avoided. However, outside of the terrific expense, there is not much damage, since the matter of the next term occupant of the White House was definitely settled some time ago among the real politicians and the people.

The whole list of Democratic possibilities in New York as compared with the present Commander-in-Chief of the American government look like Coxey's army. Jimmie Cox of Ohio would be voted out quicker than he was before; McAdoo is a good man but not strong enough; Al Smith could not get the temperance vote; Carter Glass would fall down with the great common people, and so it goes. The indications point strongly to a "dark horse" candidate and if the Democrats should prove as keen in their management as they have been at other times, there might still be a hope of winning out.

The Health Car

The health car of the Michigan Tuberculosis association has started upon its long summer tour of the rural districts of the state. Each year this trip is made, spreadidg the gospel of clean healthy living through the more isolated sections.

For at least three months out of the year the lecturer practices what he preaches. He carries a complete camping outfit and spends his nights along the road wherever he cares to stop. He does his own cooking on the small stove and oven. As part of the lecture equipment, the truck carries a portable moving picture machine which throws the movies onto a screen which may be hung between trees or on the side of a barn. Lantern slides are also used to illustrate the talks. The talks and pictures are always shown out of doors unless the weather man makes it too unpleasant.

This summer trip is part of the educational program of the anti tuberculosis work in the state. The lecturer strips the disease of much of its mystery showing how it may be prevented and what is necessary in attempting a cure.

Politics Are Bad For Youngsters

If you ever noticed you will find that two-thirds of the men who are elected to any offices are those whose forte in life has been a kind of mind your own business attitude. Nary a one of these fellows has ever offended any person whatsoever with radicaiism of any kind; he has been just an easy going good fellow always ready to stand up and yell his head off for any kind of public improvements which seemed to hit the vast majority as favorable.

If there was a scandal in the community he knows absolutely nothing about the salacious details. If you should ask such a one if this or that was going on the chances would be you could learn nothing because it would be the first time he had heard of it. At the same time if his wife happened to be garrulous she might have leaked out to a neighbor woman what had been told her about this same scandal by her hubby, and the whole business would be complete—even little details you had never dreamed of. All these characteristics and many more go into the melting pot to make a good politician or more properly a successful one. And we will say most of these virtues are commendable, but the kind of man who wins out for office is not always as nice as he seems.

The other day we learned of a certain county clerk in an adjoining county who went into office with a whoop and a hurrah, in fact he cleaned up such a majority over the other fellows that they simply died on first—and in less than six months this self same successful politician was found to have appropriated the public funds and did other misdemeanors in office which would have sent a Tamany politician to the bow wows. He happened to be a gambler—and incidentally a high roller—and could not resist the temptations before him to graft. There is another prominent symptom of this kind of a politician after he has flirted with politics a few times and generally been successful. He gets to believe the game belongs to him anyhow, then if at some importune time he is beaten or by some unfortunate turn of the wheel of destiny he is whipped out of the running; mark me—that man is embittered for life. He simply never recovers. What was his is now some one else's, and he figures he has been defrauded by the voters

Therefore we repeat, it is bad business for a young man who is starting in life to get into politics. Some one bobs up to remark "Well, we have got to have some real good men for offices, anyhow" Yes, this is true—we have got a vacancy always in the list of good men—they are scarce, but judging by what a few years of office hoiding does to the majority—it were better not to demoralize our best young blood.

It is perfectly natural for every young man in the community who amounts to anything to want office. He calculates the holding of public trust makes him a respected and reliable citizen—a fact which does not always work out in practice, as in the case of the county clerk. Office holding may make or it may break a young man's character then God pity the great common people if such failures get elected.

This paper has always taken the grounds that the subject of political aspiration is a good one to ridicule and thereby we have made enemies by the score. But we have taken this stand as we believe for the public good of the community, and have never seen any reason for changing our views.

The recent oil investigations at Washington have shown up politics little and big to most anyone's satisfaction. The men who have been the targets for most of this public disgrace, are without doubt as good or better than most of the investigators but by a chance turn of the wheel of fortune they got in the lime light and shrewd gangsters on both sides of the fence who had axes to grind simply took the opportunity coming as it did just before presidential election, to demonstrate something to the voters. Thus it is; thus it will continue to be—the height or depth of office cuts litt'e figure. From the supervisorship of a township to the President of the United States is a long jump—but they are all in the same category.

In view of this, perhaps when we see a motorist going along in the daytime with his lights burning we can consider that he is a wise driver instead of a careless individual who has forgotten to turn off the illumination the night before.

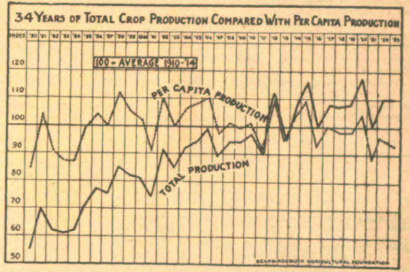
During 1923 the American farmer carried over $16,064,000,000 worth of grains and live stock, dairy and poultry products, fruits and vegetables from the farm to the market. The total value of the nation's farm output was $146,000,000 more than the estimated value for 1922 and over $6,169,000,000 more than the value of the farm products in 1914.

In 1921 and 1922 the value of farm products was lower than any year since 1916, when the total was $13,406,000,000. With the entrance of the United States into the World war, prices for farm crops almost doubled in value. In 1917 the total value of farm products was $19,331,000,000, an increase of $5,925,000,000 over the previous year. In 1918 the value had reached $22,480,000,000 and in 1919 it was estimated at $23,787,000,000. In 1920 the total value of farm products decreased in the one year more than $5,459,000,000. In 1921 there was a still greater reduction, the total value having dropped to $12,402,000,000, the lowest since 1915. Since 1921 values have been working their way back to normal

Of this year's crop more than $2,000,000,000 worth were marketed by the farmer's own business organizations at the actual cost of handling. Reports from 2,600 grain co-operatives show business totalling $490,000,000; 1,841 dairy products organizations did a business of $300,000,000; 1,182 live stock shipping associations, $280,000,000; 78 cotton co-operatives, $100,000,000 and 14 tobacco organizations, $132,000,000. Only 8,313 of the 10,300 organizations have reported, of which 90 per cent were primarily engaged in selling farm products.

Farm Production Falling Off

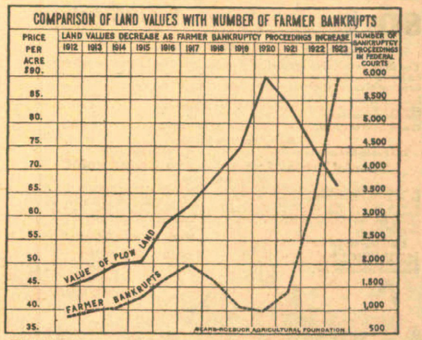


Population is gaining on crop production, according to a study made over a period of thirty-four years by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, based on figures of the United States Department of Agriculture. The accompanying chart shows crop production per capita is falling.

Taking the average of 1910 as 100, total crop production in the last three years averaged 106.3. Owing to the growth of population, per capita production has been only 92.3 when 100 represents the 1910-1914 average.

The chart shows index numbers of both total and per capita production of crops from 1890 to 1923. The production record is based on the total yield of 10 crops—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, hay, tobacco and cotton, which include more than 95 per cent of the total acreage of all crops. Since yields are expressed in various units, bushels, bales, tons and pounds, the crops are combined by applying a constant average price to the yearly production of each crop.

The Future of Farm Land Values



When farmers are making money on their crops the value of plow land runs high and bankruptcies are few. Reverse the situation and the bankruptcy line takes a straight upward turn. That's what is happening now. Farmer bankruptcies are on the increase, land values are sliding down the scale due to the slump of agricultural prices since the war.

What does the future hold for farm land owners? Is this the time to buy or sell?

The Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, after completing a survey of land values covering a period of sixty years, predicts that high land values are coming back and that within a decade farm land prices will again be on the climb.

From the days of the Civil war to around 1900 farm land values showed little change. Land was considered a safe investment. Beginning in 1900 values began to rise; by 1910 the acre price had doubled. Still land continued to rise chiefly because of the advance in the prices of farm products.

The war brought higher prices for farm products, crop values increased. The result was a land boom. By 1920 the average price of land per acre was $90, $30 higher than in 1917 at the opening of the war. Farm bankruptcies dropped from 2,000 in 1917 to 1,000 in 1919.

During the prosperity period of the war many farms were bought. During the land boom it is estimated that 10 per cent of the country's farms changed hands. Following the war the collapse in prices of grains and live stock sent land values tumbling for the first time in twenty-five years. Average plow land decreased in value from an average of $90 per acre in 1920 to $65 in 1923. Crop values per acre fell from $36 in 1919 to $15 in 1921. During the past two years there has been a gradual increase, the average for 1922 being $20 and last year the average rising to $22. Farmer bankruptcy proceedings in the federal courts jumped from 1,000 in 1920 to 6,000 in 1923. More than 8½ per cent of the land owners in 15 corn and wheat producing states in the upper Mississippi valley lost their farms.

In twenty-five years the United States should be producing on a domestic basis in practically everything, unless production makes material increases. People are moving from the land. Then the farm-to-city movement will reverse itself. Land values will increase with the price levels. Bankruptcies will decrease with the rise in land values. The present tendency in prices is down. They may continue down for a decade. During this time land prices may sag considerably. But with a return of production prices of farm land will go up.

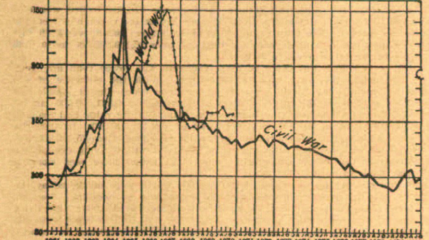
Outlook for Farm Prices



WHOLESALE PRICES DURING THE CIVIL WAR AND WORLD WAR PERIODS (FOR THE CIVIL WAR 1856 TO 1860 = 100, AND FOR THE WORLD WAR 1910 TO 1914 = 100)

Will prices go up or down, or remain stationary during the next decade? If you knew the answer to that question and knew how to take advantage of the situation, it would mean money in your pocket, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

Dr. G. F. Warren, agricultural economist of Cornell university, has collected evidence on the price trend to be expected. He finds prices are acting in almost exactly the same way they did following the Civil war. The price level following the Civil war continued to fall for 13 years. Dr. Warren believes price levels in the United States will again act in this way.

The present huge supply of gold has much to do with the situation. Great Britain alone has sent to the United States since the beginning of the war more than $1,800,000,000 worth of gold—nearly a quarter of all the gold money in the world. Before long, Dr. Warren thinks, Europe will take her gold back. Then prices will go down.

Bootlegger Rebellion Against American Constitution

The first rebellion against the present form of the United States Government was a whisky rebellion. The first excise tax on whisky was resisted to such a degree that President Washington was compelled to order out the troops. Meanwhile the rebels had pulled down the American flag, fired on United States officials, on Federal buildings driven the revenue officers into hiding, and subjected some of them to the severest brutalities. Through out our history the liquor traffic has continued its career of disregard for law. Every enactment for its regulation and control has encountered its defiance and its contempt, whether the enactment related to sales to boys and girls, sales to drunkards, to opening and closing hours, to the unscreening of window and doors, to forbidden association with the gambling hell and the brothel, the white-slave trade, or its elimination from townships, precincts, counties, and even States. Its inherent lawlessness made it the corrupter of governments and courts Between it and a condition of order and decency there was an impassable gulf. Recognizing that the conflict with it was a struggle between a higher and a lower plane of existence—that this nation could not maintain the basic ideal of a Christian Republic with the liquor traffic legalized anywhere within its limits—that as long as the traffic had a legal status in any State it would become a menance to the sections that had endeavored to destroy it by local ordinance, the American people through the due and solemn process laid down by the Constitution for its own amend ment made the liquor traffic an outlaw on every foot of American soil. True to its felonious nature a remnant of the traffic continues to defy and violate both the Constitution and the law.

The operations of this remnant, so small in comparison with the quantities of intoxicants produced and sold in the day of the legalized distilleries, breweries and saloons as to be relatively insignificant, receive such exaggerated notice in the daily press as to blind many people to the true situation. The foreign visitor whose knowledge of the United States is derived from a sojourn in a few wet cities, the smoking rooms of the Pullmans, from the dinner of the rich, the editorals and headlines of certain prominent dailies whose owners and writers still mistake appetite for liberty, from embassies and legations, perhaps, whose officials have no consideration or regard for the beliefs and standards of the vast majority of the American people when they utilize the extraterritorial privilege to load their lockers and their tables with an article our laws have pronounced inimical to the race; the foreign visitor, I say, is frequently the victim of a deluded understanding as to the effect of prohibition in the United States. The bootlegger's rebellion against the American Constitution and the American flag is always in progress because the traffic in poisonous drugs, whether alcohol or opium, is a natural rebel against all that is decent, uplifting, just, and right. The chief encouragement and the principal recruiting ground for this mutiny against law and order may be found in certain metropolitan sections of our country where prohibition was never accepted in principal by the dominant elements and where these elements have not yet been willing to subordinate their opinions to the will of the American people as embodied in the Constitution and the law. From these sections volleys of verbial and printed denunciations have been constantly discharged against prohibition and the efforts of the American people to enforce it. Propagandist endeavors are always under way to create the impression that the entire prohibition enforcement machinery has collapsed and that prohibition is a failure. The social revelers, the wealthy entertainers, the circles of the privileged and predatory rich, their imitators, worshipers and hangers-on form but another wing of the bootleg army. They can never shake the opposition of the American people to the liquor traffic, but they can by their unfair and flippant attacks on prohibition imperial the lives of enforcement officers by making the outlaws more vicious and more determined, readier to shoot, quicker to kill. The society matron who feels that she must circulate cocktails among her guests little realizes that not only may she send some soul to hell about her board but may also by the encouragement her patronage gives to an illegal traffic, send a bullet into the heart of another official sworn to uphold the law and to apprehend its violators.

Let bootleggers, moonshiners and all other criminals be given to understand that the American Congress and the American people will sustain and applaud our officers in enforcement of the law.

Hay Day To Feature M. A. C. Farm Meeting

The first "Hay Day" of its kind ever held in Michigan, and probably the first in the entire country, will feature the big summer farmers meeting at M. A. C. on August 1, it was announced here this week.

The best and cheapest methods of modern hay making will be shown in operation, with the most modern machinery in use. The demonstration will be made on a 25 acre field of alfalfa on the college farm. Leading manufacturers of mowers, rakes hay loading machinery, etc., are invited to take part, each being given an equal area of land. Both horse and tractor power will be in operation. The new Dain system of making hay will be shown in operation.

A special "Old Timers Scythe Contest", with Michigan pioneers competing for honors in skill at the hand methods of hay making, will be a big feature of the hay day program. State farmers who used the scythe in their younger days in the hay field will rally from all points of the state to show the present generation their old time skill.

As a result of the scythe contest the newest of machinery will be in use alongside the methods which were in vogue when Michigan was first settled.

The hay day program will be one feature of the seventh annual Farmers Day at the college. A big afternoon meeting, special exhibits, and numerous entertainment features will combine to provide a full schedule for the day's program. More than 5,000 Michigan farmers and their families are expected to attend.

Veterinarians Hold State Meet At M. A. C.

Nearly two hundred veterinarians of the state gathered at the M. A. C. from June 24 to 26 for the forty second annual meeting of the state Veterinary Medical Association.

Talks by various state and national authorities on veterinary subjects were given during the three day conference, with round table discussion led by officers of the association. The staff of the veterinary college at M. A. C. served as hosts for the gathering.

New officers elected for the coming year are: H. P. Hoskins, Detroit, president; F. E. Stiles, Battle Creek, vice president; W. E. Coomer, Bay City, second vice president; L. A. Wileden, Mason, third vice president E. K. Sales, East Lansing, secretary and treasurer.

Valuable Points For Caring for New Auto

When your new car is delivered remember that all working parts are new, fitted very tightly, and should be handled slowly until the car is run several hundred miles. It is advisable to drive slowly and carefully for the first 500 miles, giving such parts as motor bearings, pistons and various other parts fitted tightly a chance to wear in somewhat.

See that your car has been gone over thoroughly for oil and grease, particularly the motor, transmission rear axle and all grease cups. The radiator should be flushed out and filled with clean water, as sediments of solder or other foreign matter sometimes remain in new radiators and may work into water pump or other working parts, causing damage.

Have the storage battery examined to note that same is properly charged and full enough of distilled water. Often new cars remain in storage before delivery is made, which would cause battery to run low from standing. If battery is used in this weakened condition it often happens the entire battery is ruined.

Near King's Ferry in the Highlands on the Hudson they spent a night in the camp of the army under Putnam. There they heard the first note of discontent with the work of their beloved Washington. It came from the lips of one Colonel Burley of a Connecticut regiment. The commander in chief had lost Newport, New York and Philadelphia and been defeated on Long Island and in two pitched battles on ground of his own choosing at Brandywine and Germantown.

The two scouts were angry.

It had been a cold, wet afternoon and they, with others, were drying themselves around a big, open fire of logs in front of the camp post office.

Solomon was quick to answer the complaint of Burley.

"He's allus been fightin' a bigger force o' well-trained, well-paid men that had plenty to eat an' drink an' wear. An' he's fit 'em with jest a shoe string o' an army. When it come to him, it didn't know nothin' but how to shoot an' dig a hole in the ground. The men wouldn't enlist fer more'n six months an' as soon as they'd learnt suthin,' they put fer hum. An' with that kind o' an army, he druv the British out o' Boston. With a leetle bunch o' 5,000 unpaid, barefoot, ragged-backed devils, he druv the British out o' Jersey an' they had 12,000 men in that neighborhood. He's had to dodge eround an' has kep' his army from bein' et up, hide, horns an' taller, by the power o' his brain. He's managed to take keer o' himself down thar in Jersey an' Pennsylvaney with the British on all sides o' him, while the best fighters he had come up here to help Gates. I don't see how he could 'a' done it—d—n if I do—without the help o' God."

"Gates is a real general," Burley said. "Washington don't amount to a hill o' beans."

Solomon turned quickly and advanced upon Burley.

"I didn't 'spect to find an enemy o' my kentry in this 'ere camp," he said in a quiet tone. "Ye got to take that back, mister an' do it prompt, er ye're goin' to be all mussed up."

"Ye could see the ha'r begin to brustle under his coat," Solomon was wont to say of Burley, in speaking of that moment. "He stepped up clus an' growled an' showed his teeth an' then he begun to git rooined."

Burley had kept a public house for sailors at New Haven and had had the reputation of being a bad man in a quarrel. Of just what happened there is a full account in a little army journal of that time called the Camp Gazette. Burley aimed a blow at Solomon with his fist. Then as Solomon used to put it, "the water bu'st through the dam." It was his way of describing the swift and decisive action which was crowded into the next minute. He seized Burley and hurled him to the ground. With one hand on the nape of his neck and the other on the seat of his trousers, Solomon lifted his enemy above his head and quoited him over the tent top.

Burley picked himself up and having lost his head drew his hanger, and, like a mad bull, rushed at Solomon. Suddenly he found his way barred by Jack.

"Would you try to run a man through before he can draw?" the latter asked.

Solomon's old sword flashed out of its scabbard.

"Let him come on," he shouted. "I'm more to hum with a hanger than I be with good vittles."

Of all the words on record from the lips of this man, these are the most immodest, but it should be remembered that when he spoke them his blood was hot.

Jack gave way and the two came together with a clash of steel. A crowd had gathered about them and was increasing rapidly. They had been fighting for half a moment around the fire when Solomon broke the blade of his adversary. The latter drew his pistol. Before he could raise it Solomon had fired his own weapon. Burley's pistol dropped on the ground. Instantly its owner reeled and fell beside it. The battle which had lasted no more than a minute had come to its end. There had been three kinds of fighting in that lively duel.

Solomon's voice trembled when he cried out:

"Ary man who says a word ag'in' the Great Father is goin' to git mussed up."

He pushed his way through the crowd which had gathered around the wounded man.

"Let me bind his arm," he said.

But a surgeon had stood in the crowd. He was then doing what he could for the shattered member of the hot-headed Colonel Burley. Jack was helping him. Some men arrived with a litter and the unfortunate officer was quickly on his way to the hospital.

Jack and Solomon set out for headquarters. They met Putnam and two officers hurrying toward the scene of the encounter. Solomon had fought in the bush with him. Twenty years before they had been friends and comrades. Solomon saluted and stopped the grizzled hero of many a great adventure.

"Binkus, what's the trouble here?" the latter asked, as the crowd who had followed the two scouts gathered about them.

Solomon gave his account of what had happened. It was quickly verified by many eye-witnesses.

"Ye done right," said the general. "Burley has got to take it back an' apologize. He ain't fit to be an officer. He behaved himself like a bully. Any man who talks as he done orto be cussed an' Binkussed an' sent to the guardhouse."

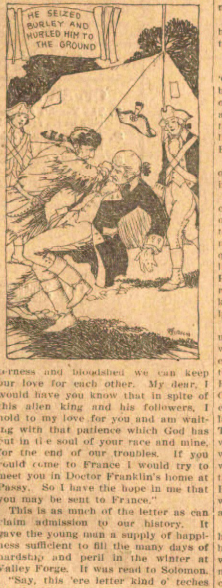
Within three days Burley had made an ample apology for his conduct and this bulletin was posted at headquarters:

"Liberty of speech has its limits. It must be controlled by the law of decency and the general purposes of our army and government. The man who respects no authority above his own intellect is a conceited ass and would be a tyrant if he had the chance. No word of disrespect for a superior officer will be tolerated in this army."

"The Binkussing of Burley"—a phrase which traveled far beyond the limits of Putnam's camp—and the notice of warning which followed was not without its effect on the propaganda of Gates and his friends.

Next day Jack and Solomon set out with a force of 1,200 men for Washington's camp at White Marsh near Philadelphia. There Jack found a letter from Margaret. It had been sent first to Benjamin Franklin in Paris through the latter's friend, Mr. David Hartley, a distinguished Englishman who was now and then sounding the doctor on the subject of peace.

"I am sure that you will be glad to know that my love for you is not growing feeble on account of its age," she wrote. "The thought has come to me that I am England and that you are America. It will be a wonderful and beautiful thing if through all this bitterness and bloodshed we can keep our love for each other. My dear, I would have you know that in spite of this alien king and his followers, I hold to my love for you and am waiting with that patience which God has put in the soul of your race and mine, for the end of our troubles. If you could come to France I would try to meet you in Doctor Franklin's home at Passy. So I have the hope in me that you may be sent to France."



HE SEIZED BURLEY AND HURLED HIM TO THE GROUND

This is as much of the letter as can claim admission to our history. It gave the young man a supply of happiness sufficient to fill the many days of hardship and peril in the winter at Valley Forge. It was read to Solomon.

"Say, this 'ere letter kind o' teches my feelin's—does sart'in," said Solomon. "I'm goin' to see what kin be done."

Unknown to Jack, within three days Solomon had a private talk with the commander in chief at his headquarters. The latter had a high regard for the old scout. He maintained a dignified silence while Solomon made his little speech and then arose and offered his hand, saying in a kindly tone:

"Colonel Binkus, I must bid you good night."

CHAPTER XXII

The Greatest Trait.

Jack Irons used to say that no man he had known had such an uncommon amount of common sense as George Washington. He wrote to his father:

"It would seem that he must be in communication with the all-seeing mind. If he were to make a serious blunder here our cause would fail. The enemy tries in vain to fool him. Their devices are as an open book to Washington. They have fooled me and Solomon and other officers but not him. I had got quite a conceit of myself in judging strategy, but now it is all gone.

"One day I was scouting along the lines, a few miles from Philadelphia, when I came upon a little, ragged, old woman. She wished to go through the lines into the country to buy flour. The moment she spoke I recognized her. It was old Lydia Darrah who had done my washing for me the last year of my stay in Philadelphia.

"'Why, Lydia, how do you do?' I asked.

"'The way I have allus done, laddie buck,' she answered in her good Irish tongue. 'Workin' at the tub an' fightin' the divil—bad 'cess to him—but I kape me hilth an' lucky I am to do that—thanks to the good God! How is me fine lad that I'd niver 'a' knowed but for the voice o' him?'

"'Not as fine as when I wore the white ruffles but stout as a moose,' I answered. 'The war is a sad business.'

"'It is that—may the good God defind us! We cross the sea to be rid o' the divil an' he follys an' grabs us be the neck.'

"We were on a lonely road. She looked about and seeing no one, put a dirty old needle case in my hands.

"'Take that, me smart lad. It's fer good luck,' she answered.

"As I left her I was in doubt of the meaning of her generosity. Soon I opened the needle book and found in one of its pockets a piece of thin paper rolled tight. On it I found the information that Howe would be leaving the city next morning with five thousand men, and baggage wagons and thirteen cannon and eleven boats. The paper contained other details of the proposed British raid. I rode post to headquarters and luckily found the general in his tent. On the way I arrived at a definite conviction regarding the plans of Howe. I was eager to give it air, having no doubt of its soundness. The general gave me respectful attention while I laid the facts before him. Then I took my courage in my hands and asked:

"'General, may I venture to express an opinion?'

"'Certainly,' he answered.

"'It is the plan of Howe to cross the Delaware in his boats so as to make us believe that he is going to New York. He will recross the river above Bristol and suddenly descend upon our rear.'

"Washington sat, with his arms folded, looking very grave, but made no answer.

"In other words, again I presented my conviction.

"Still he was silent and I a little embarrassed. In half a moment I ventured to ask:

"'General, what is your opinion?'

"He answered in a kindly tone: 'Colonel Irons, the enemy has no business in our rear. The boats are only for our scouts and spies to look at. The British hope to fool us with them. Tomorrow morning about daylight they will be coming down the Edgely Bye road on our left.'

"He called an aid and ordered that our front be made ready for an attack in the early morning.

"I left headquarters with my conceit upon me and half convinced that our chief was out in his judgment of that matter. No like notion will enter my mind again. Solomon and I have quarters on the Edgely Bye road. A little after three next morning the British were reported coming down the road. A large number of them were killed and captured and the rest roughly handled."

Snow and bitter winds descended upon the camp early in December. It was a worn, ragged, weary but devoted army of about eleven thousand men that followed Washington into Valley Forge to make a camp for the winter. Of these, two thousand and ninety-eight were unfit for duty. Most of the latter had neither boots nor shoes. They marched over roads frozen hard, with old rags and pieces of hide wrapped around their feet. There were many red tracks in the snow in the Valley of the Schuylkill that day. Hardly a man was dressed for cold weather. Hundreds were shivering and coughing with influenza.

"When I look at these men I cannot help thinking how small are my troubles," Jack wrote to his mother. "I will complain of them no more. Solomon and I have given away all the clothes we have except those on our backs. A fiercer enemy than the British is besieging us here. He is winter.

Canine Intelligence

"You can't overestimate the intelligence of a dog," declared Col. Spotswood Telfair, of Mountain View, gazing reminiscently at his favorite hound engaged in snapping feebly at the pestiferous flies.

"When Towser was in his prime he had an uncanny way of knowing in advance the sort of game I was going to hunt. For instance, if I left the house carrying a rifle Towser would dash for the woods and trail nothing but squirrels. If I started out with a shotgun Towser would trail nothing but rabbits.

"One day I decided to puzzle the old rascal, so I took down my fishing pole and started to the river. It may sound preposterous, gentlemen, but when I got to the edge of the yard I found that derned dog scratching up fishing worms for me!"—Judge.

Yankee Genius Floods World With Everything

I make bold to believe that in the United States today at the close of this first quarter of this Twentieth century there can be seen an ingenuity in plot-making and a fertility in devising situations recalling that which was to be observed in France in the days of Scribe and Dennery and Sardou and in Spain in the days of Lope de Vega and Calderon, two periods of dramaturgic dexterity and of abundant productivity. The American faculty of invention, which has filled the world with Yankee contrivances, seems to have been directed suddenly to the construction of plays, says Brander Matthews in Scribner's. I am aware that to say this is to lay myself open to the retort that our plays are as machine-made as our Yankee contrivances, and even that we are engaged in quantity production rather than quality production. If thus cornered I should have to confess that there may be more than a little truth in the charge; but I should proffer as my rejoinder the statement that not a few of the American plays of this century are as interesting in the library as they are in the theater.

In order to be at her silver wedding a woman is willing to admit that she isn't as young as she used to be.

Many a man gets a reputation for wisdom by leaving things unsaid.

GLORIOUS DEED IN WAR FOR LIBERTY

How Maine Fishermen Beat Off British Warship.

Conflict That Was in Many Ways Unique in Battles on Land or Sea.

On the low-lying headland of Cape Porpoise, in the town of Kennebunkport, Maine, stands a symmetrical boulder marked by a bronze tablet commemorating a battle of the American Revolution which stands forth in the limelight of history as one of the most unusual and extraordinary fought in the great war for liberty.

The tablet, erected by Maine State Council, D. A. R., on the 139th anniversary of the battle, bears the legend:

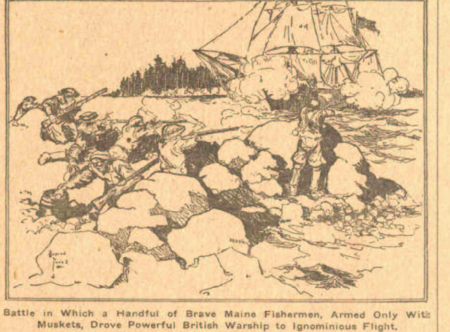
"August 8, 1782, a British Ship of 18 guns attacked a small force of inhabitants gathered on Goat Island and was driven away by severe musketry fire, losing 17 men. Lieut. James Burnham of this town was killed."

The march of seven-score years has dealt gently with the cape whose rocky slopes echoed to the wild whoops of Indian warriors a century before they cast back the sullen boom of British cannon. For this is historic ground.

Yonder on Stage Island, beleaguered fishermen fought long and desperately against overwhelming hordes of savages until heroic Nick Morey—crippled in limb, but stout of heart—made his perilous night voyage in a leaky skiff to Portsmouth, 25 miles away to summon reinforcements, which arrived when the last split bullet was rammed home on the last charge of powder.

Worthy of Remembrance.

Only the bare facts of the battle of August 8, 1782, have been recorded and few historians have mentioned the affair. Its effect on the nation's destiny was slight, indeed, and perhaps for this reason it has been ignored by many and briefly dealt with by others; but the battle of Goat Island is deserving of more attention, for it is perhaps the only instance of the Revolution where untrained soldiers, armed with muskets, defeated a ship-of-war whose crew outnumbered them ten to one.



Battle in Which a Handful of Brave Maine Fishermen, Armed Only With Muskets, Drove Powerful British Warship to Ignominious Flight.

Such information as is obtainable by exhaustive research leads one to believe that the day preceding the battle was clear and warm, with a northwesterly breeze ruffling the bay. People in the fishing village of Cape Porpoise had gone about their daily tasks as usual.

Oarsman Shouts Warning.

Suddenly a boat was seen coming across the bay. From the manner in which the oarsman dipped his blades and bent his back, watchers sensed something unusual and conversation lagged as they walked down to the wharf to meet him. He saw them gathering, and when a hundred yards from shore the boatman turned his head to shout: "A British ship-o'-war off shore and heading this way!"

Where all had been peace and security confusion and alarm now reigned. Defense there was none. All that remained was to save all they could and retreat to the woods until the enemy had departed.

People rushed to their houses to gather such valuables and goods as they could save. No one dreamed of armed resistance until James Burnham assured them by calling out that the enemy would not dare sail boldly into an unknown harbor while the shades of night were fast falling, but would stand off shore during the hours of darkness and cautiously sound his way between the islands in the morning.

James Burnham was a brave man. He was from York and had played an important part in events of that time. He was a lieutenant in the militia and had seen some service in the war. His courage was communicated to others and in a short time his plans were perfected for active resistance. Many of the men were absent in the army, but he succeeded in organizing a force which appears to have numbered less than 20—about one man for each gun on the man-o'-war.

Burnham's prediction about the British ship proved correct. She hovered offshore and when night fell her lights could be seen on the water.

Make Stand on Goat Island.

Burnham rowed across to Goat Island. There was little sleep on the island that night. They had brought food and drink—and needed both. When the sun peeped up from his bed in the ocean there was a curved line of rude earthworks on the island shore.

If they were noticed by the English commander, he seems to have regarded them with contempt. No man was to be seen on the island and thought of battle was remote from British minds when they stood cautiously into the channel and began throwing lead.

Deadly Musketry Fire.

Then came a puff of smoke from the rocks on shore and a puny musket shot echoed over the water. The leadsman toppled and fell. Another took his place, and he dropped when a second musket spoke from shore.

Clear and loud sounded the British bugle. Sailors manned the guns and sent solid shot hissing through the air.

There was no fear in the hearts of the brave old fishermen of Cape Porpoise. Hugging their cover they rammed home bullets and drove them straight at sailors on deck or through open portholes. They were fighting for homes and loved ones these grim-faced, sharp-shooting sons of old Maine.

Twenty hours before every man of them would have ridiculed the idea of such a one-sided fight, but now they had forgotten all about odds against them and picked their marks with deadly accuracy. The big guns on board were thundering as they leaped from deck, almost pulling iron ring-bolts from oak with their recoil.

Women Pray for Victory.

On the headland old men and children watched with bated breath while women prayed silently for a victory none dared hope for. Out on Goat Island muskets were hot from firing and men were fighting who had forgotten all about numbers and cannon, even life itself, in their desperate, unshakable determination to prevent the British from destroying their village.

On board decks were running red with blood. Seventeen men had fallen when the British captain gave the order that sent his ship scurrying before the off-shore breeze—an 18-gun ship-o'-war, driven off by a score of hardy, fearless sharpshooters.

The Americans lost only one man. Lieutenant Burnham, in his anxiety to find a good mark, leaped to the breastworks and stood, musket in hand when a musketball sped by a marine pierced him and he fell.

As a battle the affair at Cape Porpoise was neither great nor long, nor productive of tremendous results. For stark fighting, muskets against cannon, land forces against naval, and untrained soldiers against overwhelming numbers of disciplined sailors, it should be treasured forever in the archives of American history.

Unique as a Battle.

Soldiers on land have fought sailors on water before and since; but perhaps this battle is unique.

And so, as one stands by the boulder on Cape Porpoise and reads the inscription thereon, there comes with the tang of the sea and cries of low-flying gulls an inspiration. Eyes are lifted to rest on Goat Island and in fancy one visions the scene of long ago, and his pulse will quicken and his blood tingle with patriotic pride as he pictures the stirring spectacle of a handful of sturdy fishermen pitted in a death-grapple with scores of trained cannoneers.—Boston Sunday Herald.

All Colonists Linked in Chain of Freedom

"Were the colonists so blind as not to discern the consequences of these measures?" asked James Wilson before the Pennsylvania convention in 1775. "Were they so supinely inactive as to take no steps for guarding against them? They were not. They ought not to have been so. We saw a breach made in those barriers, which our ancestors, British and American, with so much care, with so much danger, with so much treasure, and with so much blood, had erected, cemented and established for the security of their liberties, and—with filial piety let us mention it—of ours. We saw the attack actually begun upon one part: ought we to have folded our hands in indolence, to have lulled our eyes in slumbers, till the attack was carried on, so as to become irresistible, in every part? Sir, I presume to think not. We were aroused, we were alarmed, as we had reason to be. But still our measures have been such as the spirit of liberty and of loyalty directed; not such as the spirit of sedition or of disaffection would pursue. Our counsels have been conducted without rashness and faction.

"That the sentiments of every individual concerning that important object, his liberty, might be known and regarded, meetings have been held, and deliberations carried on, in every particular district. That the sentiments of all those individuals might gradually and regularly be collected into a single point, and the conduct of each inspired and directed by the result of the whole united, county committees, provincial conventions, a Continental congress, have been appointed, have met and resolved. By this means—a chain—more inestimable, and, while the necessity for it continues, we hope, more indissoluble than one of gold—a chain of freedom has been formed, of which every individual in these colonies, who is willing to preserve his liberty, has the pleasure of beholding himself a link."

Most for your money

Women prefer Monarch and Farm House Cocoas for two reasons. First, because they cost only about half as much as other brands of similar quality. Second, because it is hard to find better cocoa, regardless of cost. Always ask for Monarch if you prefer Dutch Process Cocoa—for Farm House if you like the American Process better.

Grow Silk Worms

A silk farm near Oroville, Cal., has commenced operations of incubating more than 2,000,000 eggs of silk worms for the commercial production of silk, says an Associated Press dispatch. The eggs were imported from France and Italy. The farm has more than 25,000 mulberry trees planted for feeding the worms and furnishing the material from which silk is made.

Mr Martin and Caroline Baker stood up with the bride and groom. The couple will make their home in Jackson, Sunday they visited Jay Pullen and family.

Rev. O. D. Dellinger delivered his farewell sermon "The Destruction of Sodom and Gomorroh" at the church Sunday. Mr. Dellinger is as good an orator as the local church ever had or can expect to have. One of the striking statements made by the pastor Sunday was that many of the sins which caused the destruction of the twin cities were in existence in the towns and cities of Michigan at the present time. Rev. Carl Williams of Albion will take charge of the services next Sunday. Using for a subject "The Motto above the Gate". We are sorry to lose Rev. Dellinger but most of his time is occupied in the trucking business which makes it difficult for him to care for his churches. Rev. Dellinger has taken a great deal of interest in the young people and will receive his reward on the day of judgment when the earth is made new. Sometimes however one hears of communities in the U. S. where a minister has less friends and fewer supporters than men who operate pool rooms, gambling dens, houses of prostitution and other character stealing institutions.

Miss Hayhoe left on the first of the week for Ypsilanti to attend summer school, after which she will return and expects to teach the Mud Lake school again this season.

His Idea Of Duty

President Coolidge took the American people seriously when they insistently demanded tax reduction. With the great industry of farming depressed by low prices and the farmers staggering under a load of high taxes, he believed that they meant what they said when they called for lower taxes. The only way to have lower taxes is to stop spending so much money, instead of increasing appropriations for new ways of spending money. He has staked his political chances upon vetoing appropriation bills that he believed could wait until the national debt was further reduced and the people in better shape to take care of increased expenses. He has not trimmed his course for political effect, but has gone on fearlessly in the discharge of the duties of his office as he has seen those duties. He may have made mistakes, he probably will make some, but in the main he has been trying to do what a majority of the people of the country have demanded. It will be up to the voters to decide how well he has fulfilled his trust.

W. C. T. U. Meeting

Nellie Hicks, Frances Overley, Robert Walworth, Russell Wattles, Jack Wertz, Ivan Shults. recitation, "Important Decisions" Viola Hicks: flag exercise, Twelve boys;

There will be a number of musical selections from the new Jubilee song books. Come and hear the children. No admission, no collection.

Township Should Adopt Standard Breed

From Washington state comes the report that the farmers of a certain township have adopted the novel method of standardizing their livestock by using only purebred sires of certain breeds. For instance they will have nothing in the stock line but Belgian horses, Guernsey cattle and Duroc hogs. Apropas of this we call your attention to the advertising of the Greendale Dairy which has been trying to educate the farmers in this country to the virtues of one standard breed of dairy cows—viz the Jersey and the day is not far distant when every dairy farm will use nothing but pure blooded Jerseys in this county. Hillsdale county Michigan has got to get in line because the farmers and stock raisers of eastean states are casting this way for their stock. They want the best there is to replenish the run out pedigrees of their herds which they have maintained for fifty years. It is perfectly natural they should look to the peninsula state with its verdant meadows for a strain of Jerseys unequaled in the world. Some of you chaps who may have got mixed up in the Guernseys, Holsteins or Durhams, five years ago had better let go of these big rangy heavy keepers of poor milk quality and adopt a strain where milk shows a larger percentage of butterfat to the hundred weight.

I know what you think—it was common thirty years ago to think and believe that the little scrubby looking Jerseys of that day were a mere nothing which did not produce over a thimblefull of milk that was so rich it smelled and you didn't believe these little pymies would ever amount to much in the dairy world, but how about it today? Scientists have been tinkering around and they have Burbanked the stock up until today it is not unusual to find Jersey cows producing a ten quart pail full of milk which is just as rich in butterfat as it ever was and butterfat tells the story don't it?

You bet!

Much Talk, Little Done, Is Record Of This Congress

Michigan farmers will be interested in checking up the performance of the recent session of Congress alongside the legislative program of their farm organizations. While it is generally recognized that Congress fell far short of carrying out the expectations of tho American public, yet it should be recognized that some constructive legislation was enacted and many pitfalls vere avoided.

After surveying the situation, we are inclined to say that Congress, which completed its session June 7, gave a generous amount of consideration to special agricultural matters, but this consideration resulted in very little action. The McNary-Haugen bill was defeated in the house, the vote being 154 in favor of the bill and 224 against it The Ford Muscle Shoals offer was considered favorable in the House, but did not reach a final vote in the Senate. The matter will be brought up again when Congress convenes in December. "Truth in Fabric" legislatiion was given consideration by both House and Senate Agricultural Committees although without final action.

Despite this rather negative side of the record of Congress, there is much which we might well commend. A restrictive immigration law was passed which was in practical conformity with the desires of organized farmers. This measure is regarded by many students of public affairs as being the outstanding achievement of the recent session. There can be no question but that its enactment was most timely and its principles sound and constructive.

Congress took strong action toward economy and tax reduction taking 25 percent off this years taxes, and making very material reductions elsewhere. The Prohibition Law was not weakened, efforts through investigation were made to strengthen it.

The Womans Club of North Adams will hold their annual picnic at Devils Lake July 16th. Potluck dinner. Bring dishes, etc. Members and their families are urged to attend.

Owing to lack of space and time this week we have been compelled to omit the obituary of Mrs. Clara French and other important matter which will appear next week.

On Friday evening, July 4th a dancing party was held at the home of wid Pool south-west of town. A pot-luck supper was served and a good social time enjoyed. About eighty were present.

The following from away attended the funeral of Mrs. French last Saturday: Len Dietz and wife of Jackson, Theodore wagner and wife of Lansing; William winters and family of Devils Lake, Lawrence Dietz and wife and wilford Dietz and wife and Mrs. H. williams of Ransom.

The 4-year old son of Martin Love was painfully injured by being kicked by a mule on Saturday of last week. The sharp hoof struck the boy squarely in the face cutting open the nose and upper lip clear through to the jaw bone. It was necessary to remove pieces of the bone before wound could be dressed Dr. McFarland was summoned and he reports the boy doing as well as could be expected.

John Litchhult and Mrs. Lavina Lamb met with what might have been a serious accident on July 4 when returning from Devils lake. Mr. Litchhult was driving his Ford touring car when another car came up behind and collided with the Litchhult car, which was overturned. Mrs. Lamb was thrown down in front of the steering column and her limb severely gashed by the glass from the windshield besides being painfully bruised, while Mr. Litchhult was badly bruised and the muscles of his hip wrenched. It was necessary to cut away the top of the car to get Mrs. Lamb out. Both victims of the accident are doing as well as could be expected.

Roy Johnston of Cement City was home over Sunday.

Leon Hoffman of Lansing was a guest at the parental home Sunday.

Art Hoffman and wife of Lansing were here Sunday calling on his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay H. Clement of South Bend, Indiana, came Thursday evening to stay over the 4th with his father and sister, A. H. and Miss Ethel Clement and other relatives and friends. They returned to their home Sunday evening.

Miss Helen Gray accompanied by Miss Isabel Munchester of Laurium, Michigan and Miss Margaret Rowling of Ann Arbor spent the 4th with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Gray. They returned Saturday morning to their work at the University of Michigan.

W. S. Sayles was taken seriously ill last week and Dr. McFarland diagnosed his case as cerebro hemorrhage. Later at Mr. Sayles' request Dr. Green of Hillsdale was called for counsel. At this time he shows very little change and is in a half stupor, but takes some nourishment. His condition is quite similar to a shock.

Besides the Litchhult collision on July 4th we learn there was another in the morning on the Jonesville road west of town near the Hergert farm when an Oakland car driven by Mr Abbott, crashed into a Dort driven by Bert VanCamp. The Dort was considerably mussed, front wheel crushed, front axle bent and fenders damaged. The other car was not seriously hurt. No one was injured and the Dort was brought to Metcalf & walters garage for repairs.

The moving picture entertainment at the Congregational church on Sunday evening last was attended by a crowded house. The unusual interest taken in these entertainments is very encouraging, The film "Betsy Ross" was one of the finest ever shown in this village and the new machine belonging to the high school was used, throwing a very clear image on the screen. "Betsy Ross" was a story of Revolutionary days featuring General George Washington, the continental army and the birth of the stars and stripes which Gen. Washington is quoted as saying he conceived from observing the light streaming through a beautiful colored window onto the floor. The theme of the film was delightfully interwoven in the Revolutionary history— showing the perfidy of two soldiers, the womanly sympathy of the simple Quaker's daughter, "Betsy" and the stern discipline of military law wherein spies met the firing squad but the devotion of the gentle Quaker matron saved her lover from an ignominious death. Mrs. Hunt led the song service to the accompaniment of Miss Frances Young on the piano.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Holland—Prof. A. A. Haan, for nearly 20 years professor of Dutch language and literature at Hope college, has tendered his resignation. He has not announced his intentions.

Owosso—The co-operation here of all city health forces during the last year has resulted in reducing communicable disease 45 per cent, according to Dr. R. C. Mahaney, health officer.

Albion—Albion's postoffice is now first class, having been advanced from second class because of big recent increases in the volume of business. Postmaster E. J. Mallory's salary was increased as a result of the change.

Grand Rapids—Severe injuries, including fractures of the legs, were suffered by John Stap, 19 years old, and his brother, Allen, 23, when a motorcycle on which they were riding collided with a street car during a storm.

Detroit—Submission to a vote of the people at the primary September 9 for a $1,000,000 issue for another bridge over the River Rouge has been ordered by the board of supervisors. The proposed bridge will span the Rouge at Dix avenue.

Fennville—While it is reported that virtually the entire peach crop of Berrien and Van Buren counties was winter-killed, a survey of orchards in this section of Allegan county shows that there will be at least 65 per cent of an average crop of the fruit.

Adrian—The mill operated by Martin and Charles Coy, in the village of Jasper, was recently destroyed by fire of unknown origin. The loss is estimated at $18,000, including a new engine valued at $4,500. Two carloads of feed also were destroyed.

Lansing—The construction of a central heating plant, to serve both the Kalamazoo State Hospital and the Western Michigan Normal School, has been authorized by the State Administrative Board. It will cost about $276,000 and will be located at the hospital.

Owosso—Matthew Bush, judge of probate of Shiawassee County, now serving his thirty-sixth consecutive year, has announced his candidacy for another term of four years. Only one other probate judge in Michigan has served longer than Judge Bush. He is Judge Edgar O. Durfee, of Detroit, now serving his forty-sixth year.

Detroit—The first electric locomotive for the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad will be assembled in the River Rouge, Mich., shops beginning July 15. This will be the first step in the electrification of the road, which has been watched with interest by industry in general since its purchase several years ago by Henry Ford.

Dowagiac—Mrs. Martha Jane Rife, 58 years old, is dead, as the result of being burned while building a fire at her home north of this city. The explosion of kerosene threw her under a table. She was seized by her son, Edward, who carried her to a water tank in the yard and extinguished the flames, but she died without regaining consciousness.

Schoolcraft—Noticing that one of the passenger coaches of the Grand Trunk Train No. 9 was on fire as the train was leaving the station, the agent signaled the engineer, and the burning coach was uncoupled. The Schoolcraft fire department extinguished the fire after the roof of the coach was partly destroyed. The train was delayed 45 minutes.

Ypsilanti—Albert Bologna, 21 years old, Detroit, was killed instantly three miles east of here when he stepped in front of an interurban car operated by Charles Willetts, of this city. Bologna was bringing a load of fruit to Ypsilanti when his truck developed motor trouble. He stopped close to the interurban track and stepped from the truck directly in front of the Limited car.

Lansing—State receipts on June 30 were the greatest for a single day in the history of the state, Auditor General Fuller has reported to the administration. They totaled $8,210,000. A large share of the money was from state tax payments. The board gave the Southern Michigan Telephone company three months grace to pay about $85,000 taxes. The company is in financial difficulties.

Detroit—Frank Cody was retained as superintendent of Detroit schools and his salary increased from $12,000 to $15,000 a year at the annual meeting of the board of education. The salaries of two of Cody's assistants also were increased, despite the objection of Inspector Edward D. Devine that the present time was not appropriate for the spending of more money than was absolutely necessary.

Detroit—Though the salary of carriers was not increased, postmaster John W. Smith's salary has been increased from $6,000 to $8,000. Assistant Postmaster Peter Wiggle from $4,000 to $4,300. Superintendent of Mails Charles C. Kellogg from $3,800 to $4,000, Cashier A. G Calton from $3,500 to $3,700, and Money Order Cashier William A. Corbett from $3,200 to $3,300. All station superintendents receive a raise of from $100 to $300. Detroit is now seventh in the list of American cities for mail business done.

Lansing—The State Administrative Board has authorized the purchase of the necessary right-of-way to re-route M 17 at Ann Arbor, according to present plans of the Highway Department the grading will be done this year. It authorized the paving with 20-foot concrete of a 3 1-3 mile stretch on M-17 in Calhoun County from the end of the present pavement to the Kalamazoo County line. The board also rescinded its previous action in rerouting M-17 around Battle Creek, until the business men shall decide which route they want.

Grand Rapids—Clifford Hotchkiss, 20 years old, of Saranac, died here recently from burns received when a farm tractor gasoline tank exploded.

Monroe—By a vote of 12 to 6, the Monroe county board of supervisors here decided to retain the services of a county school nurse the coming year.

Ludington—Mason County supervisors are to be penalized hereafter for coming late to sessions, according to a resolution adopted unanimously. Members who are half an hour late will be marked absent and lose one-half day's pay.

Lansing—The State will collect between $75,000 and $100,000 in delinquent corporation franchise fees, through a check of the returns made for corporations by the accountant firm of Seidman & Seidman, of Grand Rapids, H. V. Chilson, deputy secretary of state, has estimated.

Allegan—The Allegan county board of supervisors has voted to pay Mrs. Lillian Mayhood $500 for injuries suffered when her horse became frightened at a county road scraper and ran away, throwing her from the buggy. Mrs. Mayhood had intimated she would institute a suit for damages.

Manistee—A reduction of $2,720,173 in the valuation of Manistee county's real estate was adopted by the board of supervisors as recommended by the equalization committee. This brings the total valuation of both real estate and personal property down to $14,793,144, as against $17,725,072 last year.

Lansing—Over 200 streams flow into Lake Superior and 800 more flow into the other Great Lakes. These lakes contain over half of the area of fresh water on the earth. The water surface of the Great Lakes, with the land draining into it, presents a total drainage basin of 276,000 square miles.

Westphalia—While wading, Edward Wohlschied, 18 years old, stepped into deep water and was drowned in Grand River near here. His brother, Marion, 12, narrowly escaped when he also stepped off a shelf into deep water. Although neither of the boys could swim, Marion struggled back to shore. The older boy's body was recovered.

Lansing—In its campaign to get out a big vote at municipal, state and national elections, the board of directors of the Lansing Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution urging the enactment of a compulsory voting law. It has announced. The board would disfranchise and fine all legal voters who failed to register and vote.

Lansing—Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner, has announced the smallpox quarantine imposed on circuses, carnivals and street fairs lifted. According to Dr. Olin, between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 persons have been vaccinated in Michigan since the campaign for 100 per cent vaccination started, and conditions are vastly improved.

Iron Mountain—Only a heavy rain will prevent the almost total loss of this year's hay crop in Dickinson County, according to Arthur Lonsdorf, county agriculturist. The crop in the sandy sections already has been cut in two and that of the loam and clay sections, hit hard by the late spring, will suffer heavily if rain does not come. Farmers have been advised to plant emergency crops.

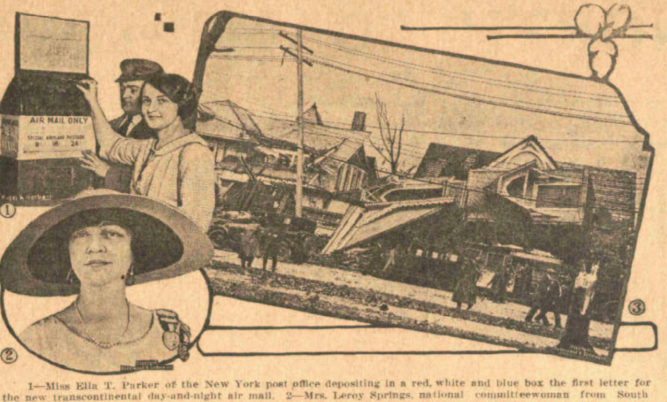
Detroit—The appointment of 82 additional letter carriers has been announced by Postmaster John W. Smith. This brings the total of carrier appointments since Smith assumed control of the office up to 278. In the same period 13 supervisors and 280 postoffice clerks have been appointed, making a total of 571 new employes engaged during the last two years. The entire postal force now numbers around 2,800.

Fennville—The Montmorency cherries, the most extensively cultivated variety in this section and the variety figured on largely to provide work in the field and at the cannery is now known to be not more than a 50 per cent crop. The limbs are still laden with the cherries, about a pea size, but they are turning white, are withering and at the slightest touch they loosen and drop. It is conservatively estimated that half of this extensive variety will drop. The early sweet cherries are holding much better.

Lansing—Representatives of the Michigan Electric Rilway company appeared before the state public utilities commission recently to protest the valuations fixed on the company's various properties by the last appraisal. They claim that values, when the appraisal was made were unusually low in comparison to the present worth of the property. An increase in the valuation probably would not affect rates, as the interurbans are now collecting the maximum fares under the Glaspie interurban rate act.

Lansing—A quarter of a century ago Michigan was one of the greatest timber producing states of the nation, but in 1922 Michigan people paid $15,000,000 in freight on timber imported into the state, Edward Cockrun, secretary of the state conservation commission, declared in an address here. The state conservation department, in co-operation with federal authorities, is planting trees in approximately 5,000 acres of cutover land. If legislative appropriation can be secured, the plan is to double the planting acreage every two years.

Iron Mountain—The Iron Mountain plants of the Ford Motor company will return to a six-day working week in the near future, according to reports. The curtailment of operations at all plants has made possible the rushing of machinery here to equip a third body plant. According to the report, this is expected to go into operation shortly While it is declared unlikely that additions to the working staff will be made, the opening of the new plant will provide sufficient work to put the Iron Mountain plants back on a six-day week.



1—Miss Ella T. Parker of the New York post office depositing in a red, white and blue box the first letter for the new transcontinental day-and-night air mail. 2—Mrs. Leroy Springs, national committeewoman from South Carolina; her state delegation voted in caucus to place her in nomination for the vice presidency. 3—Presbyterian church in Lorain, Ohio, wrecked by tornado.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democrats Fight and Pray Over Platform Planks and Then Ballot.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE Democratic national convention in Madison Square garden, New York, began its fourth day of futile balloting Thursday morning with McAdoo and Smith still deadlocked. Following a dramatic and exciting move in his behalf by William Jennings Bryan Wednesday McAdoo had climbed up to a high-water mark of 505½ votes in the fortieth ballot at the Wednesday night session and on the forty-second and last ballot had slipped back to 503.4, as shown by the following count:

McAdoo, 503 4-10; Smith, 318 6-10; Davis (W. Va.), 67; Underwood, 39½; Cox, 55; Glass, 28½; Ralston, 30; Robinson, 24; Ritchie, 17½.

McAdoo on this ballot was 228 votes short of the necessary two-thirds of the convention and 47 under a simple majority—550 votes, which was his immediate objective.

Wednesday's drowsy day session was thrown into a near riot during the taking of the last (thirty-eighth) ballot by William Jennings Bryan, who inadvertently touched a match to Teapot Dome in a daring attempt to stampede the convention to McAdoo. Taking the platform ostensibly to explain his vote as a delegate from Florida, he suggested that the convention choose from a list of eight candidates, each of whom he eulogized in turn as "worthy of progressive Democracy—Murphree of Florida, Daniels, Robinson, Ralston, Meredith of Iowa, C. W. Bryan, Walsh. When he came at last to McAdoo he was hooted, derided, cornered into desperately defending McAdoo and almost driven from the platform. And when the ballot was finished the count showed no appreciable change, but the effect of Bryan's move was seen in the ballots of the night session.

MONDAY morning found the convention ready for the long and steady grind of balloting, 16 candidates placed in nomination and the platform adopted. The delegates came up smiling and showing few signs of the terrific contest over the League of Nations and Ku Klux Klan planks that had shaken the Democratic party to its foundations for many hours before the adoption of the platform at two o'clock Sunday morning.

Yet it will be long before those delegates forget three memorable scenes of that struggle. One was Homer Cummings of Connecticut, chairman of the platform committee, pleading with the convention for more time because the committee had been unable to agree on the two planks, even though the members had repeated the Lord's prayer and William Jennings Bryan had made an invocation to God.

The second was Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, in impassioned oratory beseeching the convention in the name of Woodrow Wilson to accept the minority League of Nations plank. The delegates applauded Wilson's name and the orator, but rejected the plank by a vote of 742 to 353.

The third was William Jennings Bryan in the role of an apostle of peace speaking the final word in the furious debate over the Ku Klux Klan plank, which tipped the scale in favor of the majority report and brought to an end five hours of riotous struggle.

FOLLOWING is the plank in the majority platform report (adopted by a vote of 546 15-100 to 541 85-100) which deals with freedom of religion, press and speech, and does not name the Ku Klux Klan:

"The Democratic party reaffirms its adherence and devotion to those cardinal principles contained in the Constitution and the precepts upon which our government is founded, that congress shall make no laws respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or of the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances; that the church and the state shall be and remain separate, and that no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under the United States.

"These principles we pledge ourselves ever to defend and maintain."

THE minority report, which names the Ku Klux Klan and was lost by less than five votes, was presented to the convention as follows:

"We condemn political secret societies of all kinds as opposed to the exercise of free government and contrary to the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

"We pledge the Democratic party to oppose any effort on the part of the Ku Klux Klan, or any organization, to interfere with the religious liberty or political freedom of any citizen, or to limit the civic rights of any citizen or body of citizens because of religion, birthplace or racial origin."

THE first ballot Monday morning was important as showing the preliminary strength of the two leading contenders, which proved to be the deadlock that was expected. The first was also interesting as a "favorite son" demonstration.

"Alabammer!" shouted the reading clerk. And the alphabetical head of the Union started the ball rolling in fine shape with this: "Alabama casts its 24 votes for Oscar-r-r W. Un-n-nder-r-rwood" (cheers). Arkansas, of course, gave its 18 to Robinson and California its 26 to McAdoo. Colorado, uninstructed, complimented Gov. W. E. Sweet with its 12. Kansas plumped its 20 for Governor Davis. Indiana went solid for Ralston. Louisiana created a stir by voting its 20 uninstructed for Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, the keynoter of the convention. Wyoming made another entry by naming Senator John B. Kendrick.

The result of the first ballot was as follows: McAdoo, 431½; Smith, 240½; Davis (W. Va.), 31; Cox, 59; Underwood, 42½; Ralston, 30; Ritchie, 22½; Glass, 25; Robinson, 21; Brown, 17; Silzer, 38; Harrison, 43½; C. W. Bryan, 18; Davis (Kans.), 20; Sweet, 12; Ferris, 30; Kendrick, 6; Saulsbury, 7; Houston Thompson of Colorado, 1. Total, 1,098; necessary to choice, 732; majority, 550.

WEDNESDAY morning found the convention preparing to cast its thirty-first ballot under these conditions, as indicated by two days of futile balloting: Deadlock between McAdoo and Smith, the former steadily losing and the latter steadily gaining; Davis of West Virginia the most prominent of the other contenders and the favorite in the Wall street betting, at 5 to 2, as against 4 to 1 previously. McAdoo, who had got 431 votes on the first ballot and touched high-water mark of 479 on the fifteenth, had received 415 on the thirtieth. Smith's zigzag increase had been from 240 votes on the first to 323 on the thirtieth. Davis had started with 31 and had climbed slowly and steadily to 126.

Others who had been named in each ballot had received the following votes on the first and thirtieth: Cox, 59 and 57; Underwood, 42 and 39; Ralston, 30 and 33; Glass, 25 and 24; Robinson, 21 and 23; Ritchie, 22 and 17; Davis of Kansas, 6 and 6; Saulsbury, 7 and 6. Only two others had received votes on the thirtieth. One was Chairman Walsh, whose maximum of 16 on the twenty-fifth ballot had dwindled to 1½. The other was Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, who had received 20 on the twenty-sixth ballot and 25 on the thirtieth.

SOUTH CAROLINA, early in the game, killed two birds with one stone by providing itself with a candidate for vice presidential honors and making history. Its 18 delegates held a caucus Monday, voted to place in nomination for the vice presidency Mrs. Leroy Springs of Lancaster and appointed a steering commitee of six to handle her candidacy on the floor. As delegate at large, national committeewoman and chairman of the credentials committee of the convention she had made a favorable impression. She is a daughter of South Carolina by adoption—by marriage, rather. She was born in Tennessee and lived in Texas. The South Carolina state federation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs made her its president. Col. Leroy Springs, also a delegate at large, had this to say: "I am no squawman. I am perfectly willing that Mrs. Springs should stay at home. She is a very nice woman and I like to have her there."

OHIO'S shore of Lake Erie between Cleveland and Sandusky is dragging itself out of the ruins left by a devastating tornado which Saturday killed more than 100, injured more than 700 and caused property losses of more than $30,000,000. Lorain, a steel city of 40,000, suffered most of the loss of life and property. Martial law was established and aid was sent from scores of cities. President Coolidge offered federal aid. For a time there was neither water, gas nor electric light, and food was scarce. A meeting of business men and bankers throughout the state was held Wednesday in Cleveland and inspection was made of Lorain. Presumably the 125 wrecked blocks will be rebuilt.

TRANSCONTINENTAL air mail service was put in operation Tuesday, when planes left New York and San Francisco. The schedule calls for 32 hours and 5 minutes eastward and 34 hours and 45 minutes westward. The maximum load is 600 pounds, or about 24,000 letters. There are three rate zones, the postage being 8, 16 and 24 cents respectively. The west-bound plane strikes darkness just west of Chicago and flies through the night to emerge into daylight at Cheyenne. Eastbound, the plane flies through darkness between Cheyenne and Chicago. The flyers pass near Omaha. An airway lighted by enormously powerful beacons guides the flyers.

CRIMINAL indictments were returned at Washington Monday by a special federal grand jury investigating the leasing of the naval oil reserves against Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior; Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny, oil operators, and E. L. Doheny, Jr. Four indictments were returned. The first named Fall, Doheny, Sr., and Doheny, Jr., charging them with conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the leasing of the California reserve. In the second Fall and Sinclair were accused of conspiring to defraud in connection with Teapot Dome lease.

The third indictment charged Fall with accepting a bribe of $100,000 for using his official influence in the California leases in behalf of Doheny Sr. The two Dohenys in the fourth indictment were charged with inducing Fall, in behalf of the Pan-American Petroleum company, by the "unlawful and felonious" payment of $100,000 to take an unlawful action.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, making his first address since his nomination, spoke Monday night before more than 1,000 executive officers of the business organization of the government and reiterated his program of economy to secure relief from burdens of taxation. The President announced that he would submit estimates of not more than $3,000,000,000 for expenditures in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1925, and instructed the officers under him to find a way to cut $83,000,000 from their present estimates.

President Coolidge, Gen. Charles G. Dawes and Chairman Butler of the Republican national committee conferred Tuesday at the White House. General Dawes will begin an intensive 60-day speaking drive September 1. His official notification of his nomination will be received July 29 at Evanston. The President will be notified July 24 in Washington, probably in some big hall where thousands can hear what will be the real opening address of his campaign.

TUESDAY the American exclusion act went into effect and Japan staged a nation-wide demonstration, a significant incident of which was the cutting down by persons unknown of the flag flying on the grounds of the American embassy at Tokyo. At all the Shinto shrines mass prayer meetings besought the ancient deities to aid the "insulted" Japanese people. Anti-American meetings were held everywhere.

Boy Scout Saves Lad From Bleeding to Death

Atlanta, Ga.—"The kind of fellow that's going to make the kind of citizen that this kind of country needs." Such was perhaps the biggest compliment ever paid to Scout Leon Smith of this city, because of his quick wit, courage and skill in saving a boy from bleeding to death.

Joe Neville, aged sixteen, lost his footing on a slope of slippery sidewalk and plunged through a plate-glass window. He fell to the floor of dise from France escapes the heavy which had been slashed by the broken glass.

Employees and customers rapidly gathered about the unfortunate boy. No one knew how to aid the lad whose strength and life blood were fast ebbing.

At this tense moment Scout Leon Smith, in passing by, noticed the broken window and the crowd, and made his way into the store to see what the trouble was.

"While grown men stood by wondering what to do," states a local account, "the scout quickly knelt by the half-dying boy, fashioned a tourniquet from a handkerchief and applied it as he had been taught in his scout work."

The bleeding was soon staunched. An automobile was procured, and the injured boy placed in it. Accompanied by his scout rescuer, Neville was taken to the hospital, where the doctors stated that Smith by his quick work and skill in first-aid had saved a human life.

POULTRY

RECENT METHOD OF FEEDING CHICKENS

A new system for feeding chicks has been substituted by the University of New Hampshire for that previously recommended by that institution.

When the chicks are taken from the incubator and placed under the brooder stove, they should be given a drink of a mixture of sour milk or buttermilk in which have been beaten up about three eggs yolks per quart of milk. This mixture should be accessible for the first 24 hours they are under the brooder stove. For the next seven days they should be fed five times a day with a sufficient amount of chick feed—which may be a mixture of equal parts of fine cracked corn, fine cracked wheat, and steel-cut oats—to last ten minutes. As soon as this mixture is eaten, they should be given a sufficient amount of an egg-and-mash mixture to last them about ten minutes more, made with 12 egg yolks to each one and one-half pounds of mash, and mixed thoroughly to produce really a crumbly mixture. Enough of this mash should be fed to provide one egg yolk to each 30 chicks daily.

The second week this feeding should be continued if a sufficient supply of eggs is available. Toward the end of the second week the regular laying dry mash may be given an hour both morning and afternoon, increasing the length of time until it is constantly before the chicks.

The eggs used in this mixture may be those taken out of the incubator on the seventh and fourteenth-day tests. They will aid materially in the development of the chicks and will prevent leg weakness to a large extent. If no eggs are available, a pint of cod-liver oil mixed with 100 pounds of mash may be substituted for the egg-and-mash mixture.

From the time the chicks are three weeks old, they should be fed three times a day with equal parts of mash and chick feed.

Why Does Sour Skimmilk Encourage Hens to Lay?

A year ago the Idaho College of Agriculture, through the department of poultry husbandry, started an experiment to determine the cause of the high production secured from laying hens that were given an abundance of sour skim milk. A study of the analysis of sour skim milk showed it to contain 90.77 per cent water, 0.10 per cent fat, 3.93 per cent milk sugar (lactose), 0.5 per cent lactic acid, 3.5 per cent protein and 0.79 per cent milk ash or salts. It was assumed that water alone was not the stimulating factor. The fat content seemed too low, and the distribution of carbohydrates did not point to milk sugar as a possible source of the problem. A comparison was made of rations containing lactic acid, milk salts protein—free sour skim milk and sour skim milk. The results showed conclusively that lactic acid in the same solution as in sour skim milk is valueless for egg production. Besides both milk salts and ash entirely failed to stimulate increased egg production. The results all seem to indicate that it is the valuable part of sour skim milk. For two years, the protein-free sour skim milk has not given as satisfactory production as the sour skim milk. A further study is being made into this interesting problem. Pens are now being compared in which rations containing milk curd, milk case, protein-free sour skim milk and sour skim milk are given.

Green Feed Problem

Where the hens have free range the problem of green feed takes pretty good care of itself, especially if clover or alfalfa fields are convenient. But bare yards are a nuisance. They not only curtail egg production at a time when eggs can be manufactured cheaper than at any other time of the year, but they bring about disease and encourage a general filthy condition that is detrimental to present and future flocks.

Poultry Facts

Market all broilers as early as possible.

* * *

Take good care of the growing stock and feed well.

* * *

Cull or kill the chicks that are lacking in vigor.

* * *

Range and exercise is especially desirable for poultry breeding stock.

* * *

Sour skim milk or buttermilk kept before the chicks at all times will help prevent diarrhea.

* * *

Egg production is uneven throughout the year, being heavy in the spring and summer and light in the fall and winter.

* * *

Teach the chicks to roost early. This can be started when the chicks are about a month old. Place the roosts about eight inches above the floor.

* * *

Both colony and community poultry houses are in common use, each type having special advantages and disadvantages very much like the similar types of hog houses.

* * *

If possible the poultry houses should be closer to the home than most of the other farm buildings, as the farm women usually care for the flocks, at least during the busy crop seasons.

Gallantry marks the best breeding male. He is a good provider for his family; which means that he must be fed once a day away from the hens during the breeding season.

SUFFERED PAIN FOR YEARS

Mrs. Jahr Finally Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Howard Lake, Minnesota.—"I write to let you know that I have taken several bottles of your medicine in the last three months, and found it to be very good. I had pains and other troubles women have and was not able to do my work. Seeing your 'Ad.' in the paper, I thought of giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I got good results from it and feel able to do my housework now. I used to have lots of pains, but after taking the medicine I am relieved from pains that I had suffered from for years. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends, and hope this letter will be satisfactory for you to publish."—Mrs. JENNIE JAHR, R.R. No. 2, Box 81, Howard Lake, Minn.

Their Occupation

A wild yelling caused a motorist in the Rumpus Ridge region to hasten around the next bend in the road. He beheld a pack of children, composed of parts of the Johnson, Giggery and Yawkey families, jumping up and down and beating their bosoms with their clenched fists, while they howled with great vigor.

"What's the matter?" asked the traveler. "Are you in trouble?"

"No!" they shouted in unison. "We're looking for it!"—Kansas City Star.

"Ten Million Ford Cars"

How would you like to see a procession of ten million autos packed as close as they could run, passing by? This represents the output of the factories since Mr. Ford began the business a few years ago. The ten millionth Ford touring car has been started on a tour from Detroit across the continent probably to advertise Ford's great factory.

In spite of the fact that "Flivvers" are the cheapest practical car manufactured which runs successfully statistics show they are the longest lived and today it is common to find these little greyhounds still running in different states though they show signs of age. 12 and 15 year old Fords are a common sight in the country side. Just why the irony of this fact is possible we do not know and it is provoking at least to the big car men to be obliged to admit that a Cadillac or a Packard with eight and twelve cylinders costing $3,000 upwards will only last one half as long as a little simple cheaply made contraption which costs $295 without the self commencer. Of course we know that the fewer parts a machine has, the less there is to wear and go wrong, but this is not a sufficient reason. We must have something more substantial.

Mr. Ford—the great genius he is has made good his word to place a car on the market at a price which enables every laboring man to own one and enjoy the comforts of its use at a comparatively small expense for upkeep and gas. It is a fact that at $295 it would hardly be possible to purchase a real good young speedy horse, a good single harness and a first class top buggy and maintain them as a Ford automobile is maintained. The car can stand right out in the open the coldest night in winter without suffering any inconvenience. It can remain in the barn for a month without a pound of hay and is always feeling mighty fit when wanted for a drive. No wonder the average young man feels he is a king when he starts out in the Ford—he has a right to, and if he does not feel a real thankfulness in his heart for good Henry he is a base ingrate.

The state of Michigan is getting real insistant concerning the signs which have been erected along high ways and it has passed a law which says these must come down. The work is progressing right along and soon there'll be no unsightly boards with their big area covering the landscape. This new ruling seems to be very pleasing to the traveling public at least, whether the advertiser likes it or not.It looks to a novice like a cooked up scheme to force the big admen to use printer's ink instead of fancy paint. We are of the opinion that annually a large sum of money is worse than "fooled" away by these big concerns in fancy high colored pictures and large lettering which if put into the newspapers, might show some results. If this money is to be frittered away why not give the poor printer a chance to dip into the golden pile.

The Murdered Nurse

Among the personal murders, during the World war was that of Edith Cavell—pronounced Kav'l, with the accent on the first syllable an English nurse, who was born in 1872. In 1896 she took up nursing and four years later she went to nurse in a training school and hospital near Brussels, Belgium.

Later she became head of the institution from which she developed a large nursing organization through out the country.

When the World war broke out in 1914 Miss Cavell was in England but she immediately returned to her work. With the permission of the German military government she went on with her nursing and her institute was converted into a hospital for the wounded.

During the first year of the war Belguims, French, British and Germans were nursed by Miss Cavell without discrimination. She secretly aided many allied soldiers, upon their recovery from wounds, to escape into Holland and thus rejoin their armies. Likewise she assisted many Belgians of military age to escape from the Germans to join the Belgian army.

Miss Cavell's activity for the allied cause was betrayed to the Germans by a Belgian, who a year later was found and shot to death in the streets of Brussels. August 5, 1915, Miss Cavell was arrested and placed in solitary confinement Brand Whitlock, our ambassador to Belgium, interceded for her but his appeals were of no avail. Miss Cavell frankly admitted the charges against her.

According to German military law the penalty of her offense was death. Two hours after midnight on August 12, 1915, she calmly faced the German firing squad. Perhaps her last words were those spoken to a British chaplain; "I have seen death so often that it is not strange or fearful to me.

The Babel of Religions

Portland village in Michigan has the world beat as far as is known for the variety of religious views which pertain there according to Rev. C. A. Watkins, evangelist, who has taken a census of the situation after calling at the homes of most of the different denominations—good, bad and indifferent.

He says Catholics are considerably in the lead; Methodists come next. There are many Baptists, Congregationalists, some Presbyterians, Universalists, Wesleyan Methodists, Nazari es, Seventh Day Adventists, Holiness, Spiritnalists, and Latter Day Saints.

There are a few of the Church of Christ which Watkins represents and last if not least he says he has found two real hard-shell dyed-in-the-wool Agnostics. He doesn't say there are any Mormons, House of Davids, Holy Rollers, Free Methodists, Fire Worshipers, Mohammedans Jews, old maids or Democrats, but undoubtedly he took the census before the New York convention.

If he had not taken it until recently he probably would have found a few dissentors but nary a Democrat. These boys are nowhere to be found—the very word signifies chaos and demoralization—therefore look for the Democrats in the next world.

Marl-Diggers Visit Jackson County

ackson county is to be the second in the state to be visited by the Marl Digging Demonstration train from Michigan Agricultural College in the "marl extraction campaign" which is being conducted in twelve counties in south western Michigan this summer by the M. A. C. engineering department. The campaign opened in Livingston county during the week of July 7, with a marl-digging demonstration on a Hartland farm on July 19 and another near Gregory on July 14. A large number of Livingston county farmers were attracted to these meet tings, the small size and low operating cost of the extraction machinery and the value of the marl as a factor in soil improvement drawing chief interest.

The demonstration train which travels by motor truck from place to place, will come to Jackson from Livingston county where a demonstration is being given this week. Larry F. Livingston, M. A. C. Extension specialist in agricultural engineering, is in charge of the demonstration train.

Two demonstrations will be given in Jackson county, the first on the farm of Edwin Lutz near Munith on July 16; and the second on the John May farm near Horton on July 18. County agent R. E. Decker is in charge of the local arrangements for the demonstrations.

The campaign is being staged with a view of exhibiting to the farmers in these twelve counties an economical and profitable method of extracting marl from the numerous beds to be found in these localities, and of emphasizing the value of marl, like lime, as a soil-sweetening material, practically necessary in these counties for the growth of alfalfa and legume crops on many of the farms. Two complete outfits for digging marl are being demonstrated by the campaigners, marl actually being dug, handled from the bed to the field and placed on the field, the latter under the direction of specialists from the M. A. C. Soils Department.

PROBATE ORDER

STATE OF MICHIGAN The Probate court for the county of Hillsdale. At a session of said court held at the Probate Office in the city of Hillsdale in said county on the 10th day of June, A. D. 1924,

Present Hon, Arthur L. Guernsey. Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Jonathan Smith Mentally Incompetent. B. H. Bump, Supt. of Poor having filed in said court his petition alleging that said Jonathan Smith is a mentally incompetent person, and praying that Henry Haynes or some other suitable person be appointed as guardian of his person and estate.

It is ordered that the 15th day of July, A. D. 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that notice thereof be given by personal service of a copy of this order upon said Jonathan Smith and upon such of his nearest relatives and presumptive heirs at-law as reside within said county, at least fourteen days previous to said day of hearing.

And it is Further Ordered: That notice thereof be given to all others of his nearest relatives and presumptive heirs-at-law by a publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing in the North Adams Adcocate, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Summer is Bad For Battery

Hot weather, just like extremely cold weather, is a danger period in the life of any storage battery unless the proper care is given it. Summer weather probably is the most dangerous time the battery must pass through because the automobile is used more during this period

Motorists as a rule are prone to forget or neglect keeping the battery filled with pure distilled water in hot weather. Evaporation of the water in the solution of the battery during hot weather is rapid If the level of the water is permitted to reach a point below the tops of the plates, the upper portion is left exposed and useless. The covered portion of the plates are then obliged to assume the extra burden of the useless portion. This causes rapid overheating and damage not seen at the time, but which results in considerable expense later.

Keep Same Pressure in Hot Weather

A timely warning to autoists against reducing the air pressure in their tires during the hot summer weather is now particularly opportune. This fallacy is common among motorists who do not understand that radiation carries off any surplus heat that might otherwise be dangerous to the life of a tire.

Even during the terrific grind of the race track, wnen tires undergo, the most gruelling punishment this principle holds. It is underinflation even during the hottest days that ruins more tires than any other cause. The facts are that recommended air pressures are safe even in summer.

By reducing pressure, the increased flexing of the tire merely creates the condition which the car owner wishes to guard against. The motorist can well afford the time needed to guage the air pressure in his tires for the sake of greatly increased mileage.

G. I. Christie Heads Farmers Day Program

G. I. Christie, director of extension and experiment station work at Purdue University, and the best known and most popular speaker on agricultural topics in the country, will address the Farmers Day meeting at the Michigan Agricultural College on Friday, August 1, according to annonncement made here this week.

Along with Christie on the general program will appear Prof. J. T. Horner of the M. A. C. economics department, who will discuss effective marketing; A. M. Brown of Schoolcraft former secretary of the Michigan Agricultural College, who will trace the history of Michigan's agricultural movements under the title "Progress in Agriculture."

One of the big features of the meeting will be the annual livestock parade or "style show." Prize winners from the various M. A. C. herds and flocks will be led past the speakers' platform, while specialists from the College staff discuss the good points of the animals. The result is a combination of parade and "short course school" which proves popular with the Farm Day audiences. Dean R. S. Shaw, acting president of the M. A. C., will preside at the afternoon meeting, while a band concert will round out the program. The morning of Farmers Day is to be given over to inspection trips through the College barns and over the extensive experimental plots on the 1200-acre farm.

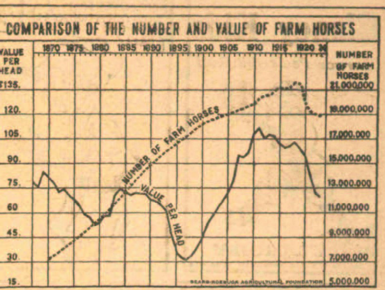
Prospects Bright for Better Horses



Both farm and city are demanding more and better horses, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

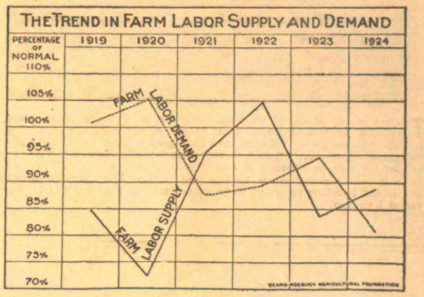
Despite the 15,281,295 automobiles and trucks in the United States, there are 18,263,000 head of horses and mules on farms today and 2,300,000 horses pulling loads in city streets. The coming of the auto and trucks reduced the equine workers in cities by 2,000,000 between 1910 and 1920, a reduction of 38 per cent. But during the last three years there has been a decided trend in the opposite direction.

Between 1910 and 1920 the horse population on farms decreased 10 per cent. On January 1, 1924, there was 18,263,000 horses, compared with 21,555,000 six years before. This was the smallest number since 1905. Still, 97 per cent of all field work is done by horses and mules.

Around 1915, under the influence of stimulated war production and replacement by mechanical power, horse prices began to decline. By January of this year average values per head were the lowest since 1903. Mule prices, unlike horses, advanced during the war, reaching their peak in 1920. In 1923 there was a third more horses and mules sold than during the previous year.

Good mares and stallions are scarce. During the war horse breeding languished. The number of colts produced failed to keep pace with the losses by death. Between 1910 and 1920 horse and mule colts combined decreased 22 per cent. The largest percentage of the horse population is old.

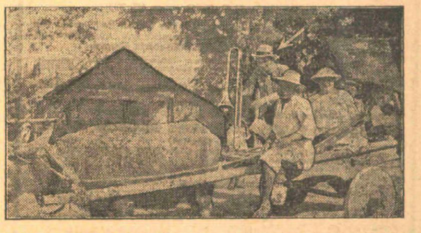
Low prices will continue to discourage horse and mule production and cause still further decrease in the population until the average price turns upward. Unless breeding operations are increased, demand will soon be greater than the supply. How soon the market turning point will be reached for the rank and file of horses is uncertain. Prices have already improved for the better than medium grades. The constantly increasing demand along with the limited supply is indicative that the turning point is not far off.



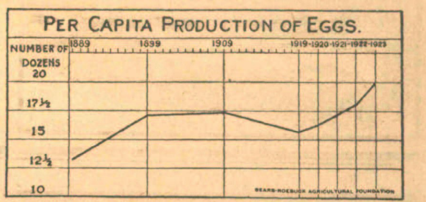
Farmers are cutting down hired help. The demand is estimated at only 89 per cent of normal as compared with 95 per cent a year ago, according to a statement issued by the Washington office of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation based on data from government sources. The low purchasing power of farm products has forced the farmer to rearrange his operations. He is coming to depend largely on his own and his family's labor. In many cases the hired man is being dispensed with entirely.

Farm help costs more today than at any other time in the past sixty-one years. Wages demanded are higher than a year ago and rates for 1923 averaged above all preceding years. The peak year in the wage scale was in 1920. That year labor was scarce. According to the accompanying chart, in June of 1920 the supply was but 73 per cent of normal, while the demand was 105 per cent of normal. During the latter half of 1920 and through the first six months of 1921, the labor supply curve took a sudden upward swing, and in June of 1921 it was 95 per cent of normal, while demand had dropped to 87 per cent. Until in June of 1922 the supply curve continued to rise, reaching its height at 105 per cent of normal, while the demand was but 89 per cent normal.

With the beginning of 1923 city labor wages improved. Large industrial centers drew farm help cityward. Farmers had to pay wages out of proportion to what the farm could earn to hold their men. In June of 1923 the demand saw 95 per cent of normal, while the supply curve was sagging to 84 per cent. The latter half of the year demand lessened, due to excessive labor costs and the increasing supply. This year demand has made still further decline, until now it is but 81 per cent of normal, while labor supply, which is gradually increasing, is estimated around 89 per cent.



TRAVEL DE LUXE in the Philippines, according to Homer Rodeheaver, celebrated chorister, who is shown riding with as much comfort as possible at one stage of his trip around the world. This speed was the best he could do under the circumstances to reach America in time for Sacred Music Week, to be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 16 to 21, where he will be one of the leading figures.



So rapidly is the poultry industry expanding that within a short time over production may cut the farmer's poultry dollar unless production can be maintained at a lower cost, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

A recent survey shows that more than 5,000,000 farms in this country produce poultry and eggs. It is estimated that there were 491,000,000 chickens on farms before the hatching season started. This is an increase of over 50,000,000, or nearly 12 per cent over figures of a year ago and 121,000,000, or over 33 per cent increase since January 1, 1920.

Production of eggs increased 33.3 per cent between 1920 and 1923 while the population increased only 5.3 per cent. In the past five years the estimates of egg production have shown a close correlation with the estimated number of chickens on hand at the beginning of the year, the ratio being 4.6 dozens per fowl. If the same ratio holds good, egg production in 1924 will gain 10 to 12 per cent over 1923 when it showed a gain of 33 per cent over four years ago.

Profitable poultry production at the present stage of expansion is dependent upon the present high level of demand. Up to date consumption has kept pace with production. In 1923 enough eggs were produced to furnish 20 dozen for every man, woman and child in the United States. This would mean 100 dozen for the average family of five.

Let's Pull Together

All over America distracted high school principals are calling upon the parents to help stem the tide of immorality rising in their schools.

In Kalamazoo, where some startling revelations have been made, a circular letter has gone to the parents, asking for their cooperation and insisting that the school cannot handle the problem alone.

Santa Anna, California, called two big mass meetings of parents and teachers and the superintendent of schools laid the facts before the crowd and the Press says that "his frankness and the astounding facts he set forth had the effect of a boomshell."

"Blame for the asserted laxness in the morals of the pupils, boys and girls, was placed on the shoulders of the parents, who, Cranston declared, have not been able to learn the true facts through their indifference. He said the schools have done all they can to stamp out immorality, but can make no headway without the parents efforts

"In addition to censuring parents for indifference, Superintendent Cranston asserted that the moral breakdown of the youth of today is traceable directly to automobile joy rides, beach bathing parties and dancing.

"It was learned at the meetings that the school authorities have withdrawn approval of any social activities officially held at school affairs until the investigation has been completed."

There may be some who will say that the school's too frequent disregard of the ideals of the parents has brought this condition upon us. Protests from "conscientious objectors" to the social dissipations of high schools have been too frequently ruled out or ignored, they say.

But this is no time to be blaming each other. This is the time for active cooperation, as neither can get anywhere alone.

Two things can be done. The teachers and the preachers in every town can get together on September first and remember that they are co-workers for the community's growth. To eat together in fellowship would prevent many future misunderstandings.

Secondly, the teachers and the preachers could map out together the season's program respecting each other's plans and purposes setting aside definite nights for church and school activities and pulling together like a team instead of scolding each other like bluejays.

TO PARENTS OF HIGH SCHOOL CHILDREN

This letter is sent to you for the purpose of apprising you of the facts regarding a few high school students who have a great deal of undesirable publicity in the local and state papers within the last few days.

Every parent should know that the total enrollment in Central High School has been slightly in excess of 1400. Out of 30 people who have been called before the court, 12 of them are from the Central High School. All have been suspended and will be re-admitted to school only upon orders from the Board of Education.

The principal, assistant principal and teachers of Central High School wish to disclaim any responsibility for what has taken place among high school students after school hours when students were not under the jurisdiction of the school. We wish to state emphatically that this situation is not the fault of the school, the school authorities, or the teachers, in any way.

We wish to thank the parents of our students who have co-operated with us this year and to ask for a continuance of this policy. We believe that a more complete understanding between parents and school will result in lasting benefit to the school, the parents and the children May we conclude with a list of questions which we wish parents would ponder seriously?

1. Do your children have any regular work to do outside of school hours? 2. Do you permit them to go to suggestive movies and cheap dirty vaudeville performances? 3. Do they attend public dances? Do they attend parties on school nights? 4. Do they read lewd magazines and books? There are many of these on sale in this city. 5. Do you permit your child to have the famiiy automobile? Have you purchased an automobile for him? 6. Do you permit him to drive an automobile to school? In our estimation this is one of the most pernicious practices now indulged in by high school children. 7. Does your girl come to school dressed suitably and modestly 8. Are you able to say "No" to your child or do you have the "Yes" habit? 9. Do you know where your children are day and night? 10. Have your children lost reverence for and fear of God? Is there any religious or moral instruction in the home? 11. How many Parents Teachers' meetings have you attended this year? 12. When you are asked to chaperone student's parties both at school and elsewhere do you do it or are you too busy? When parties are held in your home are you present all the time? 13 Do your children entertain their friends at your home or by driving around in autos? 14. When you permit your child to stay all night with a friend, do you know who the friend is? 15. How much time do you spend with your children daily? Parents who spend no time with their children rapidly lose their confidence and cease to have influence over them.

The principal and faculty of Central High School greatly deplore the present situation and are co-operating in every way to clear the matter up. Nothing has been done to suppress any information: everything that we know has been made known to parents. Like all true friends of the school we are extremely sorry to see the diligent work of years torn down by a happening of this sort. It appears to us that this is a time when all real friends of the school should stand by it.

We would like to ask high school parents to remember the good things that this school has done both this year and in the past and kindly to bear in mind that the school is not responsible for the present condition among a dozen of its students.— Christian Advocate

Train Of Silk Speeds Along

What is thought to be record time for a freight consignment was made on the Michigan Central railroad, when a large train, composed entirely of silk shipments, passed through Jackson recently. The running time from Chicago to Jackson over 200 miles, was four hours and 20 minutes. The train was held up at Augusta for ten minutes on account of hitting an automobile at a grade crossing. The machine was demolished, but the driver jumped when he saw the approaching train.

The time from Jackson to Ann Arbor, a distance of 38 miles, was made in exactly 37 minutes, while the running time from here to Detroit was 1 hour and 17 minutes. It is said that the silk shippers are experimenting with various railroad systems in an endeavor to see which route will make the best time and the record made by the Michigan Central is proof of the wonderful advancement of steam transportation during the past few years.

Radio Facts

Few persons need to be told how rapidly radio is interpenetrating every part of our daily life. A writer has contributed to June Century a most comprehensive article.

More than 2,500,000 radio sets have been manufactured and sold in the last three years in this country, with 560 broadcasting stations in operation in our United States, and 16,000 amateur transmitters sending and receiving by radio.

According to engineers of the Radio Corporation, 3,000 manufacturers are turning out sets or parts of sets, thirty radio magazines have been started, 250 books have been written, 20,000,000 listeners constitute the present (spring of 1924) radio audience, and these spent $175,000,000 on their hobby last year, giving employment in one way or another to 500,000 persons. There are twelve transoceanic stations, which communicate not only with Europe and Latin Americo but with 2700 radio equipped ships.

Mistake Bean Maggot For Weevil Damage

Published reports from various sections of Michigan that bean weevil damage has appeared, are incorrect, the losses really being due to the bean maggot, according to authorities at the Agricultural College in the entymology department.

"The bean weevil which has been confused with the maggot, does not show at this time of the year" says the Professor. "and we have reason to believe that the weevil will not be particularly bad this year. Considerable damage has apparently been done this year by the bean maggot, however. The belated spring which resulted in a late fitting of the ground, and the fact that many of our bean growers forgot that deeply sowed beans are more likely to be attacked by the bean maggot, undoubtedly account for damage which is reported.

Bean maggots are in the soil to begin with and are not brought in with the seed. We had a bad maggot year during the war, conditions this season being largely a repitition.

BAPTIST MINISTER GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

No greater praise can be accorded a medicine than the voluntary testimony of a minister of the gospel. The preacher's high calling puts a grave responsibility on his every word, and he will not jeopardize his reputation by commending a thing without first assuring himself it is all right.

Tanlac has been endorsed by numbers of prominent ministers. They have put Tanlac to the test of personal service and their words carry conviction because they say what they know to be the truth.

One of the latest to speak out in behalf of Tanlac is Rev. B. E. Bell, a retired Baptist minister, 207 Elm St., San Antonio, Texas, who says:

"Before taking Tanlac I had suffered from stomach and nerve troubles for over 30 years and there were times when my condition was such that it required almost superhuman effort for me to prepare my sermons and go through with my Sunday services. Indeed, my work seemed like some great obstacle across my pathway—a burden too big to carry in my weak physical condition.

"But in six weeks' time Tanlac transformed my entire outlook, giving me what seemed like a new set of nerves and a brand-new digestive system. My appetite became ravenous, my nerves steady, my liver action regular and I could sleep sound for the first time in years. Whenever I have the slightest symptoms of trouble now I always resort to Tanlac, am taking some at present, and it never fails to smooth things out for me. I certainly have the best of reasons for feeling grateful to Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation; made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

Triumph No Mere Man Can Ever Experience

"You must have noticed that sidelong glance of the woman's eye as the other woman passes in the street.

"You will not call it a stare; it is a swift glance of the eye. My cat can imitate it to perfection, when I pass through the room in which she seems to be asleep on the best chair. Sudden as is that glance, it has taken in all that is noteworthy about the other woman's hat.

"The wearer will go calmly onward without any outward sign of pride. She also has glanced at a hat which may not be of the quality of her hat. In that exchange of fire, she has triumphed. But a man would never know which impassive face was under the victorious hat or which the vanquished.

"Doubtless the custom gives a spice to life. For a woman with a new hat of the right sort, it must give to the little journey of shopping the flavor of a voyage in a dashing privateer which is ready to engage all strange sail."—From "Day In and Day Out," by "The Londoner" of the Evening News.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Greenland Whales

The Greenland whale has a small gullet. It can swallow only small objects. But the sperm whale or cachalot, has an enormous throat, easily big enough to swallow lumps of deep sea squid weighing upward of 60 pounds.

There is little difference in the respective size of these two species of whales. Of course there is a vast difference in the size of individual whales of either species. Take a range between 30 tons and 100 tons, and you will find most whales come within these limits, although my father, one of the old-school whalers out of Peterhead, told me he had cut in a sperm whale registering 120 tons.

A whale does not spawn. Whales are not fish nor reptiles, but mammals. They bring forth calves as land cows do, and suckle them at the breast. As for enemies, there is the thresher whale, which gangs together and licks Mr. Whale—sometimes—and the giant squid, which the whale eats. The whale is a whale of a survivor against all but man.—Captain Dingle in Adventure Magazine.

Italian Secret Society

Camorra was the name of a secret society, formerly existing in Naples and the vicinity, the members of which were called Camorristi. For many years it terrorized the country, plundering the inhabitants and extorting money from all trades and occupations. It also transported smuggled goods and contracted for the commission of desperate crimes. The Camorristi were long tolerated for political reasons and rendered efficient aid to the cause of Garibaldi in the expulsion of the Bourbons; but some years after they proved so annoying to the newly established government of Italy that in 1874 they were banished.—Kansas City Star.

If a man is not great in little things he lacks the element of true greatness.

Both Right and Wrong

Men too frequently believe they deserve all the good that comes to them, and very little of the bad. They may be as wrong regarding the one as the other. As a rule they are right only when by honest introspection they have consciousness of deserving.—Grit.

"There are many here who have nothing to wear but blankets with armholes, belted by a length of rope. There are hundreds who have no blankets to cover them at night. They have to take turns sitting by the fire while others are asleep. For them a night's rest is impossible. Let this letter be read to the people of Albany and may they not lie down to sleep until they have stirred themselves in our behalf, and if any man dares to pray to God to help us until he has given of his abundance to that end and besought his neighbors to do the same, I could wish that his praying would choke him. Are we worthy to be saved—that is the question. If we expect God to furnish the flannel and the shoe leather, we are not. That is our part of the great task. Are we going to shirk it and fail?

"We are making a real army. The men who are able to work are being carefully trained by the crusty old Baron Steuben and a number of French officers."

That they did not fail was probably due to the fact that there were men in the army like this one who seemed to have some little understanding of the will of God and the duty of man. This letter and others like it, traveled far and wide and more than a million hands began to work for the army.

The Schuylkill was on one side of the camp and wooded ridges, protected by entrenchments, on the other. Trees were felled and log huts constructed, 16 by 14 feet in size. Twelve privates were quartered in each hut.

The Gates propaganda was again being pushed. Anonymous letters complaining that Washington was not protecting the people of Pennsylvania and New Jersey from depredations were appearing in sundry newspapers. By and by a committee of investigation arrived from congress. They left satisfied that Washington had done well to keep his army alive, and that he must have help or a large part of it would die of cold and hunger.

It was on a severe day in March that Washington sent for Jack Irons. The scout found the general sitting alone by the fireside in his office which was part of a small farmhouse. He was eating a cold luncheon of baked beans and bread without butter. Jack had just returned from Philadelphia where he had risked his life as a spy, of which adventure no details are recorded.

The general arose and went to his desk and returned with sealed letters in his hand and said:

"Colonel, I have a task for you. I could give it to no man in whom I had not the utmost confidence. You have earned a respite from the hardships and perils of this army. Here is a purse and two letters. With them I wish you to make your way to France as soon as possible and turn over the letters to Franklin. The doctor is much is need of help. Put your services at his disposal. A ship will be leaving Boston on the 14th. A good horse has been provided; your route is mapped. You will need to start after the noon mess. For the first time in ten days there will be fresh beef on the tables. Two hundred blankets have arrived and more are coming. After they have eaten, give the men a farewell talk and put them in good heart, if you can. We are going to celebrate the winter's end which cannot be long delayed. When you have left the table, Hamilton will talk to the boys in his witty and inspiring fashion."

Soon after one o'clock on the 7th of March, 1778, Colonel Irons bade Solomon good-by and set out on his long journey.

CHAPTER XXIII

In France With Franklin.

Jack shipped in the packet Mercury, of 70 tons, under Capt. Simeon Sampson, one of America's ablest naval commanders. She had been built for rapid sailing and when, the second day out, they saw a British frigate bearing down upon her they wore ship and easily ran away from their enemy. Their first landing was at St. Martin on the Isle de Rhe. They crossed the island on mules, being greeted with the cry:

"Voila les braves Bostones!"

In France the word Bostone meant American revolutionist. At the ferry they embarked on a long gabbone for La Rochelle. There the young man enjoyed his first repose on a French lit built up of sundry layers of feather beds.

In the morning he set out in a heavy vehicle of two wheels, drawn by three horses. Its postillion in frizzed and powdered hair, under a cocked hat, with a long queue on his back and in great boots, hooped with iron, rode a lively little bidet. Such was the French stagecoach of those days, its running gear having been planned with an eye to economy, since vehicles were taxed according to the number of their wheels. The diary informs one that when the traveler stopped for food at an inn, he was expected to furnish his own knife. The highways were patrolled, night and day, by armed horsemen and robberies were unknown. The vineyards were not walled or fenced. All travelers had a license to help themselves to as much fruit as they might wish to eat when it was on the vines.

They arrived at Chantenay on a cold rainy evening. They were settled in their rooms, happy that they had protection from the weather, when their landlord went from room to room informing them that they would have to move on.

"Why?" Jack ventured to inquire.

"Because a seigneur has arrived."

"A seigneur!" Jack exclaimed.

"Oui, Monsieur. He is a very great man."

"But suppose we refuse to go," said Jack.

"Then, Monsieur, I shall detain your horses. It is a law of le grand monarque."

There was no dodging it. The coach and horses came back to the inn door. The passengers went out into the dark, rainy night to plod along in the mud, another six miles or so, that the seigneur and his suite could enjoy that comfort the weary travelers had been forced to leave. Such was the power of privilege with which the great Louis had saddled his kingdom.

They proceeded to Ancenis, Angers and Breux. The last stage from Versailles to Paris was called the post royale. There the postillion had to be dressed like a gentleman. It was a magnificent avenue, crowded every afternoon by the wealth and beauty of the kingdom, in gorgeously painted coaches, and lighted at night by great lamps, with double reflectors, over its center. They came upon it in the morning on their way to the capital. There were few people traveling at that hour. Suddenly ahead they saw a band of horsemen riding at a wild gallop. They were the king's couriers.

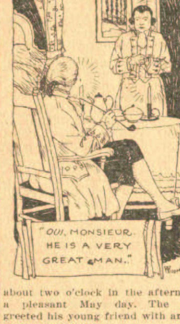
"Clear the way," they shouted. "The king's hunt is coming."

All travelers, hearing this command, made quickly for the sidings, there to draw rein and dismount. The deer came in sight, running for its life, the king close behind with all his train, the hounds in full cry. Near Jack the deer bounded over a hedge and took a new direction. His majesty—a short, stout man with blue eyes and aquiline nose, wearing a lace-cocked hat and brown velvet coatee and high boots with spurs—dismounted not twenty feet from the stagecoach, saying with great animation:

"Vite! Donnez moi un cheval frais."

Instantly remounting, he bounded over the hedge, followed by his train.

A letter from Jack presents all this color of the journey and avers that he reached the house of Franklin in Passy about two o'clock in the afternoon of a pleasant May day. The savant greeted his young friend with an affectionate embrace.



"OUI, MONSIEUR. HE IS A VERY GREAT MAN."

"Sturdy son of my beloved country, you bring me joy and a new problem," he said.

"What is the problem?" Jack inquired.

"That of moving Margaret across the channel. I have a double task now. I must secure the happiness of America and of Jack Irons."

He read the dispatches and then the doctor and the young man set out in a coach for the palace of Vergennes, the prime minister. Colonel Irons was filled with astonishment at the tokens of veneration for the white-haired man which he witnessed in the streets of Paris.

"The person of the king could not have attracted more respectful attention," he writes. "A crowd gathered about the coach when we were leaving it and every man stood with uncovered head as we passed on our way to the palace door. In the crowd there was much whispered praise of 'Le grand savant.' I did not understand this until I met, in the office of the Compte de Vergennes, the eloquent Senator Gabriel Honore Riquetti de Mirabeau. What an impressive name! Yet I think he deserves it. He has the eye of Mars and the hair of Samson and the tongue of an angel, I am told. In our talk, I assured him that in Philadelphia Franklin came and went and was less observed than the town crier.

"'But your people seem to adore him,' I said.

"'As if he were a god,' Mirabeau answered. 'Yes, it is true and it is right. Has he not, like Jove, hurled the lightning of Heaven in his right hand? Is he not an unpunished Prometheus? Is he not breaking the scepter of a tyrant?'

"Going back to his home where in the kindness of his heart he had asked me to live, he endeavored, modestly, to explain the evidences of high regard which were being showered upon him.

"'It happens that my understanding and small control of a mysterious and violent force of nature has appealed to the imaginations of these people,' he said. 'I am the only man who has used thunderbolts for his playthings. Then, too, I am speaking for a new world to an old one. Just at present I am the voice of Human Liberty. I represent the hunger of the spirit of man. It is very strong here. You have not traveled so far in France without seeing thousands of beggars. They are everywhere. But you do not know that when a child comes in a poor family, the father and mother go to prison pour mois de nourrice. It is a pity that the poor cannot keep their children at home. This old kingdom is a muttering Vesuvius, growing hotter year by year, with discontent. You will presently hear its voices.'"

There was a dinner that evening at Franklin's house, at which the Marquis de Mirabeau, M. Turgot, the Madame de Brillon, the Abbe Raynal and the Compte and Comptesse d' Haudetot, Colonel Irons and three other American gentlemen were present. The Madame de Brillon was first to arrive. She entered with a careless, jaunty air and ran to meet Franklin and caught his hand and gave him a double kiss on each cheek and one on his forehead and called him "papa."

"At table she sat between me and Doctor Franklin," Jack writes. "She frequently locked her hand in the doctor's and smiled sweetly as she looked into his eyes. I wonder what the poor, simple, hard-working Deborah Franklin would have thought of these familiarities. Yet here, I am told, no one thinks ill of that kind of thing. The best women of France seem to treat their favorites with like tokens of regard. Now and then she spread her arms across the backs of our chairs, as if she would have us feel that her affection was wide enough for both.

"She assured me that all the women of France were in love with le grand savant.

"Franklin, hearing the compliment, remarked: 'It is because they pity my age and infirmities. First we pity, then embrace, as the great Mr. Pope has written.'

"'We think it a compliment that the greatest intellect in the world is willing to allow itself to be, in a way, captured by the charms of women,' Madame Brillon declared.

"As the dinner proceeded the Abbe Raynal asked the doctor if it was true that there were signs of degeneracy in the average male American.

"'Let the facts before us be my answer,' said Franklin. 'There are at this table four Frenchmen and four Americans. Let these gentlemen stand up.'

"The Frenchmen were undersized, the Abbe himself being a mere shrimp of a man. The Americans, Carmichael, Harmer, Humphries and myself, were big men, the shortest being six feet tall. The contrast raised a laugh among the ladies. Then said Franklin in his kindnest tones:

"'My dear Abbe, I am aware that manhood is not a matter of feet and inches. I only assure you that these are average Americans and that they are pretty well filled with brain and spirit.'

"The Abbe spoke of a certain printed story on which he had based his judgment.

"Franklin laughed and answered: 'I know that is a fable, because I wrote it myself one day, long ago, when we were short of news.'"

The guests having departed, Franklin asked the young man to sit down for a talk by the fireside. The doctor spoke of the women of France, saying:

"'You will not understand them or me unless you remind yourself that we are in Europe and that it is the Eighteenth century. Here the clocks are lagging. Time moves slowly. With the poor it stands still. They know not the thing we call progress.'

"'Those who have money seem to be very busy having fun.' I said.

Real Color of Gold

Few persons are familiar with the real color of gold, because it is seldom seen except when heavily alloyed, a state in which it is much redder than when it is pure. The purest coins ever made were the $50 pieces which were once in common use in California. Their coinage was abandoned because the loss by abrasion was so great and because their interior could be bored out and filled with lead. They were octagonal in shape and were the most valuable coins ever minted and circulated. All gold is not alike when refined. Australian gold is distinctly redder than that taken in California. Moreover, placer gold is more yellow than that which is taken from quartz. This is one of the mysteries of metallurgy, because the gold in placers comes from that which is in quartz. The gold in the Ural mountains is the reddest in the world.

Smoking Introduced in America by Chinese

The Indian long has enjoyed the reputation of having invented the pipe and bequeathed to white men the joys of tobacco. Recent discoveries in the West indicate, however, that the Indian in turn may have inherited the smoking habit from a much earlier period, and that smoking was introduced into America by the Chinese at some remote time. It is certain that the East Indians have been smoking for some two thousand years.

Long before tobacco was discovered smoking had become a fine art. Babylon doubtless had many smokers who were as particular about their pipes and brands as any one today. They smoked different woods and herbs and paid special attention to blending them to get the desired flavor. A piece of wood was burned to a charcoal, and smoked in an ornamented pipe. When the charcoal was red hot a powder was dropped on it and the resulting smoke was inhaled. Throughout Central Asia in remote times smokers were common and were exacting about the "tobacco," or whatever it was they smoked. They used the gum from trees, bark and many aromatic herbs and smoked various kinds of flowers.

Soldiers have been smokers from remote antiquity. The Russian military camps still yield pipes. The ruins of Roman cities, notably Pompeii, show that smoking must have been common. Many of the pipe designs were most elaborate.—New York Times.

USE CONCRETE FOR PERMANENCE

Concrete Pavements Remain True and Even

Right here in your own state you as a motorist have abundant opportunity to know the advantages of concrete pavements.

Wet or dry, Concrete Pavements are skid-proof. They are free of bumps and holes. Built according to present-day high standards, they withstand the pounding grind of the heaviest traffic.

You will find that even under the heat of desert sun, their surface remains true.

And should night overtake you, you can follow the light gray surface of Concrete easily and with every sense of security.

Think, too, of the all around economy of Concrete Roads and Streets—the saving in gasoline, the longer life of your car—repairs built out, maintenance built in.

Remember that standard Concrete Pavement is made of a definitely proportioned mixture of sand and pebbles, or broken stone, held together by the everlasting grip of that tenacious binder, portland cement.

* * *

Watch for advertisements telling about the many other uses of concrete. And remember that the Portland Cement Association has a free personal service to offer you. Whether you use concrete or have it used for you, this service will give you more for your money.

Our booklet R-4 tells many interesting things about Concrete Streets. Write this office for your copy.

The house was most tastefully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white even to the refreshments. Huge bouquets of roses adorned the living rooms.

Once upon a time, we took a walk of five miles at one shift and felt rather tired upon reaching our destination. One could not help admiring the spirit of the thousands of Klansmen, Klanswomen and young folks who marched over 8 miles under a July sun in Jackson Friday. Over on Ganson street, we helped carry water to the marchers and in so doing secured a glimpse of Catholicism of the present day. We saw Catholics refuse Klansmen a drink of water and we saw others who also refused because it appeared that they were afraid that the Catholics might retaliate later on. On mechanic street, we heard a girl expressing her hatred for the Klansmen while in a Jackson street grocery store we saw a foreigner who had murder in his eye. Leaders of the Romanists say that their church never changes and judging by our little experiences we believe those leaders were correct, And if the Roman church never changes the chances are that it would slaughter people by the millions as it did in the past ages, if it only had the majority of people inside its folds.

Death of Mrs. Fred Denning

On Monday the community was shocked to learn of the sudden demise of Mrs. Mina Denning which occurred at the Wood farm near the Aldrich school house at six p. m. of that day. Mr. and Mrs. Denning had been spending the summer at the Wood farm.

Mina Dibble was born Dec. 25 1864, in the township of Moscow the eldest daughter of George and Mary Dibble. She was married to Fred Denning July 16, 1882 and they resided on the farm one mile south and one-half mile east of this village for 28 years, after which they removed to town in November 1912. About 1910 she suffered a sun-stroke and had never been well after.

Mrs. Denning was Past Noble Grand of Abigail Rebekah Lodge No. 42, and at the time of ner death she was financial secretary She was a member of the Friendship Club. She leaves to mourn her husband, Frederick Denning two brothers, Clare Dibble and Leon Dibble of Bay City and a nephew, Essel Dibble, also one great aunt, Cary Gould.

Mrs. Denning was a good citizen, a loving wife and her presence will be greatly missed from our midst. She was a highly respected member of the fraternity which depended upon her capable services.

Funeral services were conducted from their late home in North Adams at one o'clock p. m. Thursday, Rev. Virgil Hunt of the Congregational church officiating, and she was laid to rest in the midst of beautiful floral tributes at the local cemetery north of town.

Card of Thanks

Our sincerest thanks are tendered the kind friends who have assisted us in the hour of sorrow the members of Abigail Rebekah Lodge, No. 42, for their loving services, Rev. Hunt for his words of comfort, the singers for the beautiful hymns and the neighbors for their remembrances.

Death of W. S. Sayles

Will Sayles whose serious illness was mentioned last week, passed away last Friday morning at the age of 68 years, ten months and 26 days He had been a resident of this village since 1889 and was a highly respected citizen. Funeral services were conducted at 2:00 p. m. from the late home by his pastor, Rev. W. W. Gray on Tuesday, being largely attended, and interment was in the local cemetery. A more complete obituary will appear next week.

Death Of Mrs. Clara French

Clara Leonard French was born in Bradford Co. Pa. Jan. 20. 1835 and departed this life to be with Jesus at the home of her daughter Mrs. Albert Dietz in North Adams Mich. July 3rd 1924. She was married to Chas. J. French on Feb. 14 1854. To this union were born six children.

In 1883 Mr. and Mrs. French and children came to Hillsdale County and since made that Co. their home. The husband and father has been waiting the past nine years to welcome her to their heavenly home. She was converted when about sixty five years of age and joined the M. E. church of which she was a consistent member to the last, and we know "she hath done what she could".

Her hope was sure built on nothing less than Jesus blood and his righteousness. She leaves to mourn. their loss, two daughters, one grand child, two great grandchildren, besides many dear friends. We shall miss her, but we are looking forward to the great reunion beyond

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our kind neighbors and friends and business men too, for their help and sympathy in our late bereavement, also for their beautiful floral offerings.

A Pleasant Gathering

Thursday July3 at 5:30 a large car drove into the yard at the home of F. W. Rock, bearing the name Waukesha in large letters across the front. At the wheel sat Darrel Rock, second son of Mr. Rock and his brother, Fred Rock, the fifth and youngest son of Racine, wisconsin. On the back seat were their wives and Miss Mildred Rock, youngest of the family, employed at Milwaukee, also the two children of Fred Rock little Buddie and Virginia.

They left Racine at 4:00 in the morning and had a very delightful trip with no auto trouble.

They drove to Hillsdale to meet Geo. Rock who came home for the holiday vacation with his family on the farm.

As Alonzo Rock of Detroit had recently moved his family here, they could be present, and when Carl Rock and family of Jonesville came there was a very happy reunion of the grown-up children, all being home except the eldest daughter, Mrs. H. C. Morrison, who resides in New York City.

All grand-children with the exception of Darrel's 3 boys, were present Leland Rock, 14 years old and a pair of twin boys, Robert and Albert, who were with their grandmother Mrs. Jay Rice, on a farm at Millington, Mich., and could not get here. Twelve merry children celebrated with fireworks on the lawn the evening of the 4th. Alma and Allen, twins, and little sister, Lila May, of this town, also Elda, Ruth, William, Floyd and Masson, Geo. Rock, Wilfred and Roland of Jonesville, and Buddie and Virginia of Racine, Wisconsin. They all had to leave for home Sunday morning at 4:00 p, m.

About 8:00 a. m. Mr. Rock's brothers with their wives, sons and grand children from Toledo, Ohio crove in. Ed Rock, who has been on the police force of Toledo for 20 years, his wife and two sons, Frank and Will, and two daughters, Mrs. Nellie Fitcomyre of Detroit and Mrs. Esther McCarthy of Chicago, her husband, Frank McCarthy, 18 children and 22 grown-ups sat down to the picnic dinner and a merry party took their departure in the early evening for Toledo.

Protect The Streets

There is a tendency in parts of the village to place grass and debris from the lawns in the gravel street which makes it hard for the road caretaker to run the scraper The grader will clog with this debris and thus it is a general nuisance. Hard rains will float it into the steel culbert and there it may cause congestion. The commissioner of streets very kindly requests that the practice be stopped.

Annual School Meeting

The annual school meeting of District No. 3 was held Monday evening with a fairly good attendance. Jay North, president of the board, took charge of the meeting and Mesdames Walworth and Bleech were appointed tellers Hovever, most of the voting was vive voce.

It was voted to raise $6,000 for general expenses this year and $1,000 for an entire new system of plumbing both fountains and closets, but it was estimated the job might cost $1,500. Secretary McLaughlin had very systematically placed on the blackboard a splendid report of the finances so all could read just how it stood.

James McLaughlin and Jay North whose terms on the board had expired, were unanimously re-elected.

The following is the faculty for the ensuing year: Supt., R. C. Young; principal, T. N. Lamb; senior high, Gertrude Getter; junior high, Mary Frytag, Jackson intermediate, Mrs. Theldon N. Lamb; primary. Mrs. Etta Pray, Jonesville.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democrats Pick Davis and Bryan—LaFollette Runs as Independent.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE Democratic national convention Wednesday afternoon nominated for President John W. Davis of West Virginia and New York city. At 2:30 Thursday morning it nominated for vice president Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, brother of William Jennings Bryan.

The one hundredth ballot at four o'clock Wednesday morning, following the withdrawal of McAdoo and Smith, saw the beginning of the end of the deadlock. The next ballot, first of Wednesday's day session, scattered the opposing forces. On the one hundred and second the Davis band wagon got started and on the one hundred and third it was a stampede to climb aboard. During the stampede Taggart of Indiana moved the nomination of Davis by acclamation. The convention answered with a roar of approval. Chairman Walsh pronounced the nominee unanimously chosen.

The convention thereupon tried then and there to nominate Walsh for vice president. But he would not have it so and gaveled through an adjournment to 8:30 p. m. During the recess he sent in a letter heading off the threatened nomination. E. T. Meredith of Iowa, former secretary of agriculture, also asked to be eliminated from consideration.

Twelve candidates for vice president were named at the night session including Mrs. Leroy Springs, national committeewoman from South Carolina; Governor Bryan, Alvin Owsley of Texas, former national commander of the American Legion; Gen. John C. Greenway of Arizona, distinguished soldier and mining engineer; Maj. George L. Berry of Tennessee, president of the International Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America, and Bennett Clark of Missouri, son of Champ Clark. But Nominee Davis, who had immediately taken charge of affairs, picked Bryan as a strategic move to bring his brother into camp. The first ballot was marked by almost innumerable changes of vote and by withdrawals, but its result gave Bryan the nomination by this vote: Bryan, 739; Berry, 209; Mrs. Springs, 18; Clark, 51; the rest scattering.

During Wednesday's night session Nominee Davis appeared on the platform and won the crowd with his distinguished personality and his eloquent call to battle. Gov. Al Smith also appeared, said he was grateful, not disappointed, told how he would work for the ticket and received a tremendous tribute from the adoring assemblage.

Thus ended the record-breaking Democratic national convention of 1924 on the fourteenth working day.

MONDAY morning's first ballot, the 78th, gave McAdoo 511, Smith 363 and J. W. Davis 73 as compared with his high-water of 130 on the 23rd ballot, July 1. During Monday the anti-McAdoo forces whittled down his vote until on the 86th Smith passed him, the vote standing, McAdoo, 353; Smith, 360. The six ballots of Tuesday's day session brought McAdoo down to 314 and Smith down to 355 and jumped Ralston up to 196 from 98. Adjournment was then taken after the 93rd ballot.

Smith sought out McAdoo at 4 p. m. After a 40-minute talk Smith asked McAdoo, "Will you get out if I do?" McAdoo answered "No."

Tuesday's night session opened with announcement by Taggart of Ralston's unqualified withdrawal. Next, Franklin Roosevelt informed the convention that he had been authorized by Smith to withdraw his name if McAdoo would do the same, otherwise the Smith forces would stick. The immediate result was shown by the 94th ballot which jumped McAdoo's vote 81 points to a total of 395, Smith holding his own at 364, and Davis advancing 3 points to 82. On the 95th ballot Davis jumped to 139 and on the 99th to 210. Then, at 2 a. m. Wednesday, McAdoo's letter of withdrawal was read. The century ballot, the last of the session, gave McAdoo 190, Smith 351 and Davis 203, with Meredith jumping from 37 to 75.

JOHN WILLIAM DAVIS of West Virginia since 1921 has been a New York lawyer whose practice is largely among corporations and banks, because of which William Jennings Bryan persistently opposed him as a "representative of Wall street." He is fifty-one years of age and was born in Clarksburg, W. Va., the son of John J. and Anna (Kennedy) Davis. He took from Washington and Lee university his A. B. in 1892 and his LL. B. in 1895. He has been awarded the degree of LL. D. by half a dozen universities at home and abroad. He also enjoys the honor, rare among American lawyers, of being a bencher of Middle Temple, London. He practiced law in Clarksburg from 1897 to 1913, took a hand in state and national politics and was elected to congress in 1911. President Wilson made him solicitor general in 1913 and in 1918 appointed him ambassador to Great Britain. He was president of the American Bar association two years ago. He is a Phi Beta Kappa and a Phi Kappa Psi, a Mason and a Presbyterian. His first wife died in 1900. He married, January 2, 1912, Ellen G. Bassel. He has one daughter.

CHARLES W. BRYAN was born in Salem, Ill., February 10, 1867. He was educated at the old Chicago university and as a young man went to Lincoln, Neb., where William Jennings Bryan had preceded him. He became identified with his brother in politics in 1896. He was associate editor of Bryan's publication, The Commoner. He was selected in 1915 as mayor by the city commissioners of Lincoln. He established a municipal coal yard from which he retailed all over the state. He was elected governor after truce had been declared between the Nebraska Democratic factions headed by his brother and by former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock. He claims to have effected a saving of $1,000,000 in operating expenses of the state government. He married in 1892 Miss Elizabeth Brokaw of Salem. There are two grown-up children. Governor Bryan is not a member of any church; his wife and children are Baptists.

ROBERT MARION LAFOLLETTE, since 1905 United States Republican senator from Wisconsin, invites the dissatisfied voters of the country to register their disapproval of existing conditions by voting for him as an independent candidate for the Presidency. He has been indorsed by the Progressive national conference and by the Socialist national convention. He and a committee will select a running mate. A convention is to be held in January of 1925 to organize a permanent and independent new party. The Socialist national convention condemned the Ku Klux Klan by name and elected Eugene V. Debs national chairman.

Duncan McDonald and William Bouck, named for President and vice president by the new national Farmer-Labor party at its St. Paul convention, have been asked to resign in favor of LaFollette and his unknown running mate. The Workers' party, of which William Z. Foster is the head, announces that it will fight LaFollette. The National Independent party refused to accept LaFollette and Wednesday nominated a President and vice president.

Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, "Republican," insurgent leader in the house and LaFollette's campaign manager, says that if they cannot win a majority of the electoral college they stand a good chance of throwing the election of the next President into the house and that they will take an active part in the congressional elections of next fall with the purpose of maintaining their balance of power in both houses.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, JR., aged sixteen, younger son of President Coolidge, died Monday night in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, from blood poisoning resulting from blistering his foot while playing tennis with his brother, John, on the White House grounds. The boy made a heroic fight for life and medical science did its best for him.

President Coolidge forbade all official pomp and ceremony. Wednesday afternoon there was a simple service in the White House. Thursday morning there was a formal church service in Northampton, Mass., the boy's birthplace. Thursday afternoon he was laid to rest in the family burial lot at Plymouth, Vt., the home of his ancestors.

Official messages of condolence came from all the world. The vast assemblage in Madison Square garden heard the news with a groan and the convention adjourned. Washington city kept silence for five minutes during the White House service. The heart of the nation went out—not to the "President and First Lady of the Land," but to his father and mother. For to the American people the Coolidges are "folks." And young Cal was a real American boy.

ARKANSAS, in which 19 per cent of the total child population is employed contrary to the standards set by the federal government, is first of the states to ratify the constitutional amendment submitted to congress. The vote was close, 45 to 40 in the house and 15 to 13 in the senate. The amendment reads:

"Section 1. The congress shall have power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age.

"Section 2. The power of the several states is unimpaired by this article, except that the operation of state laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the congress."

Two acts passed by congress with the purpose of prohibiting child labor have been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court. The act of 1916 prohibited transportation in interstate commerce of goods made in factories using child labor. The act of 1919 imposed a tax of 10 per cent of the net profits of the year upon an employer using child labor. Should the amendment be ratified by three-fourths of the states, congress will then enact enforcing legislation.

OUR Latin-America neighbors are displaying their usual pep. Haiti is trying to get the League of Nations to oust our marines from the republic. There is some sort of "revolution" on in Brazil, which is apparently of enough importance to keep the censor busy and to make President Bernardes declare a state of siege, etc.

Mexico is trying to count the returns of the Presidential election of last Sunday. The rival candidates, Gen. Plutarcho Elias Calles, radical, and Gen. Angel Flores, less radical, are meanwhile accusing each other of election irregularities of all sorts. And of course both leaders claim complete and overwhelming victory.

Mexico is preparing to make claims for big damages for the Vera Cruz occupation and the Pershing expedition before the general claims commission which is soon to try to adjudicate claims between the two countries. We mussed up Vera Cruz in a vain effort to make the Mexicans salute the flag. We got mussed up when we tried to get Villa for raiding the border town of Columbus. And now the piper wants his pay.

ALIENISTS and psychiatrists to the number of twelve from various parts of the country have conducted on behalf of the defense exhaustive mental and physical tests of Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, confessed slayers of Bobby Franks. Four have examined the two boys for the state. It is stated that the defense will ask an insanity hearing in advance of the trial. The state holds this to be legally impossible, as the two are already under indictment, and that a plea of insanity can be used only as part of the defense.

SEVERAL scientists agree that the three "white Indian" children brought to New York from Panama are not "white" and not albinos, but are simply Indians affected by pathological conditions.

Awards to the number of 439, aggregating more than $14,500,000, have been made in favor of Americans against Germany for World war losses by the German-American mixed claims commission. Claims to the number of 12,416, aggregating $500,000,000, are still pending.

Memorial for Mothers at National Capital

New York.—Plans for the Mothers' memorial to be erected in Washington, in honor of motherhood and the world's greatest women, by the Woman's Universal alliance have been approved, according to an announcement, disclosing that W. Clark Noble, sculptor, was author of the designs. The Mothers' memorial which, according to those behind the movement, will be the first memorial of its kind to honor motherhood, is described as a sculptural and architectural work of the highest class.

The Mothers' memorial is in the form of an arch, 297 feet high, standing upon an oval base 300 feet wide and broken by sweeps of steps. On each face of the arch there will be a bronze panel 57 feet high, with groups of heroic figures in low and high relief. On one panel will be carved the spirit of the people, descending to lay offerings on the altar of motherhood. The panel on the other side will show Art and Science, Industry and Government opening to woman the door of opportunity.

Surmounting the arch is to be a group of figures typifying the mother glorified, holding in one hand the torch of enlightenment and in the other extending a kindled torch to coming generations, represented by figures of a young man and young woman. Children are grouped at her feet, above her head two angels hover, and beside the figure of Mother stand two welcoming genii, Peace and Progress.

DEMOCRATS NAME DAVIS AND BRYAN

Convention Selects West Virgina Statesman for Head of the Ticket.

LONGEST IN HISTORY

Governor of Nebraska Picked for Second Place—103 Ballots Are Taken Before Choice Is Made.

For President: JOHN W. DAVIS OF WEST VIRGINIA

For Vice President: CHARLES W. BRYAN OF NEBRASKA

The above ticket was selected by the Democratic National convention Wednesday afternoon, July 9, the 14th day of the convention, and on the 16th session and the 9th day of continuous voting. On the 103rd roll call the drift turned to John W. Davis of West Virginia. When the roll call was completed it was apparent that he had more than 600 votes. Illinois started the landslide by changing its vote to Davis, other states quickly followed. Former Senator Thomas Taggart of Indiana moved to suspend the rules and make the nomination by acclamation. The motion was carried with a whoop and all the pent-up feelings that had kept the delegates on edge for so many days of balloting were let loose in a wild demonstration in the midst of which the convention took a recess until evening to complete the ticket.

Well, it didn't look as if they would do it, but they did, at last. The Democratic party now has a ticket. The deadlock finally was broken. The dreary round of balloting has ceased and the almighty voice from Alabama has returned home to repair his worn vocal chords.

The bitter struggle between the McAdoo and Smith forces made this a record-breaking convention. For prolonged balloting and noisy demonstration, it is in a class by itself.

Throughout the long monotonous grind of roll calls frequent attempts were made by earnest Democrats to find some solution of the difficulty facing the convention, any solution that would leave the party in harmonious unity. Ralston, Cox, and one or two others who had been receiving votes withdrew their names in the hope that such action would start the tide toward some candidate upon whom the delegates could unite. But the only effect was to bring out new candidates.

Tuesday evening, after the 93rd ballot, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Smith manager, announced that he was authorized by Governor Smith to withdraw the governor's name if McAdoo would do likewise. But until Mr. McAdoo would withdraw, said Mr. Roosevelt, the supporters of Smith would continue to vote for the governor.

DEADLOCK IS JARRED

Just before the 100th ballot the deadlock was jarred by the reading of a letter from McAdoo releasing his delegates. The Smith followers did not take this as a bona fide withdrawal, so they continued to vote for the govenor. The 100th ballot showed the following vote for the principal candidates: Smith, 351½; McAdoo, 190; Davis, 203½; Meredith, 75½; Walsh, 52½; Robinson, 46; Underwood, 41½.

The story of the more than 100 roll calls is about as interesting as last year's stock market reports, and about as thrilling. While the balance of power was held by the leading candidates, there was no possibility of a nomination, and there seemed little likelihood that either Smith or McAdoo would ever weaken. The Smith following held its strength consistently throughout the many ballots, but the McAdoo strength fluctuated from time to time. McAdoo reached the peak of his power on the 69th ballot when he rolled up a total of 530 votes. Then he began to hit the toboggan, dropping to 310 on the 92nd ballot. Following the Smith announcement, above referred to, he began to pick up again and reached 421 on the 96th roll call. Shortly afterwards came his announcement freeing his delegates.

Smith climbed slowly in the first two days' balloting, passing the 300 mark, then more slowly until he reached his top vote on the 83rd ballot, 368. He stuck closely to this figure until after the withdrawal of McAdoo.

ON THE LONG ROAD

The balloting commenced on Monday, June 30, and continued with day and night sessions until the agreement finally was reached. The monotony of the roll calls was occasionally relieved by the excitement aroused by the meaningless switching of a couple of votes or the challenging of the vote of a state.

William Jennings Bryan added a dramatic touch on Wednesday when, arising to a question of personal privilege, he asked permission to explain his vote. It was a heroic attempt on the part of the Commoner to break the deadlock. He suggested the names of eight Democrats from among whom the convention might choose a leader. Last and most emphasized in the list was the name of William G. McAdoo, whom Mr. Bryan specially lauded, but the mention of the Californian's name threw the convention into a turmoil. Bryan was hissed and booed and had great difficulty in finishing his speech. If, as was intimated, it was an attempt to stamoede the convention, it failed.

International

TWO BIG QUESTIONS

Not since 1896 when the big fight on the free coinage of silver was waged, has there been such a fight over the platform in any political convention. The two big questions at issue were the stand to be taken on the Ku Klux Klan and the League of Nations. All week the committee labored, day and night, in an effort to come to an agreement that would prevent the bringing up of the disputed questions on the floor of the convention. The earnestness of the members of the committee in their desire for harmony was dramatically illustrated just before the committee took a recess at six o'clock Saturday morning after an all-night session, when William Jennings Bryan offered up a fervent prayer for Divine guidance.

The Klan plank was bitterly fought on the floor. As it was finally adopted, mention of the Klan by name is omitted and the plank makes a plea for religious freedom and tolerance. This was the plank offered by the majority of the committee and it won out by a bare margin of four votes.

The other disputed plank was that referring to the League of Nations. Former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker offered a minority report flatly favoring a declaration for the Wilson league. The plank submitted by the majority declared for a referendum on the league and was adopted by a 2-to-1 vote over the Baker plank.

MUCH FIREWORKS

This convention is in striking contrast to the Cleveland affair. Here's all the old-time stuff. From the drop of Chairman Hull's gavel calling the delegates to order there was something doing every minute. Excitement and enthusiasm ran high, even at times drifting into sporadic physical combat. The first touch of the fighting spirit was injected when the Klan issue was dragged in by Forney Johnston of Alabama in placing Senator Underwood's name before the convention as a candidate for the Presidential nomination.

It was Temporary Chairman Pat Harrison who first let loose the flood gates that swept the convention off its feet. Senator Harrison is a master of oratory. He gave them the old-fashioned stuff and they liked it. With biting sarcasm and keen invective he scored the Republican party for its alleged deeds of omission and commission. His short snappy sentences had a sting in every one of them, and the delegates responded wildly to his every mood. Mention of the names of Jackson, Cleveland and Wilson set the convention wild, particularly the latter, which started a demonstration that lasted several minutes.

Senator Walsh, the permanent chairman, also did his share in inspiring the enthusiasm of the crowd. His activities as an investigator of the oil scandal gave promise that he would have something to say along that line, and he didn't disappoint. His denunciation of those hit by the senatorial investigation met with approving cheers. His enunciation of the basic principles upon which the party should make its campaign also were wildly acclaimed.

START NOMINATING SPEECHES

While the platform was being fought over by the committee it was decided to devote the time to getting rid of some of the nominating oratory. Forney Johnston of Alabama made the speech nominating Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama. He read a resolution he had presented to the committee on resolutions condemning the Ku Klux Klan. It started something. A wild uproar ensued, several fights were started, but quickly stopped.

With nothing else to take up the immediate attention the delegates devoted themselves whole heartedly to the "man who" stuff. Former Senator Phelan of California presented the name of William G. McAdoo. The demonstration which followed lasted for nearly an hour. Counter demonstrations were started by the followers of Governor Smith. When Chairman Walsh thought it had gone far enough he restored order long enough to entertain a motion to adjourn and pronounce it carried.

When the convention met Thursday morning the speech making was resumed with frequent repetitions of the scenes of the day before. Franklin D. Roosevelt, former assistant secretary of the navy, was brought to the platform in an invalid chair to make the speech nominating Gov. Al Smith of New York. Mr. Roosevelt is paralyzed in the limbs as a result of an attack of infantile paralysis. He made a remarkable speech and when he concluded by pronouncing the name of the New York governor a demonstration broke loose that lasted for considerably over an hour.

PANDEMONIUM CONTINUES

For seven hours the pandemonium continued as the names of Senator Ralston of Indiana, Senator Ferris of Michigan, Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Former Senator Saulsbury of Delaware, David F. Houston of New York, Gov. Jonathan Davis of Kansas, and Governor Ritchie of Maryland, were added to the list of candidates.

CHARLES W. BRYAN

The convention adjourned to Friday morning on a vote which was said to be a test of the relative strength of the Smith and McAdoo forces. McAdoo lost out by a large majority.

And Friday was no different from the days that had gone before. More oratory and demonstrations, but they finally got to the end of the roll call, and all the favorite sons were presented for the consideration of the delegates. That woman has become an active factor in political life was apparent in this convention. They participated in the proceedings on the floor of the convention and in committee work. Many of them appeared on the platform to make nominating and seconding speeches.

The balloting was started when the convention reconvened on Monday morning. The first ballot resulted as follows:

Underwood, 42½; Robinson, 21; McAdoo, 431½ Sweet, 12; Brown, 17; Smith, 240½; Saulsbury, 7; Silzer, 38; John W. Davis, 31; Ritchie, 22¼; Harrison, 43½; Cox, 59; Bryan, 18; Ralston, 30; Jonathan Davis, 20; Ferris, 30; Glass, 25; Thompson, 1; Kendrick, 6.

Famous Beauties Grace Democratic Convention

New York artists who got in the front row at the Democratic convention had to wonder whether the women present were gathered for a beauty show or a political conclave.

For the Democratic party, with its southern backbone, boasts innumerable Democratic beauties.

One of the handsomest and cleverest of the leaders of feminine Democrats, Mrs. Leroy Spring, delegate-at-large from South Carolina, came to the metropolis as one of the vanguard of Democratic politicians, feminine gender, who thrills the galleries and puts a decisive finger in the Presidential pie.

Another southern beauty, known for her smart costumes, who came to New York to take up the reins of her office is Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, committeewoman from Missouri, vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, and official leader of the Democratic women. Mrs Blair hides proven ability beneath a petite and feminine exterior.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, committee woman from Tennessee, wife of the chairman of the national committee, is another of the truly handsome women who slipped early into the convention city, while Miss Nancy Cook, one of the local lady powers-that-be, surprised the delegates from the other states with her charm—and the best bobbed curl this side of the Bronx.

The best hearts are ever the bravest.

Historic Salt Springs Slowly Disappearing

Springfield, Ill.—Gradual disappearance of the Gallatin county salines, believed to have been worked on by the Indians, is removing from Illinois one of its most historic spots. Jacob W. Myers, Harrisburg, who has made a study of the salt springs, states that there are now no memorials to mark the spot.

"Tradition has it that from time immemorial salt has been produced and manufactured at the springs in Gallatin county," Mr. Myers relates. "Around the region of the two principal springs, known as 'Half-Moon Dick,' and 'Nigger Well,' is found a kind of pottery, the existence of which can be explained in no other way than that it may be fragments of large pots and kettles used in evaporating salt water.

"So little remains of the present site that the passerby would never know that he was on historic ground," says Myers. "About all that is left of 'Nigger Well' is a few decayed timbers in the old well, which is now practically filled up.

Camp Bed From Boughs

A little comfort in the camp bed, now and then, is relished by the best of sportsmen. Here is a way to put a little spring in the bed underpinning: Cut four saplings about eight feet long and set the butts in the sod on either side of a log so they cross in pairs. Lash short sticks to the outer ends, then lay poles across these from end to end. Pad the poles, if necessary, with leaves and moss, then build your bed on top of that. Really, it doesn't take much longer to make it than it does to tell how to do it.—Sportsman's Digest.

Ghostly Whiskers

In the Black museum at Scotland Yard is a remarkable collection of gruesome exhibits, says London Answers.

There is a decorative frieze of murderers' heads—plaster casts taken from famous criminals after execution.

One of these pieces of sculpture upsets the stolid nerves of the police custodians of the museum. From the plaster cast of this particular murderer's face have sprouted long thin whiskers, resembling those of the original before he shaved them off.

When the cast was placed in its niche in the collection it was clean shaven. Now the sinister whiskers have put in an appearance.

Dancing Bad For The Heart

We don"t know, but we should think the present bunch of young folks would take a lesson from the experiences of two who have passed into Eternity because they would over-exert in the public dance hall. It is sad to record the second sudden death at Devils Lake from just the old-fashioned dissipation.

Miss Theodosia Way of Hudson is the last victim. She was dancing when she became faint and died only a few moments after being removed from the pavilion.

She was about 18 years of age and highly respected in the community We understand the pavilion at this place is well-filled Sunday evenings with devotees and there is the usual "nigger" orchestra and the trimmings.

Nicotine Dust Aids In Killing Insects

More general application of the "nicotine dust" system of killing cucumber beetles and lice, which are said to cause a considerable decrease in the yield of pickles, melon and squash, is the objective of a campaign which is being conducted this summer by the horticultural section of the M. A. C. extension staff in most of the counties in the state where pickles and melons are grown.

The deadliness of the "nicotine dust" method, a 90 percent killing ability being claimed for it, the short time required to kill the insects after "dusting", and the economy of the new method, which kills by contact and does not depend on the eating of more plant tissue and consequent injury of the plant before the consumption of enough poison to cause death, are all pointed out as superior qualities of the new method.

The material should be applied by a hand duster, declares H. A. Cardinell, M. A. C. extension specialist in horticulture, who is in charge of the campaign. These machines, which are available at prices of from one to twenty five dollars protect the foliage of the plants from "under feeding" as the dust is applied with such force that both sides of the leaves are coated.

While application during the hot calm days of midsummer is said to be the most effeetive as the heat liberates the nicotine fumes more rapidly and causes a quick kill, the dusting should not be postponed until favorable weathes conditions when severe attacks of the insects occur, Mr. Cardinell urges. "When the beetles are doing great damage it is best to dust the plants even though it may be rainy, cold or windy, or a combination of such weather conditions," he says. "A large funnel may be placed over the outlet tube and excellent work may be done during wind or rain and ten acres per day dusted. Without the cone attachment, fifteen to twenty five acres per day may be dusted with a good hand duster."

Beans Are Some Crop In Michigan

Perhaps some of our subscribers who farm it for a living might be surprised if they knew how mnch of a bean state old Michigan was. As a matter of fact it is the leading bean raising area of the world.

This year our state planted 557,000 acres to this succulent vegetable which it is estimated will produce 6,057 000 bushels at the going price would amount to $16,111,620 to be distributed among the farming population of the state. Colorado comes next with 306,000 acres and 2,237,000 bushels of beans. You will not be overly disturbed about this great production in our state if you investigate the condition of the soil in northern counties. Up there it is quite common to find a man's back forty has blown over on the neighbor's back eighty during the night nor literally of course, but you know the joke about the sand in the north. Much of this land will produce nothing else of value except red raspberries and these are too short in duration to make them practical. It is a common sight in many of the northern lumbering regions where big cork pines have been stripped and saw mills ground away for 30 years to find large areas more or less buried in pine sawdust which never decays. Up through this saw dust shoots the raspberry canes. And whole townships of this country is not worth the removal of the saw dust for the soil is too poor, but none too poor for white beans. If these thousands of acres of unproductive land could only be planted to beans we could supply the whole of America without batting an eye and our popularity with Boston would be the catch word for the Nation. The day is near when all of this sawdust covered territory will yield up its riches and become a garden. Already large interests are grabbing the area with sawdust, using it to make wall board and they report it excellent for this Of course there are blights and pests which must be battled but science will find this easy by means of machinery.

To Show Experiments M. A. C. Farm Day

Inspection of the livestock experiment station test plats, and other forms of research work being carried on during the summer at M. A. C. to which the entire morning of "Farmers Day" Friday, August 1, at M. A. C. is to be devoted, is expected to be one of the most valuable features of the program of the annual summer field day for Michigan farmers.

Experimental work now being carried on by the crops department which will be included in the inspection tours, included extensive testing of alfalfa and clover seed from different sources, 45 acres of corn breeding work, seven acres of bean experimental work, four acres of potato breeding work, nine acres of beet experiments, and four acres of fibre flax breeding. Specimens of leading varieties of all crops adapted to central Michigan can also be seen and studied as growing in the field.

Included in the college livestock herds of beef cattle, sheep, hogs and horses, will be a number of champions and prize winners at the International Livestock Exposition in past years, and many animals which are being fitted for showing this fall. Aberdeen Angus, Herefords, and Shorthorn cattle herds; two-hundred and twenty purebred sheep of the seven leading breeds; and 250 purebred swine of seven breeds will be on exhibition, as well as the 55 head of horses, including Pervenche, Belgian grand champion last year, and Range Line Phoenix reserve grand champion.

To Traverse State In 1924 Hort Tour

A route crossing the southern end of Michigan from St Joseph to Detroit has been selected for the annual summer tour of the Michigan State Horticultural Society and the American Pomological Society on July 21, 22 and 23, according to announcement this week by H. D. Hootman, secretery of the State Horticultural Society and specialist in horticulture with the M. A. C. extension staff.

Starting from the county court house at St Joseph at eight o'clock on Monday morning, July 21, the tour will run through Berrien and VanBuren counties, including a visit to the Paw Paw grape producing section, on the first day, the over night stop being scheduled for Kalamazoo. The second day's program will include Kalamazoo Calhoun, Jackson and Washtenaw counties, with the second night stop at Ann Arbor. The L. Whitney Watkins orchard near Manchester will be included in the day's visits.

On the third day the tour will run through Oakland County, including a visit to the James S. Couzens farm, and ending in Detroit.

James Couzens Gets Into Senatoral Race

Word received from James Cousins states he is in the race for primary nomination for United States Senator from Michigan and that he has been urged to run by friends. We suppose this is so and we also suppose that it will require a lot of the lucre to get into the politics in Michigan this fall, there fore if James expects to further his campaign with the editors he will have to come across with several thousands of his fortune. We all have space for sale and that is how we make our living. James can get our rate card any time he wants it. Sending out long speels to be printed must invaribly be accompanied by the wherewithal. Next to tobacco advertising this political dope is about the most disagreeable the editor has to deal with, but the good money which tobacco firms put up to popularize their wares is very tempting to most of us along this dull time of the season. We have been criticised by church people for handling tobacco publicity at all, and we hope the day may arrive when we won't be so poor as to depend upon it.

Politics are nearly as bad as far as we are concerned, but the candidates must be accomodated and as we claim to do advertising we have no right to turn down a legitimate client if he has the money. Mr. Couzens we are quite sure has plenty of this, so we are giving him notice that money talks. That's all except we have noticed the political game gets rottener and rougher as time goes on. Up in the big New York convention last week poor honest old Bill Bryan sat there a picture of despair and disappointed hopes. Twenty years of dew dabbing in politics has brought him worse than nothing— although he is likely an honest man, a temperance man morally good and all that, but as we state else where in this issue the reward of an honest man in politics is oblivion and death. They don't want him in office because he might defeat the false purposes of a few rip goats, yet when it comes to a convention his wise council in matters of picking candidates is eagerly sought. It looks as if Mr. Bryan had been systematically "worked" by the party for these years and his reward will probably be a nickname for an "easy mark" because he's decent. Of late there have sprung up many men in the Democratic party with temperance principles like Bryan and Richmond Hobson but you will note the rudiments of the Democrat Jackass have never changed, it's the same old mule with a slick hair cut and a shave, the same kind of men are its bosses and while both Bryan and Hobson may be popular enough to get governorships, they are nolle prossed out of National affairs.

Stop Army Worms With Barriers

Control measures to stop the army worms, serious crop pests, which have been reported recently from different sections of the state, have been given out by the entymology department of the M. A. C.

A warning that the army worm might break out in the state this year was sent out a week ago by the Professor in charge. Since that time reports have confirmed the prediction that farmers would have to be on guard against the pest this year. When a farm field is found to be infested with army worms there is usually little hope of saving the occupied fields or portions of fields. It becomes imperative at once to take measures to prevent the spread of an army to uninvaded parts. To do this, place barriers in the line of march. Usually about three deep, clean-cut furrows, placed parallel, about ten or twelve feet apart will stop them. Turn the furrows toward the worms and when each furrow is full, turn it under, leaving a fresh furrow, burying the worms already in the furrows and making ready a new one at once.

When the soil is sandy, mucky, or otherwise difficult to make stand in a clear-cut furrow, or when there is no room for a series of furrows, make one good deep furrow and drag a small log back and forth through the furrow crushing the larvae as fast as they collect. Army worms are poor climbers and one finds them easy to confine in the furrow.

The same baits as those used against other cut-worms may be used to advantage in gardens and lawns and in places where some of the larvae get by the barriers.

AMERICA'S AMAZING PROGRESS IN THE PAST HUNDRED YEARS

Material Progress Staggers the Imagination, but Real Wealth Is in the Character of the People Inherited From the Pilgrim Fathers.

By WALTER W. HEAD, President The American Bankers Association

One hundred years ago when Lafayette re-visited America, he found the United States a nation of little more than ten million people—less than one-tenth of the present number. The territory embraced less than 1,800,000 square miles instead of the present 3,700,000. Half was still a wilderness of unsettled plain, plateau and mountains.

Walter W. Head

Only one hundred years ago, the world was still agog over the recent passage of the "Savannah," an American sailing vessel equipped with paddle-wheels propelled by steam, from New York to Liverpool in twenty-six days. Today we boast of a trans-Atlantic airplane crossing that required but few more hours than the "Savannah" required days.

One hundred years ago the total national wealth was less than a billion dollars, less than $100 per capita; today the national wealth exceeds 300 billion dollars—an average of almost $3,000 per capita. In 1821 there were ten savings banks with 8,635 depositors, with $1,138,000 on deposit; one hundred years later—more than thirty million depositors had more than $18,000,000,000 savings deposits. The total receipts of the federal government in 1823 were $20,500,000, the total expenditures were $14,700,000. Last year our national income and expenditures each exceeded $3,500,000,000.

One hundred years ago there were no railroads, no automobiles, no airplanes. There were no telephones, no telegraph lines, no cables. There was no gasoline, no kerosene.

There are those among us who regard the present as a period confronted with unprecedented problems, a period beset by perils heretofore unequaled. There are those who express doubt of our ability to make further progress—some even who profess to foresee the destruction and disintegration of our social, political and economic structure. In the light of achievements that have been wrought in the past by firm adherence to true principles, in the light of the tremendous resources our country now controls, what justification can men have today for expressing doubt of America's future?

America's Resources Today

We have today 110,000,000 people. Our total bank deposits aggregate approximately 40 billion dollars. Outstanding life insurance amounts to more than 70 billion dollars. Our 500 million acres of improved farm lands are valued at 77 billion dollars. We have wealth untold in our forests, in our mines of iron and coal. We have more than 250,000 miles of railroad with which to transport ourselves and our articles of commerce; we have more than 250,000 miles of commercial telegraph lines and 800,000 miles of telephone lines to afford us communication; we have 20,000 daily and weekly newspapers to disseminate information and to bind our people together by ties of common knowledge and for a common purpose. We have resources of labor so abundant that we have placed an artificial check upon immigration.

These things are our material resources. They constitute the basic material element — but the real foundation of our progress is not material. It is that other, more valuable resource—the capacity and character of our people. To that we owe the discovery and development of our natural resources, their use and their conservation; to that we owe the establishment and development of a nation founded on ideals of equal rights, ideals of equal opportunity, ideals of equal responsibility, which remain today untarnished, which now shine forth with greater luster than ever before.

The Character of Our People

From it have come the patience and the wisdom which have reconciled effective authority and adequate liberty. From it has come the tolerance which has preserved freedom of speech, of press and of pulpit. From it has come the foresight which established free public schools. From it has come the courage which commanded adherence to principle at the cost of selfish gain, even at the cost of life itself. From it has come the respect for the rights and privileges of one's fellow man which has found expression in guaranties of equal representation and universal suffrage.

The character of our people is a spring which has never run dry. It has had its source ever and always in the stern and firm faith of the Pilgrim fathers—a political faith based upon and grounded in the tenets of the Christian religion. Despite every other influence, the strong and steady current of the Pilgrim's faith has persisted through generation after generation.

It is this invaluable resource—the capacity and character of our people —that has made America great in the past, that will make America greater and more powerful in the future. As long as we uphold our established standards of belief and conduct, we need have no fear for the future of America.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON X

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman
Public Education Commission, American Bankers Association.

When opening a commercial account the bank furnishes the depositor with a pass book, deposit slips and blank checks.

J. H. Puelicher

COMMERCIAL ACCOUNT=Account in bank used in connection with funds employed in business transactions, from which withdrawals are made by checks.

PASS BOOK=A small account book in which the bank enters a customer's deposits; an entry serves as his receipt for that amount.

DEPOSIT SLIPS=Printed blanks with spaces in which the depositor writes the amount of cash and of each check deposited.

BLANK CHECKS=Printed forms for orders on the bank to pay out money from the depositor's account. The depositor writes in the name of the person to whom he wants money paid, the amount he wishes paid, and then signs his own name. When the check comes to the bank it pays the sum of money as indicated, deducting it from the depositor's account, and keeps the check which it cancels. Cancelled checks are each month returned to the depositor and serve him as receipts for the payments made.

About ninety per cent. of all business transactions are finally paid by bank checks. They facilitate business and are a safe way to transmit funds in paying bills, wages or meeting other obligations.

THE BANKER

The banker is a business man but, at the same time, he is a public servant. He manages his institution to earn dividends for its stockholders, but it has now come to be regarded as his duty to give sound advice and perform many services which result in no direct addition to his earnings account. He accepts the deposits of the parents for the account of the baby when it is born. He keeps the funds and invests them as the child grows. He advises the young man when, in leaving school, he enters business. His counsel is given with financial assistance as the business develops. When his client retires from its management he acts as trustee in handling his investments and finally upon the client's death, he is called upon to administer the estate and act as an advisor to the heirs. A knowledge gained from books is a necessary part of his preparation but he needs many things which he cannot learn in that way—greatest among them, an understanding of human nature.—Clarence R. Chaney, President American Institute of Banking.

The Eau Claire County Bankers Association, Wisconsin, appointed an agricultural committee early in May. Plans are now under way to adopt definite farming projects for the county in line with the projects adopted by the state bankers agricultural committee in co-operation with the College of Agriculture. This is the start of the organization of Wisconsin counties in the banker-farmer movement.

Hudson Declines Nomination For Senator

Last week we received a letter from Honorable Grant M. Hudson in regard to the outlook for senatorial nominations in Michigan and below we give it in full which may interest a large number of church people and temperance workers in this vicinity. The refusal of Mr. Hudson will disappoint a large force of voters in the state without doubt, but there are reasons which would render it unpractical. Hudson's decline should not be taken as an endorsement of Mr. Couzens' candidacy for it certainly is not. These two gentlemen are as far apart as the west from the east:

"Mr. L. Harvey
North Adams Advocate
North Adams, Mich.

My Dear Sir and Friend:—

I am in receipt of your letter sent out in response to the circular sent out by Mr. Foster and other political friends asking your support in urging me to run for the United States senatorial nomination in the Republican primaries this year. I thank you very much for the gracious kindly response of your letter. Literally hundreds have written, urging that I make the race, but after returning from Washington and looking the matter over from all angles I decided that it would not be the wisest thing to do at this time, and therefore I am filing my petitions for re-nomination for the U. S. Congress from the Sixth District of Michigan.

I thank you for your kind consideration and promise of support Later, there may come the opportunity to serve my state in such a capacity. Most sincerely
Yours
Grant M. Hudson."

Law Enforcement Is Hard

The Advocate hates to admit that law enforcement on the liquor question is hard, we would like to creep under the fence somehow and sidestep it, but we can't. When we go to Hillsdale it winks at us from every corner of Broad street; if we are in Jackson it bumps into us all round the city; when we spend a day like July 4th at a resort, some son iniquity comes out with his skates on or the "bootlegger" comes out in the open, and we can't lie. The evidence is with us—it is poked at our probosis far too often to be pleasant, yet when all's said and done, the conditions are not one fifth as bad as they were under high license laws. We will say this: God only knows what would have been the condition of our younger set of worldly people if after the the demoralization of the World War and the sporting trend of the times we should have still been so unlucky as to have the open saloon with us. That's about all we can offer for the floaters. By floaters we distinguish young men and women generally single but sometimes married, and old enough to know better, who fall in with every new slang manner of speech and adopt every new custom that emerges from the dens of vice in Paris because they want to be up to date. This is putting it real plain isn't it? Young women now make a practice of smoking cigarettes when out with their paramours and it is sad to relate they indulge in drinking often to drunkenness. Stills are common in most any community and the officers are not wholly blamable. Often it is next to impossible for an officer to get evidence from neighbors of a illicit distiller either through fear or threat It has been generally reported that a still is running within four miles of North Adams but circumstances are such that no hold can be obtained on the proprietor. We as a nation are a little too choice of our neighbor's friendship at times, hence we enter into the criminal responsibility of the still.

If reports are correct Washington is full of Senators and Representatives who masquerade as strong temperance advocates, vote everything dry then go home and tank up on their own liquor and probably they are doing it to convince the great electorate of the foolishness of Prohibition; trying to educate good 100 percent Americans that what is stopped at the bung leaks out at the spigot.

If we had a Sheriff in this county who was absolutely dry, how long do you suppose he would be able to hold the position? He would at once meet with mountains of trouble not entirely from the criminal stillers and bootleggers but from fellow officials who would seek to block his game.

This is no criticism on the present incumbent of the office who is probably as sincere as any man you could elect in this county or any other community for Sheriff. Neither is it derogatory to our Prosecutor He has done as well as any man whom the people could put in office. We are "slamming" no one but it is an undeniable fact that any candidate who would absolutely signify his intention of carrying out dry moral principles to the letter and was known to be just as he claimed would never carry a primary. If he did it would be a fruitless administration.

The W. C. T. U. and the hundred and one other organizations are wrong in supposing that because a lot of voters cast the dry ballot that their personal inclinations run the same way. These ladies have done a wonderful work in educating public sentiment, but there is an awful aching void yet to fill up with real honest to goodness dry patriotism.

What is the remedy? There is none that we know of. Until you can turn a voter into a puff of white smoke and annihilate him from the face of the earth then inject him forcibly onto this planet again with a different set of brains and a different organism which does not require a stimulant, you will never stop the drinking of stimulants. The day is coming—praise the Lord when liquor and tobacco will be so nasty and so ill-favored no one will care to indulge in them openly but there will always be excessive indulgers in somekind of an evil drink or beverage.

We hope and trust that the W. C. T. U. and the churches will keep it up and that our public officials will continue to enforce the dry laws because we believe there is something gained in public sentiment.

First Marl Digging Arouses Enthusiasm

Almost unanimous approval of the operation of the two outfits used in digging marl by the M. A. C. demonstration team last week, on the C. B. Crouse farm on Brophy Lake in Livingston County, was expressed by the three hundred farmers who witnessed the first of a series of nineteen demonstration which are to be given in twelve southwestern Michigan counties during July and August.

Inquiries as to the cost of securing or constructing similar outfits, and as to the manner of operating them were showered upon Prof. H. H. Musselman of M. A. C., designer of one of the outfits, Larry F. Livingston, who is in charge of the campaign, and others of the demonstration group.

H. C. Rather and O. B. Price, of the M. A. C. farm crops and soils deparments, gave short talks before the visiting farmers, pointing out the benefits to be derived from the increased acreage of alfalfa and clover crops which will be made possible with the use of greater quantities of marl, a form of lime, on the acid soils of the southwestern Michigan counties.

A second demonstration was given at Williams Lake near Gregory in Livingston County, on Monday of this week. The marl diggers were also scheduled to give two demonstrations in Jackson County this week, near Horton on Wednesday and near Munith on Friday.

M. A. C. Entertains County Club Champs

Nearly two hundred boys and girls, county champions in the various divisions of boys' and girls' club work from practically every county in the state, spent the week of July 7 on the M. A. C. campus as the guests of the state club work leaders, Mr. Ray Turner and his staff.

The week was devoted to entertainments, talks from M. A. C. professors and specialists, and exploration and use of the Laboratories and equipment of the state institution. A visit to Governor Groesbeck at the State Capitol on Friday morning terminated the week's events.

Officers of the Michigan Association of County Club Champions for the coming year were elected as follows; President, Grace Aldrich Adrian; vice president, Lawrence Shilling, Coldwater; secretary, Nellie Warren, Hillsdale: and treasurer, Harold Strange Charlotte.

Radio Over Lighting Wires

The last inventions are featuring the sending of Radio messages over the regular electric light wires. This is the original idea of Major General George O. Squier of the Radio service station on Staten Island where experts are constantly experimenting.

Within a short time equipment for transmitting three programs will be completed, Tentative plans for Wired Radio, Inc., a North American Co. subsidiary which is doing the development work, calls for the eventual establishment of a nation-wide "wired radio" service which will consist of three continuous programs from studios in New York, Chicago and a Pacific coast city which will be sent over trunk lines to central generating stations in all parts of the country. From the central stations these national programs (supplemented by local programs] will be transmitted to subscribers via the lighting lines. Each subscriber will be provided at a monthly rental of $2.00 with a small tuning device that is plugged into any convenient lamp socket. Because a large percentage of the monthly rental receipts can be devoted to paying for talent, the expectations are that wired radio programs will be of an exceptionally high quality.

HUSBAND SAID WHY NOT TRY IT

Wife Said She Would. Result, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

East Hardwick, Vt.—"Last winter I was not able to do any work at all. I had backache, headache, side ache, and was sick all the time for six months. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers, and my husband said to me, 'Why don't you try it?' So I said I would, and he went and got me a dozen bottles. It has done me more good than I can ever tell, and my friends say, 'What have you done to yourself? You look so well.' I tell them it is the Vegetable Compound that makes me so well and strong. There is no use to suffer with backache and pains. I will tell every one what it has done for me." —Mrs. Fred. Primo, Route No. 2, East Hardwick, Vermont.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so ill that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their household duties.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Acoustic Experiment

A very pretty experiment in acoustics can be achieved by the use of a child's tin horn. Tie a sheet of thin paper firmly over the big end, hold the horn so that the paper is level, scatter over it a little fine sand or lycopodium powder, then sing a note into the horn. You will find that the powder has formed itself into an intricate geometrical figure. It was in this way that the first voice pictures were obtained.

Get Back Your Health!

Are you dragging around day after day with a dull backache? Are you tired and lame mornings—subject to headaches, dizzy spells and sharp, stabbing pains. Then there's surely something wrong. Probably it's kidney weakness! Don't wait for more serious kidney trouble. Get back your health and keep it. For quick relief get plenty of sleep and exercise and use Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. They have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

Foretelling the Weather

The weather bureau says that the forecasting of weather for more than a few days in advance is attended with great uncertainty. For this reason the national weather bureaus in various countries do not attempt detailed forecasts of the weather for more than a week in advance. Beyond a week the condition of the weather cannot be foretold according to reliable and scientific principles.

"'There is no morning to their day,' he went on. 'Their dawn is noontime. Our kind of people have had longer days and have used them wisely. So we have pushed on ahead of this European caravan. Our fathers in New England made a great discovery.'

"'What was it?' I asked.

"'That righteousness was not a joke; that Christianity was not a solemn plaything for one day in the week, but a real, practical, working proposition for every day in the year; that the main support of the structure is industry; that its most vital commandment is this, "six days shalt thou labor"; that no amount of wealth can excuse a man from this duty. Everyone worked. There was no idleness and therefore little poverty. The days were all for labor and the nights for rest. The wheels of progress were greased and moving.'

"'And our love of learning helped to push them along,' I suggested.

"'True. Our people have been mostly like you and me,' he went on. 'We long for knowledge of the truth. We build schools and libraries and colleges. We have pushed on out of the Eighteenth century into a new time. There you were born. Now you have stepped a hundred years backward into Europe. You are astonished, and this brings me to my point. Here I am with a great task on my hands. It is to enlist the sympathy and help of France. I must take things, not as I could wish them to be, but as I find them. At this court women are all powerful. It has long been a maxim here that a diplomatist must stand well with the ladies. Even though he is venerable, he must be gallant, and I do not use the word in a shady sense. The ladies are not so bad as you would think them. They are playthings. To them, life is not as we know it, filled with realities. It is a beautiful drama of rich costumes and painted scenes and ingenious words, all set in the atmosphere of romance. The players only pretend to believe each other. In the salon I am one of these players. I have to be.'

"'Mirabeau seemed to mean what he said,' was my answer.

"'Yes. He is one of those who often speak from the heart. All these players love the note of sincerity when they hear it. In the salon it is out of key, but away from the ladies the men are often living and not playing. Mirabeau, Condorcet, Turgot and others have heard the call of Human Liberty. Often they come to this house and speak out with a strong candor.'

"'I suppose that this great drama of despotism in France will end in a tragedy whose climax will consume the stage and half the players,' I ventured to say.

"'That is a theme, Jack, on which you and I must be silent,' Franklin answered. 'We must hold our mouths as with a bridle.'

"For a moment he sat looking sadly into the glowing coals on the grate. Franklin loved to talk, but no one could better keep his own counsel.

"'At heart I am no revolutionist,' he said presently. 'I believe in purifying—not in breaking down. I would to God that I could have convinced the British of their error. Mainly I am with the prophet who says:

"'"Stand in the old ways. View the ancient paths. Consider them well and be not among those who are given to change."'

"I sat for a moment thinking of the cruelties I had witnessed, and asking myself if it had been really worth while. Franklin interrupted my thoughts.

"'I wish we could discover a plan which would induce and compel nations to settle their differences without cutting each other's throats. When will human wisdom be sufficient to see the advantage of this?'

"He told me the thrilling details of his success in France; how he had won the kingdom for an ally and secured loans and the help of a fleet and army then on the sea.

"'And you will not be surprised to learn that the British have been sounding me to see if we would be base enough to abandon our ally,' he laughed.

"In a moment he added:

"'Come, it is late and you must write a letter to the heart of England before you lie down to rest.'

"Often thereafter he spoke of Margaret as 'the heart of England.'"

CHAPTER XXIV

The Pageant.

Jack began to assist Franklin in his correspondence and in the many business details connected with his mission.

"I have never seen a man with a like capacity for work," the young officer writes. "Every day he is conferring with Vergennes or other representatives of the king, or with the ministers, of Spain, Holland and Great Britain. The greatest intellect in the kingdom is naturally in great request. Today, after many hours of negotiation with the Spanish minister, in came M. Dubourg, the most distinguished physician in Europe.

"'Mon chere maitre,' he said 'I have a most difficult case and as you know more about the human body than any man of my acquaintance I wish to confer with you.'

"Yesterday, Doctor Ingenhauz, physician to the emperor of Austria, came to consult him regarding the vaccination of the royal family of France.

"In the evening, M. Robespierre, a slim, dark-skinned, studious young attorney from Arras, wearing gold-rimmed spectacles, came for information regarding lightning rods, he having doubts of their legality. While they were talking, M. Joseph Ignace Guillotin, another physician, arrived. He was looking for advice regarding a proposed new method of capital punishment, and wished to know if, in the Doctor's opinion, a painless death could be produced by quickly severing the head from the body. Next morning, M. Jourdan, with hair and beard as red as the flank of my bay mare and a loud voice, came soon after breakfast, to sell us mules by the shipload.

"So you see that even I, living in his home and seeing him almost every hour of the day, have little chance to talk with him. Last night we met M. Voltaire—dramatist and historian—now in the evening of his days. We were at the academy, where we had gone to hear an essay by D'Alembert. Franklin and Voltaire—a very thin old gentleman of eighty-four, with piercing black eyes—sat side by side on the platform. The audience demanded that the two great men should come forward and salute each other. They arose and advanced and shook hands.

"'A la Francaise,' the crowd demanded.

"So the two white-haired men embraced and kissed each other amidst loud applause.

"As we were leaving the table one day he said: 'Jack, I have an idea worthy of Demosthenes. My friend, David Hartley of London, who still has hopes of peace by negotiation, wishes to come over and confer with me. I shall tell him that he may come if he will bring with him the Lady Hare and her daughter.'

"'More thrilling words were never spoken by Demosthenes,' I answered. 'But how about Jones and his Bonne Homme Richard? He is now a terror to the British coasts. They would fear destruction.'

"'I shall ask Jones to let them alone,' he said. 'They can come under a special flag.'

"Commodore Jones did not appear again in Paris until October, when he came to Passy to report upon a famous battle.

"I was eager to meet this terror of the coasts. His impudent courage and sheer audacity had astonished the world. The wonder was that men were willing to join him in such dare devil enterprises.

"I had imagined that Jones would be a tall, gaunt, swarthy, raw-boned, swearing man of the sea. He was a sleek, silent, modest little man, with delicate hands and features. He wished to be alone with the Doctor, and so I did not hear their talk. I know that he needed money and that Franklin, having no funds, provided the sea fighter from his own purse.

"One evening our near neighbors, Le Compte de Chaumont and M. LeVilleard, came to announce that a dinner and ball in honor of Franklin would occur at the palace of Compte de Chaumont less than a week later.

"'My good friends,' said the philosopher, 'I value these honors which are so graciously offered me, but I am old and have much work to do. I need rest more than I need the honors.'

"'It is one of the penalties of being a great savant that people wish to see and know him,' said the count. 'The most distinguished people in France will be among those who do you honor. I think, if you can recall a talk we had some weeks ago, you will wish to be present.'

"'Oh, then, you have heard from the Hornet.'

"'I have a letter here which you may read at your convenience.'

"'My dear friend, be pleased to receive my apologies and my hearty thanks,' said Franklin. 'Not even the gout could keep me away.'

"Next day I received a formal invitation to the dinner and ball. I told the Doctor that in view of the work to be done, I would decline the invitation. He begged me not to do it and insisted that he was counting upon me to represent the valor and chivalry of the New World; that as I had grown into the exact stature of Washington and was so familiar with his manners and able to imitate them in conversation, he wished me to assume the costume of our commander in chief. He did me the honor to say:

"'There is no other man whom it would be safe to trust in such an exalted role. I wish, as a favor to me, you would see what can be done at the costumer's and let me have a look at you.'

"I did as he wished. The result was an astonishing likeness. I dressed as I had seen the great man in the field. I wore a wig slightly tinged with gray, a blue coat, buff waistcoat and sash and sword and the top boots and spurs. When I strode across the room in the masterly fashion of our great commander, the Doctor clapped his hands.

"'You are as like him as one pea is like another!' he exclaimed. 'Nothing would so please our good friends, the French, who have an immense curiosity regarding Le Grand Vasanton, and it will give me an opportunity to instruct them as to our spirit.'

"He went to his desk and took from a drawer a cross of jeweled gold on a long necklace of silver—a gift from the king—and put it over my head so that the cross shone upon my breast.

"'That is for the faith of our people,' he declared. 'The guests will assemble on the grounds of the count late in the afternoon. You will ride among them on a white horse. A beautiful maiden in a white robe held at the waist with a golden girdle will receive you. She will be Human Liberty. You will dismount and kneel and kiss her hand. Then the prime minister of France will give to each a blessing and to you a sword and a purse. You will hold them up and say:

"'"For these things I promise you the friendship of my people and their prosperity."

"'You will kiss the sword and hang it beside your own and pass the purse to me and then I shall have something to say.'

"So it was all done, but with thrilling details, of which no suspicion had come to me. I had not dreamed, for instance, that the king and queen would be present and that the enthusiasm would be so great. You will be able to judge of my surprise when, riding my white horse through the cheering crowd, throwing flowers in my way, I came suddenly upon Margaret Hare in the white robe of Human Liberty. Now facing me after these years of trial, her spirit was equal to her part. She was like unto the angel I had seen in my dreams. The noble look of her face thrilled me. It was not so easy to maintain the calm dignity of Washington in that moment. I wanted to lift her in my arms and hold her there, as you may well believe, but, alas, I was Washington! I dismounted and fell upon one knee before her and kissed her hand not too fervently, I would have you know, in spite of my temptation. She stood erect, although tears were streaming down her cheeks and her dear hand trembled when it rested on my brow and she could only whisper the words:

"'May the God of your fathers aid and keep you.'

"The undercurrent of restrained emotion in this little scene went out to that crowd, which represented the wealth, beauty and chivalry of France. I suppose that some of them thought it a bit of good acting.

"But we were to find in this little drama a climax wholly unexpected by either of us and of an importance to our country which I try in vain to estimate. When the prime minister handed the purse to Franklin he bade him open it. This the latter did, finding therein letters of credit for three million livres granted, of which we were in sore need. With it was the news that a ship would be leaving Boulogne in the morning and that relays on the way had been provided for his messenger. The invention of our beloved diplomat was equal to the demand of the moment and so he announced:

"'Washington is like his people. He turns from all the loves of this world to obey the call of duty. My young friend who has so well presented the look and manner of Washington will now show you his spirit.'

"He looked at his watch and added:

"'Within forty minutes he will be riding post to Boulogne, there to take ship for America.'

Indians of Amazon Valley

War is the normal state of the Jibaro Indian of the Amazon valley, first, for the purpose of getting wives from neighboring or enemy tribes, second, for revenge of injuries inflicted upon relatives during wars, then for enemy heads that are supposed to bring good luck to the possessors because of the sacrifice of the victim to the devil. The heads of their enemies also become a source of income to these savage Amazonian tribes, since they are exchanged with traders for arms, ammunition, etc.

The skull is removed from the head of the decapitated enemy through a slit in the back from the neck up. The skin is then boiled to arrest putrefaction, after which it is dried and reduced in size by inserting hot stones the size of an orange. When the interior has been shrunk to the size of the stones hot sand is used to continue the process of drying and shrinking. After the process is completed, the head is hung up in the hut as a trophy and feasts are held in its honor. These miniature heads, retaining to a remarkable degree characteristic likeness to the living person, are in demand in the outside world.—Detroit News.

Meskwaki Tribe Bought Its Own Land in Iowa

The Meskwaki originally were a Wisconsin tribe, but now are living on a reservation in Tama, Iowa, being the only Indians in Iowa.

Some years ago the government granted them a tract of land in Kansas. They tried living on it, became dissatisfied and returned to Iowa, where they purchased their own land and formed a colony.

The Meskwaki are a very primitive tribe, but in the last ten years have advanced to the stage where the brave will go out and perform manual labor. They figure quite largely in the canning industry, and are to be seen going to work in automobiles that are the envy of the whites.

These Indians never were known to send a visitor away hungry. The average Meskwaki will walk a mile and visit two weeks at the home of a friend. Squaws of the tribe are very subservient and patient, and never complain when hubby drags home a raft of company for dinner. Instead they pour additional water in the soup and perhaps roast another chicken or two.

It is not an infrequent occurrence for visitors to appear from out the woods in every direction just as a Meskwaki meal is being served, and if there isn't enough to eat, Mrs. Indian must prepare enough.—Detroit News.

Michigan Happenings

Mrs. Etta Hoadley, 40 years old, Dowagiac, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed their farm home, five miles west of Dowagiac. Mrs. Hoadley poured kerosene into a kitchen stove, causing an explosion. She rushed to a bedroom where rescue was cut off by spreading flames. Rescue workers who pulled the bed to the door found the body of a newly born child lying dead beside the mother. December 9, 1906, a brother and sister of Mrs. Hoadley were burned to death when trapped in an upstairs room of their home.

The new county jail at Fremont has been completed at a cost of $14,978.18, which is $21.82 less than the amount of the bond issue voted by the county for that purpose. The lowest bid from outside parties was for $21,000. Sheriff Noble McKinley, who is a contractor and builder, agreed to build it within the bond issue and was allowed by the board of supervisors to go ahead with the job. The building was recently inspected by a member of the board of corrections and charities and the work was very satisfactory.

The waterways committee of the Bay City Chamber of Commerce has announced the opening of another boat line out of Bay City. The second line will run to Alpena and Rogers City. Einwald Hanson, of Alpena, has purchased the C. and M., a government boat that has been a relief ship in the lighthouse service. She has capacity of 300 tons dead weight. The owner of the boat is now conditioning her in the Clute slip at the Third street bridge. She has already been rated by the American shipping bureau.

Petitions placed in circulation by the Merchants' bureau of Lansing, ask that a special election be called to vote on a bond issue to provide for the paving of Michigan and Washington avenues. The paving is asked at this time to provide employment for several hundred men out of work through the closing of factories. The proposal for the paving was lost at the spring election, but city officials claim this was because it was on the ballot with a number of outlying streets.

John Quarter, speed officer, it is reported, was discharged recently from the Grand Rapids police department for speeding. On the night of July 4, while off duty, he is said to have driven a borrowed automobile at a rate of nearly 80 miles an hour and escaped a pursuing motorcycle officer by driving through a sandy stretch of road several miles from this city. His identity was established through the license number of the car.

Forty delegates, appointed by their respective communities in counties interested in the formation of metropolitan areas, met at the Board of Commerce, Detroit, recently and organized themselves as the Michigan Metropolitan Conference. Permanent officers were named to set about the immediate preparation of a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the State Legislature.

Fred Southcombe, former treasurer of the Capital City Lodge, No. 45, I. O. O. F., who left Lansing last January with his funds $1,300 short, waived examination in Justice Court and was bound over to Circuit Court for trial. Southcombe went west after leaving notes indicating that he had ended his life. He was recognized by a friend and his arrest followed.

William Bodkin, 15, is dead near Unionville, victim of a rifle bullet fired accidentally during a "wild west" show which he and his brothers were staging in a barn on their father's farm. The boys were imitating a western picture which they had seen recently at a Unionville motion picture house. William was shot through the abdomen and bled to death.

W. A. Blake, 92 years old, one of the oldest Masons in Michigan, is dead at his home in Galesburg, nine miles east of Kalamazoo. He was a pioneer hardware dealer and served one term in the state House of Representatives, 1890-92. He was initiated into the Masonic order at Climax, Oct. 15, 1853.

Separated from their mother 20 years, Melvin M. Brush, of Kalamazoo and his brother, William A. Sweet, of Detroit, have appealed to the sheriff here for assistance in finding their missing parent.

Clifford Falcove, 3 years old, fell from a third floor window of his home in Detroit, while his mother was in another part of the house. He was taken to Receiving Hospital where it was found his skull, three ribs and his right arm were fractured. It was believed he would recover.

Two persons were injured when a south bound D. U. R. interurban collided with a heavy gravel truck on Woodward avenue, south of Bloomfield Highlands, near Pontiac.

Minor errors in both the departments of city treasurer and city comptroller of Lansing, have been found, and a shake-up in the comptroller's department with the introduction of a new system is expected to result as an outcome of a report following an audit of the city books.

The body of Charles Hall, Big Rapids merchant, was found recently. It lay 20 feet from the overturned boat in which Hall went fishing in Todd lake, near Orono.

Manure, Money—and Concrete

Every time you pitch manure out into the open barnyard, you throw away money. Your yearly loss amounts to about $13 per cow. That's no small sum when you come to figure it up.

You can save this money year after year by building a Concrete Manure Pit.

The Concrete Pit does not allow any of the valuable fertilizing elements to escape. And remember that two-fifths of the nitrogen in the manure is in the liquid.

A Concrete Manure Pit quickly pays for itself in the money it saves. And it keeps on earning dividends indefinitely. You can easily build one yourself.

During the past weeks, we have heard of at least nine candidates who will make the race for president in November, although perhaps Michigan voters may not have a chance at all the aspirants. Coolidge the Republican, Davis the Democrat, LaFollette the Progressive Faris the Prohibitionist, McDonald the Farmer Laborite, Johns the Socialist Laborite, Foster of the workers Party, Bernar McFadden editor of Physical Culture magazine, the nominee of the Liberty Party and Jude Gilbert Nations editor of the Searchlight the choice of the American Party comprise the happy family. Coolidge sounds like Wall street and State street, Davis sounds like Pierpont Morgan, Standard Oil and the Coronado Coal Co. While LaFollette sounds pretty good to us.

Almost a year ago, we were told that the annual school meeting of 1924 would be one of the largest in local history and the prediction proved correct as 52 voters were present Monday evening to express their desires, only three ballots were taken to place three persons upon the board of education which led some to believe that the affair had been pre arranged while others believed that the Ku Klux had a hand in the proceedings while there were others who believed that the voters had taken a lesson from the Democratic convention and had decided not to stay all night balloting. H. H. Alley was elected to succeed him self, Jay Pullen who has been a member of the board for the past nine years stated that he did not care for the office any longer and Mrs. Fred Randolph was selected to take his place. Dr. Sterling was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Leo Ballard.

TAXES and rising costs haven't yet robbed the BEECH-NUT Chewing Tobacco of quality and quantity. Just as much and just as good in 1924 as in 1915.

Recent years of higher revenue, State and Federal taxes, mounting labor and raw material costs, we've kept BEECH-NUT tight sealed against a reduction in weight and a rise in price.

Still the best and the most best chewing tobacco 10c. ever bought.

That's why sales exceed 250 million packages annually. That's why every third tobacco chewer in America ten-centsibly protests against any substitute.

The North Adams Womans Club members and their families enjoyed a very pleasant picnic at Devils Lake on Wednesday. About forty were present and the younger members of the company spent much time in boating, bathing and sports. At noon a feast such as these ladies know how to prepare was enjoyed in the park at Coon's Landing. These picnics have been made an annual affair.

The list of auto mishaps continues to grow. Driving along the Chicago turnpike near Jonesville at ten o'clock Saturday evening George Lee of Jackson collided with a horse and buggy. The occupants of the buggy were injured more or less and the horse ran away.

In the great Democratic hocus pocus (called a convention) in New York City it is said McAdoo had decided to throw his strength over to E. T. Meredith, editor of "Successful Farming" of Des Moines, Iowa,. This will be good news to a lot of humble sons of toil throughout the middle western states where Meredith is known as an up-standing citizen and Democratic chances are looking up. Meredith has been secretary of agriculture in the cabinet and is a decent citizen as compared with the political brigands who infest politics. Long may he wave!

We Will Insure Farm Property

We are now equipped to insure farm property and live stock in the National Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, one of the strongest in the east. Any farmer or resident who lives in the country can get insurance on his property. Come in if you want protection against fire or wind storm or both.

Who Did This?

Rev. Orrin VanLoon, pastor of a small church in the suburbs of Detroit, suddenly disappeared from his home and nothing could be learned of his whereabouts.

Eleven days later he was seen on the streets of Battle Creek where he suddenly collapsed. He was picked up in a dazed condition and his wife came and took him home. He either won't talk or has suffered a severe lapse of memory and no explanation is offered as to his disappearance. The police claim to be absolutely at sea, but on the man's back some accommodating gents have branded with a hot iron the letters K. K. K. This is the first indignity of the kind reported in Michigan to date.

Automobile Accident Sunday Evening

The Hillsdale Daily News came out Monday with a story of an automobile accident east of North Adams which eye witnesses say was slightly mixed, as is often the case where reports of such affairs are taken over the telephone. The facts of the case are as reported to us by those on the spot at the time: Earl Horton a neighbor of Lester Daniels, had called at the Daniels home late Sunday afternoon, accompanied by his sister Miss Thelma Horton a neighbor, Roy Tuttle, and Miss Marcia Sipes. They were leaving the Daniels yard in a Dodge touring car driven by Horton and the view of the highway is quite meager at this point. Horton saw a car coming from the east and halted to allow it to pass, then supposing the right-of-way was clear, continued on into the road turning slightly to the west as another car was heard approaching at high speed from the west.

The Horton car must have been about mid-way of the road when struck by the Ford coupe driven by Jack Haskell. Haskell's car struck the Dodge head-on just back of the front wheel and demolished the front wheels, the fender and the lights and even tore the engine loose from the frame. The Ford was occupied by Jack Haskell, Faye Stevens, and two young ladies, Viola Green and Marian Gibson, both of Scipio township. Evidently Haskell thought he could pass the Horton car on the outside or became confused. The occupants of both cars were all more or less cut by glass from the broken windshields and one young lady was hurled through the windshield of the Haskell car and one of the girls in the Horton car will be scarred for life. Mr. Daniels says the whole bunch were a bloody mess when taken into his home for first aid. Dr. McFarland was latter summoned to the Horton home and gave medical attention. It is conceded Haskell was driving 30 miles an hour and both cars had lights burning.

Bean Culture

Favorable conditions for the grower in combatting the bean maggot are (1) Early fitting of the seed bed; (2) Shallow planting one-half inch about right; (3) Plowing alfalfa sod in the previous fall.

Report received here on Monday stated that William Woolston had died quite suddenly at home in Grand Rapids, though he had been ailing for some time. He was a few months over 68 years of age and is survived by one brother Frank Woolston, and three sisters, Mesdames Geo. Fullerton and Calvin Burger of this village and Mrs. Fredericks of Detroit. Later report says the funeral was held at Grand Rapids on Wednesday and burial was there.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mayo of Mendon, Missouri passed through North Adams Saturday, July 19, en route for Toledo, Ohio. They were accompanied by his mother Mrs. E. J. Heiss, of Toledo. Mr. Mayo is the youngest son of Geo. Mayo and wife and has for a number of years been in Missouri and is cashier of the bank at Mendon Judging from the size of the auto Harry was driving prosperity has decided to camp on his trail.

John Williams received a shipment of two new McCormick-Deering tractors this week, one of which is sold to John Crapser north-west of town. It is what is known as the 15-30 h. p. and will be used for threshing this fall. The other tractor will be kept in stock by Mr. Williams to supply an emergency order. We noticed a number of good features in these superb machines among which was one-piece body casting all works enclosed, no chains or gears outside, air strainer and a emite oiling system.

A. J. Calhoun and family were called to Jackson on Monday to attend the funeral of his sister Mrs. L. E. Brown, who died Saturday morning July 19 following an operation for gall stones five weeks ago. She was 48 years of age and leaves to mourn the loss her husband, and daughter Eola, five brothers, A. J. of North Adams; John of Addison, Samuel and Ed of Somerset; Wm of Stockbridge; two sisters Mrs. Lin Kies of Somerset and Mrs. O. H. Garnett of Murdock Kansas also nephews and neices. Funeral services were conducted Monday July 21 from the late home 206 Garfield street, Jackson by Rev. Gordon of Addison at 1;30 p. m. and burial was in Oak Lawn Cemetery, Jackson.

Miss Donna Lynch pleasantly entertained at her home Friday afternoon July 18, honoring Miss Majorgia Knowles of North Adams and Miss Genevieve Cunningham of Dexter, Michigan. The guests included girls of the 1921 graduating class of North Adams High school and those who were house members at "605" while attending the State Normal College. Genevieve Cunningham teaches with Miss Lynch in the Detroit Public Schools Miss Majorgia Knowles cleverly announced to her friends the exact date of her marriage which will occur the latter part of next month, and received their congratulations and best wishes. A bounteous supper was served from a table artistically arranged in pink. white and green. Mrs. Frank Holcomb and Mrs. B. I. Lynch and Mrs. C. W. Bleech assissted with the serving. Regrets were received from Jackson, Moscow and Pittsford.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Howard Williams of this village at the Hillsdale hospital Monday, July 21, a ten pound son to be known as Roland Duane. Mother and son doing well.

Drain Commissioner Robt. Bates of Hillsdale was in town on Tuesday and made this office a call. Mr. Bates is again candidate for nomination at the primaries for the same office and we predict he will not only get the nomination but the election.

Jay Totten of near Churches Corners was brought to North Adams Wednesday afternoon suffering from the kick of a vicious horse on the frontal bone just above the eye. Dr. McFarland found upon examination that the skull was fractured. The injured man was about to hitch up the horse when the accident happened. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay O. Totten who live one and one-half mile from Churches. The injured man was made as comfortable as possible and the doctor hopes no serious results will follow.

We asked a man the othor day why he did not take the North Adams Advocate. He replied it was too rabid in political matters and other questions of the day to suit him—anyhow he did not care to read so much slush. He went on up the street and somebody asked him if he had seen a certain article in the Advocate. He answered "Yes, I read it last week in Neighbor Bill S———'s paper but I don't believe it just the came. Last week that Harvey came back at the other folks and as I read it most of the stuff is pure bunk." This kind of a citizen you will find in most all towns and he is usually a pin-head.

Movies Are Popular

North Adams' free moving pictures are certainly the champion drawing card of the season as people come from long distances to spend a pleasant hour with us and be amused. Next Wednesday evening we announce a real good film, "The Long Arm of Mannister" adapted from the vivacious story by B. Phillips Oppenheim and we are positive you will like it immensely. Some of you have read the story. Remember these splendid films are absolutely free and seats are provided

REMARKABLE RECOVERY OF MRS. SPINK

Gives Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Full Credit

Minn. Junc., Wis.—"I was under treatment, but nothing seemed to help me, and I was run-down and so weak that I had to remain in bed much of the time and was like an invalid. I had pains in my abdomen and in the female organs, and my stomach bothered me. My husband saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, thought it must be good, and brought it home to me and advised me to try it. After taking one bottle I was able to eat, and after six bottles I was doing my own work, which I hadn't been able to do for years. I have a new baby who is doing nicely, and I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and feeling better than I have for four years. The medicine is surely wonderful and a good thing to have in the house."—Mrs. GEORGE SPINK, Minnesota Junction, Wisconsin.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 98 per cent. benefited. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Blackmail Once Quite Innocent Transaction

The crime of blackmail, had, etymologically considered, a perfectly innocent origin. "Mail" is merely an old French word for rent, and Chief Justice Blackstone in his famous "Commentaries" distinguished between two legal forms of payment known respectively as "whitemail" and "blackmail." The former was a rent paid in white money—i. e., silver—while the latter was the contrasting term applied to payment in work, and so on, says the Detroit News.

Blackmail first derived its evil connotation from the practice of Highland chiefs and the marauding mosstroopers of the Scottish border, who exacted toll in kind from neighboring farmers as the price of noninterference with their cattle. Sir Walter Scott, in "Waverley," speaks in this sense of the "blackmail" paid to Vich Ian Vohr. The word was recognized in this significance by a Scotch act of James VI, and a statute of Elizabeth made the demand of blackmail in the four northern counties of England felony without benefit of clergy.

The Iron Gate

The Iron gate is near Orsova just below the place where the Danube river crosses the Hungarian boundary into Yugo-Slavia. It is a narrow pass in the Transylvania Alps and formerly obstructed navigation in the Danube. But in 1890 Hungary undertook to remove these obstructions by a long series of great blasting operations. Since this work was completed the stream has been navigable through the Iron gate, but the current is rapid and dangerous. This celebrated gap is about two miles long.—Pathfinder Magazine.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Traverse City—Martin Hansen, 47 years old, of Milwaukee, wheelsman of the steamer Stewart, was killed at South Fox Island when crushed between two logs he was helping to unload.

Petoskey—Mary Godink, 13-year-old daughter of John Godink, who lives in the northern part of Emmet County, lost her left foot when she stepped in front of the cutting bar of a mowing machine.

Grand Rapids—General Byron R. Pierce, loyal soldier and last Civil war general, was buried a few days ago, when taps had sounded the close of a life 95 years long—a life which played its full part in keeping the nation one.

Detroit—Sales reports from the 34 American branches of the Ford Motor company show that more than 1,000,000 Ford cars and trucks were sold at retail during the first six months of 1924. The actual figure is 1,036,978, which exceeds the total retail sales for the same period in 1923 by 133,095—again averaging 22,182 sales per month.

Holland—Forty-two farmers, armed with pitchforks, recently foiled attempts of deputies to seize farm produce, machinery and other articles on the farm of George Smyers, north of Holland, to satisfy a writ of attachment. When three officers tried to force their way into the premises the belligerent farmers threatened to lynch them, it is said.

Manistee—The Manistee city gas rate of $1.60 per 1,000 cubic feet has been reduced to $1.50 by the city commission. This is the second reduction made by the commission in six weeks, the first from $1.75 to $1.60 having been ignored by the Consumers Power Co. The action came as a climax to five years of negotiations with the company for a new gas plant.

Lansing—Three hundred and nine automobiles during the month of June were stolen throughout the state, according to the monthly report of the secretary of state's office. One hundred and eighty-five of this number were recovered, according to the report. The largest number of cars stolen, the report shows, were from Detroit. Hamtramck was next, and Ludington, third.

Judson L. Transue, real estate dealer, was recently elected mayor at Flint to succeed Mayor David R. Cuthbertson, who was recalled at an election held June 12. Transue's plurality over Cuthbertson in the city was 1.808. The total vote was: Cuthbertson, 10,034; Transue, 11,842. Homer Vette, former sheriff of Genesee County and former alderman of Flint received a total of only 547 votes in the city.

Flint—Judson L. Transue, real estate dealer, was recently elected mayor of Flint to succeed Mayor David R. Cuthbertson, who was recalled at an election held June 12. Transue's plurality over Cuthbertson in the city was 1,808. The total vote was: Cuthbertson, 10,034; Transue, 11,842. Homer Vette, former sheriff of Genesee County and former alderman of Flint received a total of only 547 votes in the city.

Lansing—An attempt by an unidentified foreigner to annoy Mrs. Ollie Gibson, police matron, almost cost him his liberty when Mrs. Gibson grabbed him by the coat collar as he made an insulting remark to her and dragged him toward the police station. She was successful in holding him for two blocks, but as they neared the station the man managed to wrench himself free and disappeared in the darkness. Officers searched the locality immediately, but could find no trace of him.

Lansing—Hearings on the petition of the Michigan Central Railroad for permission to abandon its agent stations in nine small Southwestern Michigan points was held before the State Public Utilities Commission recently. The railroad complained that there is insufficient business to warrant maintaining agents. Counsel for the villages protested, claiming that agent service is essential and that the railroad has not shown sufficient proof of unprofitable business.

Flint—E. L. Mason, boy scout executive, in a conference with E. W. Viets, manager of the local safety council, recently made known his plans for the coming year. According to Mason, all boy scouts will cooperate in the various campaigns which are sponsored by the Flint Safety council. The scouts are a medium by which literature and notices may be placed in the hands of the general public without loss of time and the waste which irdinarily arises when other individuals perform this sort of work.

Detroit—Detroit firemen were called upon recently to extinguish a spectacular fire that swept an ice house, Springwells, causing an estimated loss of $100,000. It was reported more than 50 tons of ice were in the building when the blaze was discovered. When the Detroit firemen arrived the flames were bursting from nearly all parts of the wooden structure which was 650 feet long, 60 feet wide and 70 feet high. The heat soon destroyed a number of railroad tracks. Within a short time clouds of smoke enveloped the neighborhood.

Niles—Mrs. Henry Crate, living on a farm near here, was burned fatally when a kerosene stove exploded. The explosion was the sixth here within the last three weeks, two other women having been burned to death in other kerosene fires. Local authorities claim the kerosene supplied to Niles has too high an explosive content, and that the fatal accidents have resulted from this. In addition to the fatalities here, two persons have burned to death at Dowagiac recently. The kerosene used is reported to come from the same source.

Big Rapids—Five thousand sheep have been shipped from Chicago into Mecosta County where they will graze upon pasture lands west of Big Rapids. Caulkins & Augsbury's ranch near Hungerford received the first consignment of six carlords.

Vicksburg—Plans are being completed for the annual reunion of the Latter Day Saints of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana at Lemon Park, Indian Lake, August 22-31. Frederick M. Smith of Kansas City will be the chief speaker.

Muskegon—Hamburg street has been abolished here. Residents objected to the name Hamburg street and Mayor Archibald Hadden joined in the request. The residents tired of being called hamburgers. So the street will be known as Catherine avenue.

Charlevoix—Clyde Todd, 24 years old, Philadelphia, was drowned on his birthday in Round Lake. He was thrown overboard while attempting to start the motor on a pontoon air propelled speedboat. Coast guards were called and by the aid of electric lamps, lowered in the water, the body was recovered.

Port Huron—The officials of the Rapid Railway are planning to give hourly bus service as far north as Lake Port, 12 miles from Port Huron, for the summer tourists at the various beaches. Two large buses have arrived here, and if the passenger traffic warrants it, the service will be extended to other points.

Detroit — Fire of undetermined origin caused a loss of $200,000, when it destroyed Ponchartrain-on-the-Lake one of the best known roadhouses in the Detroit district. The building and contents, which included furnishings from the old Ponchartrain hotel of Detroit, from which it took its name, were insured for $88,000.

Detroit—Two children playing in the street in a child's "express wagon" were caught under a heavy truck which overturned and killed, them almost in front of the eyes of their mothers, although the driver of the truck crashed his machine against a telegraph pole in an effort to avert the accident. The truck overturned and fell on them.

Grand Rapids—Miss Helen E. Jones 81 years old, Grand Rapids' oldest native resident, died recently at the home of a brother, Charles W. Jones, after a long illness. She was born in a west side home across the road from which was a camp of Ottawa Indians. She was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Jones, pioneers of this city.

Lansing—For stealing 28 cents, Charles White and A. J. Crisser, both of Dimondale, must serve two to fifteen years at Ionia reformatory. The men were sentenced in circuit court here after pleading guilty to breaking and entering at night while armed. George and Frank Miller, arrested with them, were ordered released by the court, although both boys had previously pleaded guilty.

Detroit—The Highland Park taxpayers burden during the fiscal year just ended was lightened by nearly $40,000 collected mainly from speeders and drunks. In the justice court the total number of cases heard was 4,008, an increase of 31 per cent. There were 1,393 cases of speeding and 500 cases of drunkenness. While the budget appropriation for the court for the current year's expenditure is $13,300, receipts last year amounted to $41,003.

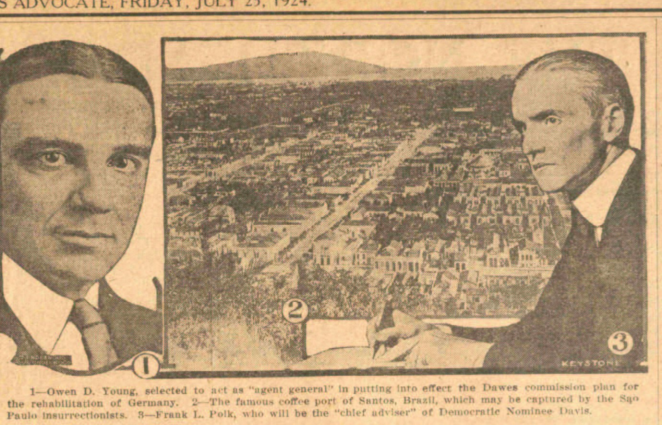
Lansing—The State Public Utilities Commission has issued an order making effective July 31 a new schedule of switching rates in Detroit, the same as that of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The new rates are $16 a car for terminal switching, $12 for inter terminal, and $7 for reciprocal. The commission says the Michigan Central was not justified in proposing cancellation of rates for intermediate switching to Detroit manufacturers.

Flint—P. S. Sheldon, balloonist at the Flint Amusement Park, and a woman partner named Hastings, had narrow escapes from death when they were forced to make landings in a residential section with their parachutes after a double ascension in the same balloon. The man landed on the roof of a house and was taken to Hurley Hospital, suffering from severe lacerations to his face. The woman landed on electric light wires and dripped several feet to the ground, but escaped injury.

Dowagiac—A heart attack proved fatal to Fred H. Baker, 65 years old, a well known business man and capitalist of Dowagiac, while he was motoring to South Bend recently. Railroad workers noticed an automobile drive into a ditch and stop and about an hour later found that the driver was dead. Sheriff Earl Sill was called, who recognized the dead man as Mr. Baker. Baker had just attended a directors' meeting of the Dowagiac Manufacturing Co. and apparently was in good health. He is survived by his widow and two sons.

Lansing—The average cost per capita of maintaining inmates of the State hospital institutions is $1.35 a day, according to a report. The lowest per capita cost is in the Michigan Home and Training School with 76.8 cents. The cost per inmate in other institutions is: Kalamazoo Hospital, 95.4 cents; Pontiac State Hospital, 97.4; Traverse City State Hospital, 79; Newberry State Hospital, 92.4; Ionia State Hospital, $1.02; State Psycopathic Hospital, $3.39; Michigan Farm Colony, 86.9; State Sanatorium, $2.48.

Grand Rapids—Cold weather this summer has cut the ice cream manufacturer's business from 25 to 50 per cent and ice companies report a business not exceeding 80 per cent of normal years, a survey indicates. Ice cream manufacturers, who usually operate their plants 24 hours a day during the summer months, are operating only during the daytime. Family consumption of ice has been cut to the point where drivers are returning to their stables at 10 a. m., though their trips are scheduled to keep them out until 3 p. m.



1—Owen D. Young, selected to act as "agent general" in putting into effect the Dawes commission plan for the rehabilitation of Germany. 2—The famous coffee port of Santos, Brazil, which may be captured by the Sao Paulo insurrectionists. 3—Frank L. Polk, who will be the "chief adviser" of Democratic Nominee Davis.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Allied Conference Begins in Optimistic Amity—Fighting in Brazil.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE conference of ten nations at London on the Dawes plan for the rehabilitation of Germany and all of Europe began Wednesday with an atmosphere of amity and optimism. Owen D. Young, the New York lawyer who was a member of the Dawes commission, has accepted—for a period of three months—a suggestion that he become "agent general for the reparations payments," which is a sort of fiscal agent for the execution of the Dawes plan. He is also willing to act as arbiter for the reparations commission on questions concerning Germany's default.

This latter position was created on July 8 in the note of Prime Minister MacDonald and Premier Herriot to the powers after conversation between London, Washington and Paris. Mr. Young, when acting as arbiter of reparations questions, would eliminate the French majority on the reparations commission.

Before this can be officially announced, however, two steps are necessary: Adoption by the London conference of the MacDonald-Herriot protocol creating the arbiter of the reparations commission, and some step by President Coolidge approving Mr. Young's appointment.

Mr. Young's acceptance of the position is definite, however, and the American State department has approved it in order to facilitate Mr. MacDonald's job in getting the allied conference to put the Dawes plan into effect. The action became necessary because of the demand of J. P. Morgan & Co. for such representation in the reparations commission in exchange for floating a loan of approximately $200,000,000, chiefly in America.

REAL fighting marks the "revolution" staged by the Paulistas of Sao Paulo against the federal government of the United States of Brazil. Strict censorship of news suppresses details, but enough transpires to indicate that the insurrection may be important. The rebels demand the resignation both of state President Carlos da Campos of Sao Paulo and of President Arturo Bernardes of Brazil, together with guarantees at the forthcoming state and federal elections for the pardon of the rebels in the 1922 outbreak.

Federal official bulletins picture a handful of rebels in possession of Sao Paulo city, soon to be captured. Reports from various sources are to the effect that the losses on both sides already total 3,000; that the rebels, led by Gen. Isidoro Diaz Lopez, are 20,000 strong and can take Santos at any time; that President Da Campos is a fugitive in Rio de Janeiro, and that the federal government fears to risk a decisive battle, having no faith in the loyalty of its soldiers. Anyway, the Italian consul at Santos has asked for two warships and the American consul at Santos, H. W. Goforth—a suggestive name—has also requested naval vessels.

Sao Paulo, the state, is where we Americans get our coffee—about 6,215,000 bags of 132 pounds each a year. It is the richest of the 20 states of the Brazilian republic; is a lot bigger than all New England and has a population of 4,500,000. Sao Paulo, its capital city, is 200 miles south of Rio de Janeiro; is Brazil's second city, with a population of 530,000; is ultramodern.

Santos, Sao Paulo's port—and the most famous coffee port of the world, is 35 miles distant. It has one of the finest harbors in South America; is thoroughly modern and has a population of about 90,000.

AMERICA for the eighth successive time wins the Olympic track and field sports, scoring 255 points to 166 for Finland; 85½ for Great Britain; 31½ for Sweden; 26½ for France and so on. Of the 45 nations entered only 19 broke into the scoring column. Twenty-seven events were held, with the two leaders monopolizing first places as follows: United States, 12; Finland, 10; Great Britain, 3, and Australia and Italy 1 each. Eight new world's records and 13 new Olympic records were made.

The American victories were scored in the following events: 400-meter hurdles, high jump, broad jump, shot-put, 110-meter hurdles, 200-meter dash, hammer throw, pole vault, decathlon, 400-meter relay, 1,600-meter relay, and the discus. The Finns took first in the 10,000-meter run, the javelin, pentathlon, 3,000-meter steeplechase, 1,500-meter run, 5,000-meter run, 10,000-meter cross-country team and individual 3,000-meter team race and the marathon. England won the 100-meter dash, the 800-meter run and 400-meter run. Italy took the 10,000-meter walk, and Australia the hop, step and jump.

An analysis of the point scores shows the evenness of the American team strength, our athletes tallying in 24 of 27 finals, missing only in the walk, the 10,000-meter flat and hop, step and jump. The Finns scored in 17 events and Great Britain in 16. Analysis of the American points shows that Western athletes gained 166 as against 60 for the East, the remaining 29 being won in relay races or team events where East and West worked together.

THE largest co-operative project ever attempted is under way. Charter papers for the Grain Marketing company were granted at Springfield, Ill., Tuesday. The company is capitalized at $25,000,000 and will be entirely owned and controlled by farmers. It will take over the scores of elevators, private wires, offices and other assets of the Armour Grain company, the Rosenbaum Grain corporation, Rosenbaum Brothers, the J. C. Shaffer Grain company, all of Chicago, and the Davis, Noland, Merrill Grain company of Kansas City.

Members of the temporary board of directors include: O. E. Bradfute, Ohio, president American Farm Bureau federation; W. J. Brown, Minnesota, president American Wheat Growers, Inc.; Harry L. Keefe, Nebraska, president United States Grain Growers, Inc.; Fred A. Mudge, Peru, Ill., president Illinois Farmers' Elevator association; J. M. Dyer, Spencer, Iowa, president Iowa Farmers' Elevator association; Millard Myers, Illinois Farmers' elevator; Oscar Ashworth, Mattoon, Ill.; Gray Silver, West Virginia; J. W. Coverdale, Iowa.

The purpose of the new company is to secure for the farmers complete control of the marketing and handling of their produce, which is a complete change from the procedure heretofore. It will also serve as "big brother" of all co-operative elevators, of which there are more than 5,000 throughout the country. Its service will extend to any other farm organization, pool or individual farmer.

IT MAY be the "ad men," instead of the pacifists, preachers, women or Rotarians, who bring back peace to a distracted and war-worn world. The International Advertising convention met in London last week, with delegates from all over the world, including 2,000 from the United States. Lord Burnham, in his address of welcome, said that advertising was "the fine art of trade and the humane literature of business." Referring to the international character of the convention, he said:

"Internationalism is a word which has been soiled by ignoble use, but it is to internationalism that is founded on justice and patriotism that we have to look for progress and the prosperity of mankind."

Lou Holland, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, said in his reply that he hoped from the conference would come a "Big Brother" movement that would lead the nations into paths of peace and prosperity.

MANAGEMENT of the Democratic campaign will presumably be notably diplomatic, inasmuch as Mr. Davis was ambassador to the Court of St. James and Frank L. Polk, his right-hand man, was acting secretary of state for six months, 1918-19. It should not lack militancy, either, since Mr. Polk is a grandson of the Confederacy's famous "Fighting Bishop," Leonidas Polk, Episcopal bishop of Louisiana and lieutenant general, who was killed in 1864 by a cannon ball at Pine Mountain, Ga. It is unofficially stated that Mr. Polk will be a sort of general manager, with the title of chief adviser. Mr. Davis has withdrawn from all his business connections in order to give all his time to the campaign.

William Randolph Hearst, who flew the coop the moment the Democrats nominated "the Morgan attorney," and Mayor Hylan of New York city, are taking a vacation on the publisher's California ranch. Mr. Hearst says: "Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Davis are a little too conservative for us and Mr. LaFollette is a little too radical. We probably will print the news as it happens, and our own policies, and let it go at that."

Former Candidate McAdoo has gone to Europe, but gave out a statement before sailing in which he expressed his confidence that Nominee Davis would, as President, "faithfully execute the party's progressive mandate," and promised to take part in the campaign upon his return in September.

DISASTROUS forest fires were burning all last week in all the Pacific coast states from Southern California up into Canada. Thursday the menace was lessened in places by rains and light winds. Probably 30,000 men, many of them drafted from touring automobiles, hotels and camps, have been fighting the flames. Thursday night San Francisco used the radio to warn campers near seven fires to get out at once. The loss of life has been small, though hundreds have had narrow escapes. The property loss has been large. Forests, mining camps and lumber camps have suffered to the extent of millions.

NOMINEE LAFOLLETTE will not indorse Nominee Bryan as a Democratic-LaFollette vice presidential candidate, but will fight him because he is "tainted with his party's ills." He will even carry the fight into Nebraska. LaFollette is planning a "rich man's campaign out of the poor man's pocket." Plans call for a campaign fund—minimum, $3,000,000; maximum, $5,000,000—each worker to contribute one day's pay, with smaller contributions thankfully received. Alexander Kahn, owner of the Jewish newspaper Forward (Chicago), is to be the collection agent.

UNCLE SAM is getting out of Santo Domingo. Gen. Horatio Vasquez has been inaugurated President of the Dominican republic. The American flag has been lowered and the Dominican emblem flies in its stead. The United States marines are being put on transports. It has taken Uncle Sam eight years to straighten things out so that the Dominicans are in shape to try to go it alone again. Are they grateful? Well, hardly. Never for one moment during the eight years did they cease from protest.

OUR American world flyers landed in Paris Tuesday and in London Wednesday. Thursday they landed in Brough, where they will take a week in preparing for their flight across the Atlantic. They are tentatively scheduled to arrive in Boston August 21 by way of the Orkney islands, Iceland, Greenland, Labrador and Nova Scotia.

IN THE indictments growing out of the oil leases Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, pleaded not guilty at El Paso and furnished $5,000 bail. Harry F. Sinclair in Washington made arrangements to carry to the higher court his contention that a senate committee cannot compel a citizen to answer questions.

The Free State government has released Eamon de Valera, imprisoned since last August.

Charles B. Warren, American ambassador to Mexico, says he will return July 22 to resign, his work there being done.

Ambassador Massanao Hanihara has sailed for Japan, expressing the hope that Japanese-American relations will remain friendly and that he will return to Washington.

Jules J. Jusserand, since 1903 ambassador from France to the United States and dean of the diplomatic corps at Washington, has gone home for a vacation. It is rumored that he may not return.

The prince of Wales, having become thirty years of age, has been obliged to promise his royal parents that he will "begin to look around for a wife." He will sail in August for the United States—to see the international polo games.

Power Does Much for Efficiency on Farm

Urbana, Ill.—Farming leads all industries as a user of power and, in turn, the American farmer has more power and machinery at his command than the farmer of any other country, according to E. W. Lehmann, head of the farm mechanics department of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Most of the machines of production for the farm have been developed during the last 75 years, and in that time the farmer has changed from "the man with a hoe" to a user of power and a large scale producer, he said.

"The last 25 years have seen a marked increase in the use of mechanical power on the farm," Mr. Lehmann said. "This increase has multiplied the farmer's efficiency many times. There was an increase of about 4 per cent in the number of farmers, but production increased from 35 to 68 per cent in principal farm products.

"Power and machinery also are improving the farm home. They have made possible running water, the greatest labor-saving factor in the farm home. Where electric power is available the time required for churning, separating, washing, pumping the water and cleaning the house can be cut in half and practically no hard labor is involved. Electric power also has made adequate home lighting possible. Good lighting not only safeguards the eyes, but also promotes cleanliness and sanitation and makes the home bright and cheerful."

Made Apology Hard

A young man, springing into an overcrowded train, trod on the toes of an old man in a corner seat.

"I'm sorry," he apologized.

Old Man (hand behind ear)—Eh?

Young Man (more loudly)—I beg your pardon.

Old Man—Eh-h-h?

Young Man (shouting)—I trod on your foot. It was an accident—an accident.

Old Man (catching his last words only)—An accident? You don't say so! Anybody hurt?—Pittsburgh Post.

A FEELING OF SECURITY WHEN YOU USE SWAMP-ROOT

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit-producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

To Suit His Fad

A canvasser was selling tickets for a raffle, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to a charitable object. He went all round the village, and at last called at the shop of Mr. Mark Time, butcher.

The old man asked what the prize was.

"It is a magnificent encyclopedia," replied the canvasser. "Very useful, indeed, and absolutely the finest on the market."

"Oh," said Mark, "I must have a couple of tickets for my son, Sam. He's a great cyclist."—London Tit-Bits.

To Have a Clear, Sweet Skin
Touch pimples, redness, roughness or itching, if any, with Cuticura Ointment, then bathe with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse, dry gently and dust on a little Cuticura Talcum to leave a fascinating fragrance on skin. Everywhere 25c each.—Advertisement.

Reminders of Past Glory

A naval officer staying in the old inn, Lord Nelson, situated on the quay at Poole, England, recently discovered some curious scratchings on the wainscot of his room. Investigation revealed these to be plans of naval battles drawn by Lord Nelson, who stayed in that inn with Lady Hamilton. Other marks and scratchings have been identified as dating back to the days of the seadogs of the Elizabethan age.

Don't chuckle if you put over a substitute when an advertised product is called for. Maybe your customer will never come back.

Ben Mulford, Jr.

Behind

"Howdy, Gap!" saluted an acquaintance. "How's all the folks?" "Well I'll just—tell you, Gabe," responded Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "We've had such a bumper crop of chiggers that most of us are 'way behind with our scratching."—Kansas City Star.

Bible In Public Schools

Senator William L. Case of Benzonia, representing the twenty seventh district in the upper house of the Michigan Legislature, introduced a bill which will meet the approval of all "our folks". It is Senate Bill No. 306, File No. 270, and was introduced on April 9th, and referred to the committee on education. It's title reads:

"To provide for the daily reading of selected passages from the Bible in the public schools of this state."

The bill is brief and to the point: The People of the State of Michigan enact:

Section 1. The district board or the board of education of each school district shall provide that at least one copy of the Bible be kept in every public school session room whenever said public school is in session.

Section 2. The superintendent of public instruction shall prepare or secure an extended list of references to passages from the Bible suitable for daily reading in the public school and furnish the same free to the school districts of the state. A passage from the Bible shall be read or caused to be read, without comment daily in each public school session room, by a pupil, other person or teacher in charge: Provided, that the said reading by any pupil be purely voluntary, and that any version of the Bible may be used at the option of the reader, and the passage read be chosen from those furnished for that purpose by the superintendent of public instruction

A public hearing of Senator Case' bill was held. Among the telegrams received in favor of the bill was this one from Bishop Henderson:

Senator William L. Case,
Legislative Chambers,
Lansing, Mich.

Dear Sir:

"I most heartily endorse your Senate Bill No. 306, File No. 270, providing for the daily reading of portions of the Bible in the public schools of Michigan. It ought to become a law. It is in full accord with the 'ordinance of 1787', under which the Territory of Michigan was organized, and which declared 'religion, morality and knowledge to be necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind Our fair commonwealth should fall into line with other states in requiring the reading of the Bible—God's word to man—in the public schools. I hope your bill will be put upon its speedy passage."

Our churches and people should promptly urge their Senators and Representatives to further the speedy enactment of Senator Case's bill into law. The measure, we are informed, has the approval of Gov. Groesbeck. Attorney General Daughtery is quoted as saying that no question of constitutionality is involved. Lieut. Gov. Read is reported as saying there is no reason why the bill should not pass at this session. Supintendent of Public Instruction Johnson will, if the bill becomes a law, appoint a group of leading churchmen of various creeds to select the passages to be used.

Similar legislation has placed the Bible in thirty per cent of the public schools of America. In the schools of New York City, Washington, D. C., and in the states of Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Alabama, the Bible is read every school day. Surely Michigan should not lag behind.

Kentucky has joined that growling number of States which enact laws with reference to Bible reading in public schools. The gist of a bill recently signed by the government of that State is that "the teacher in charge shall read or cause to be read a portion of the Bible daily in every classroom or session of the common schools of Kentucky in the presence of the pupils therein assembled" No pupil will be required to read the Bible against the wish of his parents or guardians. Failure of any teacher to carry out the provisions of this law will be cause for revoking his license to teach.

Kalamazoo is starting in the fall with a new program for Bible in the schools. The plan is to use Bible stories for literature every week for the grades, and have Bible readings and moral teaching and then our high school will have daily assembly or chapel in the new auditorium Another part of the plan is to allow all students who wish to be excused for one hour a week for church training, this privilege, and trust the churches to take advantage of this opportunity to supply teachers, for credit will be given.

JOHNSON ORDERS BIBLE IN ALL PUBLIC SCHOOLS

A Bible in every school, was the order issued by the Superintendent of Public Instruction Thomas E. Johnson today.

In letters sent out to school officials, Mr. Johnson declared;

"Do not allow your school to reopen without having available a copy of the Bible. It might be well if the copy be of King James version, the language of which is familiar to us all."

The letter goes on to state that the superintendent recently visited a school house and was astounded to find that there was not a Bible in the building.- Christian Advocate.

Charles W. Bryan was born in Salem, Ill., February 10, 1867. He was educated at the old Chicago university and as a young man went to Lincoln, Neb., where William Jennings Bryan had preceded him. He became identified with his brother in politics in 1896. He was associate editor of Bryan's publication, The Commoner. He was selected in 1915 as mayor by the city commissioners of Lincoln. He established a municipal coal yard from which he retailed all over the state. He was elected governor after truce had been declared between the Nebraska Democratic factions headed by his brother and by former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock. He claims to have effected a saving of $1,000,000 in operating expenses of the state government. He married in 1892 Miss Elizabeth Brokaw of Salem. There are two grown up children. Governor Bryan is not a member of any church; his wife and children are Baptists.

Of the three great modern beverages—chocolate, coffee and tea—chocolate was the first to reach western countries. Tea followed in 1588, and coffee in the following century. Cortez found cocoa in Mexico in 1519, where its use by the natives dated from time immemorial.

A magnificent gold buckle, about three inches in diameter, was turned up in the soil on the Nedrobor farm, on East Buhn Island near Stavanger, Norway. The buckle is in three sections; the upper surface is of gold, richly ornamented with a design in filigree of Norwegian workmanship; the example of goldsmith work of the Viking age which Norway possesses.

Remodeling The Smith House

Fifty years of hotel keeping marks the passing of the ancient and honorable Smith Hotel of Hillsdale on the corner of Howell and Bacon streets. This old hostelry which has seen so many historic changes in the building of Hillsdale county and city has passed out of record as a hotel and becomes a business block. It was recently purchased at a meager price by the jewelry firm of Wood & Seybold and these gentlemen at once began extensive change in its make-up. The floor which was so far above the street level has been let down considerably the partitions taken out below and converted into large mercantile rooms suitable for stores. This will leave a very high airy ceiling and make a very desirable business block. The upper rooms will be used as we understand it, same as now for hotel purposes.

What tales this old building could tell if it would! The coming and going of noted characters, the march of time and events. The trials held in the old court house where notables of an early day congregated and took their meals and lodging at the Smith House, of Judges and Lawyers long since passed to their reward—men who built Howell Street; men like Fairfield who founded Hillsdale College way up yonder on the big hill: Henry Waldron the father of Hillsdale's banking system; Rowlson who published the famous Hillsdale Standard the stirring days of '61 and '64 when the boys in blue marched grandly away to the fife and drum's chorus, and then the sad return of the dead or mangled forms with empty sleeves. Some went away as privates but came back with shoulder straps; some withered and rotted to death in southern prison pens.

We are sorry to say that later years have not upheld the noble traditions of the early Smith House and it has many times been used for far less important and worthy causes than above mentioned. While Hillsdale is not crowded for want of business blocks yet this will make a very desirable addition to the street.

Gratitude For Kicks

The other day in Kansas City the Knights of Columbus, a Catholic organization, formally offered the convention committee of the Shriners, Masonic organization, the use of the Knights of Columbus new club house during the Shriners national convention. The new club house has 85 rooms with shower baths, gymnasium and a swimming pool, the whole plant was at the disposal of the visitors during the convention.

If Christ were to come to Kansas City, where would He find good will among men? Would He go to those who are preaching race hatred, religious prejudice and bigotry or to those who, despite their grave difference of creed, turn in neighborly kindness and good fellowship to their friends with this offer of substantial help.

And you, kind sir, here is an acid test of your soul. Do you get a thrill when you read some oft exploded and discredited "oath" either of Mason or of Knights of Columbus; or does your heart swell in pride for humanity when you read some little item that shows how Christ, preaching good will among men, did not die upon the cross in vain?—Editorial from Emporia Gazette.

The Battle Creek Outrage

There is strong talk of a complete investigation of the recent affair at Berkley, Mich., a suburb of Detroit, wherein a minister of the gospel, guilty of nothing in particular except talking disparagingly of the K. K. K. was taken from his home by force and branded like a range calf with some instrument on the back. No body pretends to know who did the deed, and so it is a good thing to find out.

If you should interview the K. K. K. you would probably be told the Catholics did it so as to lay the Ku Klux in bad with the world; on the contrary if you quizzed the Catholics they would undoubtedly assure you that Klansmen were responsible so as to lay it upon followers of Rome, and all round it is a nasty mess which needs cleaning up.

Night riders in the South, Italian Camorra and the old-time White Caps and Molly Maguires used these tactics to terrify opponents, and if we are again going into the dark ages 'twould be entirely proper to fit dark age punishments onto these atrocities.

The Germans started such outrages during the World war to terrify the Allies, supposing they had the Universe whipped—but one must read "The Miller of Louvain" and similar stories to know how the French peasantry retaliated, and now just look at the Heinies! Who's whipped?

Residents of this village and the surrounding country will be sorry to hear of the affliction of Mrs. Deane Burnham (nee Nina Ford) an account of which we copy from the Maple Rapids paper of July 3: "Wanda Louise Burnham, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deane Burnham, was born Nov. 19, 1923 at Cassopolis, and died at the University Hospital in Ann Arbor, June 30, 1924, after an illness of five days. The funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. Burnham's parents, Rev. Ford and wife, in Maple Rapids, July 3rd. Interment in St. Louis, Rev. W. B. Oldt of that village having charge of the services.

Why The Klan?

Did or did not the Ku Klux Klan commit the vicious act of branding the back of Rev. Oren Van Loon? It would be too great an assumption to say they did, although the evidence is serious.

Members of the congregation had asked Rev. VanLoon if a burning cross was symbolic of all that was good and Christian. Rev Van Loon told them that it was not. He said that, if anything, the symbol of Christianity was thus desecrated. A few days later he disappeared from his home and for eleven days the mother and little daughter waited anxiously in their little bungalow for some word from him. He was found in the city far from home. He was in a stupor probably caused from suffering and lack of nourishment. On his back were three ugly scars K. K. K.

Did the Klan do this, or was it someone who wanted to add a further reflection on the Klan's reputation? If the latter was the case is such an organization that would excite a man's fury to such a point fit to join? The organizer in Macomb county told the writer of this editorial that the Klan principles were merely militant Masonry Masons will be glad to hear this. The organizer himself is not a member of the Masonic order,

The Ku Klux Klan is an appeal to that class which is dissatisfied. It has a certain patriotic appeal, made so through the cleverness of its organizers. The factors of race and religion were injected because the originators understood men's weaknesses. Such incidents as the branding of Rev. Oren VanLoon are the direct result of a few individuals' desire for power and the vain satisfaction of being held in awe.

Every member of the Ku Klux Klan contributes to every outrage that any of its members perpetrates because it is a group as a whole spurred on by their suave leaders; that fans the spark of man's nature into the flames of passion. From such passion comes just such a tragedy as the Rev. Van Loon case. Those who are sincere in their desire for 100 per cent Americanism can do much better by giving a little more time to their Bible in learning the true fundementals of love of country and fellow-men.—Mt. Clemens Monitor.

Violators Of 28 Hour Law Fined

Fines amounting to $3,700 were imposed on 16 violaters of the 28 hour law in cases that were prosecuted during the month of June, according to reports of the United States Department of Agriculture This Federal law requires that shipments of livestock must be given proper feed, water, and rest after 18 hours of continuous confinement in shipment. While the railroad companies endeavor to comply with the law, uninformed and careless employees cause most of the violations.

Rigid enforcement of the law has resulted in greatly bettering conditions under which livestock is shipped. In order to comply with the law many railroad companies have so greatly improved their transportation and yard facilities that stock suffers little discomfort while en route to market.

Market Gardeners To Have Field Day

A market gardeners' field day, the first of its kind ever held in the state, has been called at the M. A. C. for August 20.

Material of interest to all vegetable growers in the state is being planned for the day's program. A general afternoon meeting, inspection of extensive experimental plats in the gardens of the college horticultural department, a basket picnic lunch at noon, and other features are listed.

The experimental work to be studied will include tests on extra early varieties of tomatoes and on newer strains of extra early sweet corn. A number of plant breeding experiments which have direct bearing on the problems of the trucker as well as tests on truck crop fertilization, will be shown.

Plans for the "first annual" market gardeners day are being made by Prof. Geo. Starr of the M. A. C. horticultural staff, who is also one of the best known practical truck gardeners in the state.

Norma Talmage in Temperance Work

We hear nothing but praise for the excellent films which were shown on Friday evening here because of rain on Wednesday evening, rendering a postponement necessary. Our films for the free movies are so much better than they were last year most anyone would notice it.

The theme of Norma Talmage's creation on Friday evening, July 11 was the devilishness of liquor and how its insiduous craving is handed to children by heredity. The lesson was a mighty good one and if we mistake not can be assimilated right here in North Adams. Norma never did anything more beneficial than when she appeared in this excellent film.

The genial clown "Charlie Chaplin" got in his slap-stick work to the joy of small Americans who whooped 'er up for him to the finish. It is remarkable that any one man could live through so much rough and tumble as this harlequin seems to take.

Farm Day To Be Ladies Day Too

In the expectation that "the family" will come along with Dad for the annual Farmers' Day at M. A. C. on August 1, plans are being made to provide special headquarters and entertainment for women visitors. As a result, Farmers' Day will be Ladies' Day too at the college this year.

Making their headquarters in the new M. A. C. home economics building, the ladies will find much of interest in their own particular field, and in addition they will join the men in inspection trips over the college grounds in the morning. The big afternoon meeting under the campus trees is, of course, planned for all the Farm Day visitors.

The livestock parade, or "style review", the band concert, the talks by national agricultural authorities, and the specially prepared exhibits are expected to be of as much interest to the women as to the men.

During the afternoon, tea will be served in the parlors of the home economics building, the faculty of the college home economics department serving as hostesses for the social gathering.

Modern Farm Homes Sought In Campaig

Modern conveniences in the rural homes of the state will be the aim of a special demonstration campaign to be put on in 25 counties of the state this summer by extension men of agricultural engineering department at the M. A. C.

The campaign team, which will travel by truck with full equipment to demonstrate the practicability of farm water systems and sewage disposal systems, will start from Ingham county the first week in August, ending its tour in Clinton county late in October. At least two demonstrations are to be made in each county, according to O. E. Robey, of the M. A. C. staff, who is in charge of arrangements.

Watch Yonr Step!

We accidentally picked up a dealer's paper the other day that gave a long dissertation on the proper way to condition a second hand car before putting it up for sale. First, the article warned the dealer that purchasers of used cars these days were mighty shrewd observers and most of them knew enough about an engine to pick its flaws right speedily. What would interest the dealer along this line ought to prove mighty good advice for the buyer so we are giving a few of the hints thrown out. As far as we could see the article was "on the square" and especially warned dealers to play fair at all times as practiced deceit was sure to come to light sooner or later (generally too soon) and queer the deal.

In the first place it said "stick to the truth." At last you have found a prospect who is actually "sold" on your used car. The demonstration has been perfect, the old boat has pulled the hills sweetly and chugged steadily along at five miles an hour. The prospect gets out to examine the tires.

"Blah! you can"t tell me that a car with only 5,000 miles on its speedometer should have four different makes of tires on its wheels I guess not" And your prospect is gone. It is your fault for not making the sale—your failure to remedy the car so that it will check absolutely with your sales talk. What you haven't taken into account is that you've got to have a machine that satisfies his expert mechanical eye.

Ask yourself the following questions, then check against the car you are to sell.

Do all four tires show similar wear? Are they the same make? Does the speedometer agree with them? Remember that the 5,000 mile gag on the speedometer is one of the oldest that has been pulled. Better be different and set yours at 10,000. Even better than this, leave your speedometer "as is."

If you paint the car don't forget to replace all dented hub caps

Test the upholstery to determine whether or not the padding is out of place or the springs depressed, especially in the driver's seat, The expense of repair is so small and this is one of the places that the expert buyer inspects for wear.

Is the top in good condition? If not, have it repaired? A sagging top ruins the lines of the finest machine. While doing this have all the broken side curtain windows repaired. Are the lights in good condition? Make sure the fenders are free from dents. Take them off yourself. It won't cost so much.

The instructions don't speak of "cereal quietus" so we thought we would mention it. This next to putting powerful drugs into a worn-out horse, is the crookedest and smoothest trick known to scientific auto jockeys. When the rheumatic groans and squawks of old age afflict transmissious and differentials the expert wag puts into each a couple of pounds of rolled oats or some similar breakfast food. The result is that for a few hours run the noisy gears are silenced, and the buyer thinks he must have met a gear like new. After the stuff mixed with grease works out to the edge the joke is up.

The first electric locomotive for the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton R. R will be assembled in the RIver Rouge shops beginning July 15. This was the first step in the electrification of the road, which has been watched with idterest by the railroad world in general since it was bought by Henry Ford several years ago. Henry decided to cut out the frills on this line and shave off several swivel chair executives, with the result that his engines look better, his men are "Johnnies on the spot" and the system is well-kept.

WALLACE GIVES CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING RULES

Secretary of Agriculture Defines Ten Principles Essential to Success for Bank Association.

Ten principles requisite for the success of co-operative marketing plans have been prepared by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for the State Bank Division of the American Bankers Association, which has just published a nation-wide compilation of views, experiences and discussions regarding the movement. Mr. Wallace's principles are:

1. A co-operative organization must be controlled by its members, not as shareholders or investors, but as producers employing the facilities of the organization.

2. A co-operative association is not operated to make a profit on invested capital above the usual rate of interest, but to profitably market the products of its members at the lowest possible cost.

3. A co-operative association should be organized around a single commodity, or a group of commodities for which the same marketing machinery, methods and channels are employed.

4. The organization should have sufficient volume of business to enable it to operate efficiently and economically, and should control this business through definite legal contracts with its members.

5. The organization must perform definite functions. The organization of a co-operative marketing association is not an end in itself.

6. The members must understand the purposes of the organization and be kept fully informed regarding its activities and problems.

7. A co-operative association should have expert management. The duties of the manager of a co-operative association are more difficult than those of the manager of a commercial enterprise of equal size. The manager must not only conduct the business of the organization efficiently, but he must recognize the close, personal interest of every member in that business, and be able to maintain harmonious contacts with each individual.

8. Proper accounting is essential. Accounting is one phase of management but is so important in co-operative marketing that it is given special mention. The management cannot be properly advised regarding the status of the organization, nor properly inform the members, without accurate records.

9. Sound financial policies are also a part of management, but are of sufficient importance to be placed under a separate heading. One essential is that a co-operative association should build up adequate reserves in order that it may have the financial strength necessary to weather periods of stress.

10. A co-operative organization should be self-perpetuating. It should have a definite legal status, and once it is organized it should be so conducted that it would never be necessary to call upon outside agencies to re-establish the organization or shape its policies.

WHAT BANKERS THINK OF THE LABOR BANKS

With the advent of the labor bank three years ago, there was widespread speculation as to what labor turning capitalist would mean.

By bold calculations the most imaginative pictured a coup d'etat in finance wrought by the mobilization of labor's savings and strategic investments in the key industries. Prophecies of disaster came from the quarters of the other extremists.

Taking the middle ground was the great group of conservative bankers who saw the bank as a link—rather than a wedge—between capital and labor. It was their opinion that the experience gained in the management of the labor banks would bring a real understanding of the business of handling money and investments and develop a knowledge of the problems of capital. By making capitalists out of the workers, directing the investment of their funds into safe securities instead of wild-cat stocks and by promoting thrift, they saw good flowing from the enterprise. With the mystery taken out of banking, the bubble of fabulous earnings pricked, and the right of an individual to his accumulated savings firmly established, it was patent that the radicals would be disarmed of their thunder against the much-assailed capitalistic system. On the other hand, it was conceded that, with the rise of labor as a factor in finance, opportunities for the abuse of the worker by the bludgeon of cruel credit control would be more restricted.

In their appraisal of the movement the events of the past two years have largely justified the view of the conservatives, although the time is still too short to permit a mature judgment. It is quite clear, however, that labor has not revolutionized banking the control of credit has not been diverted from its former channels.—American Bankers Ass'n Journal.

WHEN FARMING IS BUSINESS-LIKE

By BURTON M. SMITH
Chairman, Agricultural Commission
American Bankers Association.

Burton M. Smith

The farmer is a business man and as such should do business on a business basis. Like other business men, he needs financing. He should be able to secure loans on a similar basis with any other business man, and on conditions that will meet his needs.

On the other hand, the farmer should comply with the same conditions that are exacted from any business man. He should show the banker that the loan is for productive purposes. The farmer ought not to object to a request for a credit statement from his banker when negotiating a loan. This statement is not difficult to prepare when the farmer keeps records. The farmer who does not keep records is not doing business in a business-like way and is not entitled to the same consideration as the man who does.

For instance, loans to farmers for the purchase of well selected high-grade livestock constitute one of the most effective ways of financing the farmer and helping him to make a financial success of his business. In making these loans, the banker can well inquire as to whether the farmer has adequate housing facilities and plenty of the right kind of feeds before the investment is made.

If the banker is to encourage farmers in investments of this kind, he should have a hand in protecting these investments. It is to the advantage of the farmer as well as the banker to carry insurance on buildings, including fire and lightning, and if need be, tornado. Too much attention cannot be given to the health of animals. Neither the banker nor the farmer is justified in making an investment in dairy cows that have not been carefuly tested for tuberculosis.

Work It Out Together

Financing the farmer should be the result of teamwork. The banker and the farmer should consider each other as confidential advisers. The farmer needs to know the dangers attached to investments, and the banker needs more information on the possibilities of returns on farm investments well placed. No right-minded farmer ought to object to a careful diagnosis of conditions before the loan is negotiated. Both parties are interested in having the proposed investment pay the interest and eventually the principal, and also return a profit to the farmer.

There are times when the banker might loan to the farmer to the detriment of the farmer himself. The farmer who was kept from making a heavy investment in land when land values were at their peak is today blessing the banker for heading him away from what would have resulted in serious loss, if not bankruptcy.

Financing the farmer is a job that requires clear thinking and sound judgment. The underlying principles of a profitable loan or investment need to be carefully considered by all parties interested. Two heads are better than one, and when two or more men get together in sympathetic contact, determined to weigh the various possibilities of success and failure, and then act upon their united judgment, then the farmer is well financed.

TELLS BANKERS TO ADVERTISE

There is no greater medium of education in our daily life than the newspaper, and, of all mediums offered for bank advertising, the columns of the newspapers reach the innermost circles of our population in the most widespread manner, Motley H. Flint, Los Angeles banker, told the conference of the Savings Bank Division, American Bankers Association, held there recently.

"Advertising, one of man's modern selling forces, has found a fixed place in the banking field," Mr. Flint said. "This, too, in the face of dire predictions of many old-time bankers, who once ridiculed the idea that advertising could be applied to the selling of a service so intangible as that offered by banking institutions. The time was that a bank was satisfied with publishing its statement of condition. That day has been relegated to the past.

"There has been a gratifying response on the part of the public in this new appeal. From it has grown a better understanding by our people of banks and their functions. Where a bank account formerly was the exception it is now the rule. Surely this can be attributed principally to the fact that bankers have come out of their shells and, through advertising, have induced people generally to come into their institutions and learn more about the beneficial services banks have to offer. This can be shown in no better way than by the marvelous growth in savings accounts.

"Astounding sums are being invested annually in bank and financial advertising. I say 'invested' advisedly. It is not merely being spent; it is invested. It is invested for various reasons, and not the least of these is for the purpose of keeping the na our banks before the peopl panied by a bit of bank edu

Little Doubt That Irishman Was Right

Three men were once dining together in a fashionable London restaurant, writes Lady Glover in "Memories of Four Continents." It was a bitterly cold night and one of them asked his friend what he would take to sit out of doors till dawn without stirring." "Not for all the money in the world!" was the reply. This gave the third man an idea. Said he: "Let us send out and get three taxi drivers and ask them the same questions." They agreed. The first man brought in was an Englishman.

"What will you take for sitting out all night on the steps of St. Paul's cathedral?" they inquired.

"A sovereign, sir," he replied.

The next man was a Scotsman and he was asked the same question. Scratching his head, deep in thought, "How much will ye give me?" he said.

Then the third man, an Irishman, had the same question put to him. "I'll take a cold, yer honor," he answered.

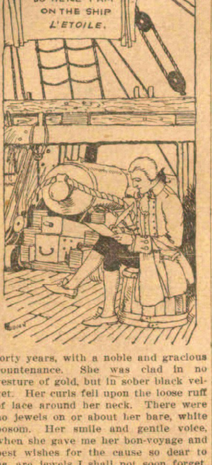
"So here I am on the ship L'Etoile and almost in sight of Boston harbor, bringing help and comfort to our great chief.

"I was presented to the king and queen. Of him I have written—a stout, fat-faced man, highly colored, with a sloping forehead and large gray eyes. His coat shone with gold embroidery and jeweled stars. His close-fitting waistcoat of milk white satin had golden buttons and a curve which was not the only sign he bore of rich wine and good capon. The queen was a beautiful, dark-haired lady of some forty years, with a noble and gracious countenance. She was clad in no vesture of gold, but in sober black velvet. Her curls fell upon the loose ruff of lace around her neck. There were no jewels on or about her bare, white bosom. Her smile and gentle voice, when she gave me her bon-voyage and best wishes for the cause so dear to us, are jewels I shall not soon forget.



SO HERE I AM ON THE SHIP L'ETOILE.

"Yes, I had a little talk with Margaret and her mother, who walked with me to Franklin's house. There, in his reception room, I took a good look at the dear girl, now more beautiful than ever, and held her to my heart a moment.

"'I see you and then I have to go,' I said.

"'It is the fault of my too romantic soul,' she answered mournfully. 'For two days we have been in hiding here. I wanted to surprise you.'

"She lifted the jeweled cross I wore to her lips and kissed it. I wish that I could tell you how beautiful she looked then. She is twenty-six years old and her womanhood is beginning."

CHAPTER XXV

The Horse of Destiny.

In Boston harbor, Jack learned of the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British and was transferred to a Yankee ship putting out to sea on its way to that city. There he found the romantic Arnold, crippled by his wounds, living in the fine mansion erected by William Penn. He had married a young daughter of one of the rich Tory families, for his second wife, and was in command of the city. Colonel Irons, having delivered the letters to the treasurer of the United States, reported at Arnold's office. It was near midday and the general had not arrived. The young man sat down to wait and soon the great soldier drove up with his splendid coach and pair. His young wife sat beside him. He had little time for talk. He was on his way to breakfast. Jack presented his compliments and the good tidings which he had brought from the Old Country. Arnold listened as if he were hearing the price of codfish and hams.

The young man was shocked by the coolness of the commandant. The former felt as if a pail of icy water had been thrown upon him when Arnold answered:

"Now that they have money I hope that they will pay their debt to me."

This kind of talk Jack had not heard before. He resented it, but answered calmly: "A war and an army is a great extravagance for a young nation that has not yet learned the imperial art of gathering taxes. Many of us are going unpaid, but if we get liberty it will be worth all it costs."

"That sounds well, but there are some of us who are also in need of justice," Arnold answered as he turned away.

"General, you who have not been dismayed by force will never, I am sure, surrender to discouragement," said Jack.

The fiery Arnold turned suddenly and lifting his cane in a threatening manner said in a loud voice:

"Would you reprimand me—you d—d upstart?"

"General, you may strike me, if you will, but I cannot help saying that we young men must look to you older ones for a good example."

Very calmly and politely the young man spoke these words. He towered above the man Arnold in spirit and stature. The latter did not commit the folly of striking him, but with a look of scorn ordered him to leave the office.

Jack obeyed the order and went at once to call upon his old friend, Governor Reed. He told the governor of his falling out with the major general.

"Arnold is a sordid, selfish man and a source of great danger to our cause," said the governor. "He is vain and loves display and is living far beyond his means. To maintain his extravagance he has resorted to privateering and speculation, and none of it has been successful. He is deeply involved in debt. It is charged that he has used his military authority for private gain. He was tried by a court-martial, but escaped with only a reprimand from the commander in chief. He is thick with the Tories. He is the type of man who would sell his master for thirty pieces of silver."

"This is alarming," said Jack.

"My boy an ill wind is blowing on us," the governor went on. "We have all too many Arnolds in our midst. Our currency has depreciated until forty shillings will not buy what one would have bought before the war. The profit makers are rolling in luxury and the poor army starves. The honest and patriotic are impoverished while those who practice fraud and Toryism are getting rich."

Depressed by this report of conditions in America Jack set out for Washington's headquarters on the Hudson. Never had the posture of American affairs looked so hopeless. The governor had sold him a young mare with a white star in her forehead and a short, white stocking on her left fore leg, known in good time as the horse of destiny.

When he had crossed the King's ferry the mare went lame. A little beyond the crossing he met a man on a big, roan gelding. Jack stopped him to get information about the roads in the north.

"That's a good-looking mare," the man remarked.

"And she is better than she looks," Jack answered. "But she has thrown a shoe and gone lame."

"I'll trade even and give you a sound horse," the man proposed.

"What is your name and where do you live?" Jack inquired.

"My name is Paulding and I live at Tarrytown in the neutral territory."

"I accepted his offer not knowing that a third party was looking on and laying a deeper plan than either of us were able to penetrate," Jack used to say of that deal.

He approached the little house in which the commander in chief was quartered with a feeling of dread, fearing the effect of late developments on his spirit.

The young man wrote to Margaret in care of Franklin this account of the day which followed his return to camp:

"Thank God! I saw on the face of our commander the same old look of unshaken confidence. I knew that he could see his way and what a sense of comfort came of that knowledge! More than we can tell we are indebted to the calm and masterful face of Washington. It holds up the heart of the army in all discouragements. His faith is established. He is not afraid of evil tidings. This great, god-like personality of his has put me on my feet again. I was in need of it, for a different kind of man, of the name of Arnold, had nearly floored me."

"'Sit down here and tell me all about Franklin,' he said with a smile.

"I told him what was going on in Paris and especially of the work of our great minister to the court of Louis XVI.

"He heard me with deep interest and when I had finished arose and gave me his hand saying:

"'Colonel, again you have won my gratitude. We must keep our courage.'

"I told him of my unhappy meeting with Arnold.

"'The man has his faults—he is very human, but he has been a good soldier,' Washington answered.

"Solomon came into camp that evening. He was so glad to see me that he could only wring my hand and utter exclamations.

"'How is the gal?' he asked presently.

"I told him of our meeting in Passy and of my fear that we should not meet again.

"Solomon is a man of faith. He never falters.

"He said to me: 'Don't worry. That gal has got a backbone. She ain't no rye straw. She's a-goin' to think it over.'

"Neither spoke for a time. We sat by an open fire in front of his tent as the night fell. Solomon was filling his pipe. He swallowed and his right eye began to aim. I knew that some highly important theme would presently open the door of his intellect and come out.

"'Jack, I been over to Albany,' he said. 'Had a long visit with Mirandy. They ain't no likelier womern in Ameriky. I'll bet a pint o' powder an' a fish hook on that. Ye kin look fer 'em till yer eyes run but ye'll be obleeged to give up.'

"He lighted his pipe and smoked a few whiffs and added: 'Knit seventy pair o' socks fer my regiment this fall.'

"'Have you asked her to marry you?' I inquired.

"'No. 'Taint likely she'd have me,' he answered. 'She's had troubles enough. I wouldn't ask no womern to marry me till the war is fit out. I'm liable to git all shot up any day. I did think I'd ask her but I didn't. Got kind o' skeered an' skittish when we sot down together, an' come to think it all over, 'twouldn't 'a' been right.'

"'Your'e wrong, Solomon,' I answered. 'You ought to have a home of your own and a wife to make you fond of it. How is the Little Cricket?'

"'Cunnin'est little shaver that ever lived,' said he. 'I got him a teeny waggin an' drawed him down to the big medder an' back. He had a string hitched on to my waist an' he pulled an' hauled an' hollered whoa an' git ap till he were erbout as hoarse as a bull frog. When we got back he wanted to go all over me with a curry comb an' braid my mane.'

"The old scout roared with laughter as he thought of the child's play in which he had had a part. He told me of my own people and next to their good health it pleased me to learn that my father had given all his horses—save two—to Washington. That is what all our good men are doing. So you will see how it is that we are able to go on with this war against the great British empire.

"That night the idea came to me that I would seek an opportunity to return to France in the hope of finding you in Paris. I applied for a short furlough to give me a chance to go home and see the family. There I found a singular and disheartening situation. My father's modest fortune is now a part of the ruin of war. Soon after the beginning of hostilities he had loaned his money to men who had gone into the business of furnishing supplies to the army. He had loaned them dollars worth a hundred cents. They are paying their debts to him in dollars worth less than five cents. Many, and Washington among them, have suffered in a like manner. My father has little left but his land, two horses, a yoke of oxen and a pair of slaves. So I am too poor to give you a home in any degree worthy of you.

"Dear old Solomon has proposed to make me his heir, but now that he has met the likely womern I must not depend upon him. So I have tried to make you know the truth about me as well as I do. If your heart is equal to the discouragement I have heaped upon it I offer you this poor comfort. When the war is over I can borrow a thousand pounds to keep a roof over our heads and a fowl in the pot and pudding in the twifflers while I am clearing the way to success. The prospect is not inviting, I fear, but if, happily, it should appeal to you, I suggest that you join your father in New York at the first opportunity so that we may begin our life together as soon as the war ends. And now, whatever comes, I would wish you to keep these thoughts of me: I have loved you, but there are things which I have valued above my own happiness. If I cannot have you I shall have always the memory of the hours we have spent together and of the great hope that was mine."

CHAPTER XXVI

Arnold and Henry Thornhill.

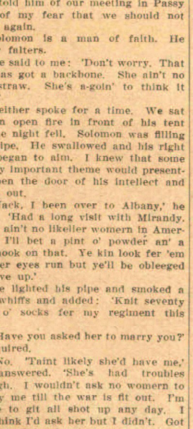
Margaret and her mother returned to England with David Hartley soon after Colonel Irons had left France. The British commissioner had not been able to move the philosopher. Later, from London, he had sent a letter to Franklin seeking to induce America to desert her new ally. Franklin had promptly answered:

"I would think the destruction of our whole country and the extirpation of our people preferable to the infamy of abandoning our allies. We may lose all but we shall act in good faith."

Here again was a new note in the history of diplomatic intercourse.

Colonel Irons' letter to Margaret Hare, with part of which the reader is familiar, was forwarded by Franklin to his friend Jonathan Shipley, Bishop of St. Asaph, and by him delivered. Another letter, no less vital to the full completion of the task of these pages was found in the faded packet. It is from General Sir Benjamin Hare to his wife in London and is dated at New York, January 10, 1780. This is a part of the letter:

"I have a small house near the barracks with our friend Colonel Ware and the best of negro slaves and every comfort. It is now a loyal city, secure from attack, and, but for the soldiers, one might think it a provincial English town. This war may last for years and as the sea is, for a time, quite safe, I have resolved to ask you and Margaret to take passage on one of the first troop ships sailing for New York, after this reaches you. Our friend Sir Roger and his regiments will be sailing in March as I am apprised by a recent letter. I am, by this post, requesting him to offer you suitable accommodations and to give you all possible assistance. The war would be over now if Washington would only fight. His caution is maddening. His army is in a desperate plight, but he will not come out and meet us in the open. He continues to lean upon the strength of the hills. But there are indications that he will be abandoned by his own army."



'HAVE YOU ASKED HER TO MARRY YOU?' I INQUIRED.

City of Capua

The city of Capua of ancient Italy opened its gates to Hannibal after the Battle of Cannae, 216 B. C., and the army there went into winter quarters. Capua was the most luxurious city in Italy, and Hannibal's army was greatly enervated as a result of its residence there. When the Romans regained possession of Capua, 211, B. C., they scourged and beheaded the surviving senators who had not poisoned themselves before the surrender of the city. Only two persons, it is said, escaped: one, a woman who had prayed for the success of the Roman arms, and the other a woman who had succored some prisoners. The word "Capua" became a synonym for luxury and self-indulgence.

Knew Her Dad

A small child was having her first ride in a subway train. Suddenly the train passed over a switch and the lights went out for a moment.

When they went up again, the little girl said: "Did you do that, daddy?"

Daddy denied it.

"Well," replied his small daughter, "it's just the sort of thing you would do."

POULTRY

SUMMER FEEDING OF HENS IS IMPORTANT

Nature will not supply enough animal protein in the form of bugs and worms during the spring and summer to supply the laying flock of poultry with what is needed to insure good egg production, says A. G. Phillips, head of the poultry department of Purdue university. In the spring when birds get onto free range and in the summer when they utilize the entire farm for exercise, it is a common practice to reduce the amount of mash containing protein and depend upon the grain as the large part of the feed to be supplied by those who keep poultry.

As the weather warms up, birds do not need as much heat supplied by the grain as they do in the winter. Consequently the grain consumption should naturally be reduced and mash consumption increased. In order to see that the birds eat more mash as the season progresses it may be necessary to feed practically no grain in the morning. If the Purdue mash of 50 pounds bran, 50 pounds middlings and 30 pounds tankage is used, the proportion of grain to mash in the spring should be two to one and in the summer one to one, or equal parts of grain to mash.

As a rule egg production begins to slump as soon as warm weather arrives, but if the mash consumption increases the slump will not be so great. The summer production can be very high and consequently very profitable. On farms where much waste grain is available it may be wise to confine the birds until about ten o'clock in the morning, thus compelling them to eat mash before they are permitted to roam over the farm. High mash consumption is absolutely necessary to insure summer egg production.

Green Feeds and Water Essential for All Hens

It is absolutely essential that layers be furnished green feed of some kind. The question of how to supply this green feed must be decided by the individual. For maximum egg production the bird must have access to fresh clean water at all times, which should neither be too hot nor too cold. One hundred hens in good laying condition should consume from 12 to 24 quarts of water daily, and in extremely hot weather even more.

When properly fed, milk makes an excellent feed for laying hens. Skim milk or buttermilk are economical feeds and when available should be used instead of the higher-priced protein feeds such as meat scraps. Skimmed milk not only contains the valuable food nutrients, but it is in the form that is easily digested. Sour milk is preferable to sweet milk, since sweet milk when fed may not all be consumed before it sours, thus causing the fowl to have sweet food at one time, and then sour immediately following, which is not advisable. Furthermore, sour milk contains an acid that is said to be a benefit in controlling bowel troubles.

Grit in some form is very essential to the health of a flock and also means economy in feeding. It is also to be remembered that shells are just as important as any other part of the egg. A large amount of lime is used in building these shells. Unless some form of lime is supplied, hens laying heavily will not secure a sufficient amount to manufacture the shells.

Corn Gluten in Ration

Corn gluten feed makes an excellent addition to the ration, and may be procured through almost any feed store. It is highly palatable and may be fed to advantage in the dry mash with other feed, such as follows: One hundred pounds of cornmeal, 100 pounds of bran, 100 pounds of white middlings, 100 pounds of ground feed, 100 pounds of corn gluten feed, 100 pounds of meat scrap, 6 pounds of charcoal, 6 pounds of salt.

Poultry Hints

Keep a good, strong padlock on the hen-coop door.

* * *

Six roosters with each 100 hens should give good fertility and hatchability with Leghorns.

* * *

Ground where last year's chicks died isn't good ground for this year's chicks. Move the coops and brooders.

* * *

The Orpington is an English general-purpose breed that is winning quite a place in America. Orpingtons have white skin and produce brown eggs—an unusual combination.

* * *

A. A. Holberg, assistant poultryman at the Minnesota college farm, saves himself work in cleaning dropping boards by keeping them covered with a layer of fine sand. He says it keeps the boards more sanitary, too.

* * *

Feeding the chicks too soon causes diarrhea. The egg yolk enters the chick's body shortly before the chick hatches. The chick should have time to use up this yolk before it is given any other feed.

* * *

Poultrymen do not generally consider buckwheat a good poultry feed. Because of the black woody hulls this grain does not seem appetizing to hens. It contains a lot of indigestible fiber.

* * *

It is necessary, in order to get pullets that will lay during the winter months, to brood chicks at a season of the year when they must be confined in the brooder house most of the time.

PROFESSIONAL NURSE SAYS TANLAC HAS NO EQUAL

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark of 415 Walsworth avenue, Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Mormon "Boweries"

The first meeting places of the Mormons in Salt Lake City were called "boweries" and the "Old Bowery" was erected, 1847, on the site of the present temple. It was built of poles and brush 160 by 60 feet. Posts were set and a skeleton frame lashed with rawhide throngs and wooden pegs. Upon this structure willows, sagebrush, evergreens and other shrubs were piled. This served until 1852.

A paper that we all admire, and one of which we never tire; a news sheet that appears first rate is our good friend, the Advocate. Its principles are always right, its many columns clean and bright; its ways arouse the culprits hate, our honest friend the Advocate. The Advocate is fearless, too in standing for the good and true. It whacks the scoundrels on the pate, our brave old friend the Advocate.

The M. E. Sunday school has elected officers and teachers as follows: Supt. Harley Lane, Sec. and Treas. May Anson, Pianist Blenn Tower. Teachers are Vera Tuttle primary, Georgia Tower intermediate, Rev. Williams, Young People, Mrs. Ira Wertenberger Adults. There are also several others who act as substitutes from time to time. We think that the officers and teachers are qualified for the positions with the exception perhaps of the superintendent.

Wm Randolph Hearst owner of a string of powerfnl daily papers with a circulation of about 2½ millions which means about ten million readers, has swung his support to Bob LaFollette. A few years ago Mr. Hearst used his papers in an effort to force U. S. into a war with Mexico. Hearst is usually democratic but went back on his party because it failed to denounce the K. K. K. and we don't know whether LaFollette should be proud of the support of Hearst or whether he should consider it a case of axe grinding.

United National Beagle Club Meets

The United National Beagle Club held a meeting at the home of Eugene McBain Friday, July 18 for the purpose of naming place and date for holding a Field Trial. Meeting was called to order by Eugene McBain, president of the Club.

Secretary Bennett of the U. K. C. registration offices of Kalamazoo gave a fine address and William Crabill of Battle Creek also gave an interesting talk, followed by Dr, H. J. Hellwig of Toledo, Ohio who gave a few pointers on the care and feeding of dogs. Dr. J. C. Whitney of Hillsdale, also made some remarks.

It was decided to hold this Field Trial meet at Hillsdale during the week of October 27, 1924. It is estimated that there will be from 300 to 500 dogs entered in this Trial.

Already there are dogs entered from Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois. Indiana, Ohio, Missouri, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Iowa.

John E. Foster of the Fly-A-way Beagle Kennels of Clinton, Indiana was chosen to act as one of the judges, the other judge to be decided upon later.

The exact field for holding this meet has not been decided on, but it will be as near Hillsdale as suitable ground can be found. This is the first meet held by the United Kennel Club and is eligible to all U K. C. registered Beagles. Such dogs as Handsome Hal of Tipton, Indiana; Cusson's Little Dandy of Johnston City, Illinois; Ch. Sapper Jiggs of Standish, Mich. Silver T.,Evansville, Indiana; Fleagle's 'Bob, westminster, Indiana. Ch. Hard Hack Billy of Rock, Massachusetts, and hosts of such noted dogs are expected to be present.

When Are You Going on That Trip?

This is the weather when you naturally long for the cool breezes of miles of sun-kissed waters such as Lake Erie and Lake Michigan. Don't forget we can sell you a ticket for the superb passenger boats from Detroit, Put-in Bay and Cedar Point. These palatial steamers have every convenience of a big modern hotel, even to the elevators, ball rooms and tennis court. There is nothing lacking to make your trip an ideal one.

Put-in-bay with its historical associations, dancing, bathing, motor boating and all is a point never to be forgotten. Here you will find the ultra-fashionable and the cosmopolitan all mixed helter skelter and something doing every minute. Take along your well-filled lunch basket and you can spend seven hours at the Bay Tickets cost only 80 cents for the trip. and where can you take a cheaper outing?

New Combined Electric Locomotive

The New York Central lines have recently placed in commission on a number of new electric locomotives which are self-contained—that is, no trolley, third rail or outside connection is necessary and they will operate anywhere. The new engine weighs sixty tons and consists of an Ingersoll-Rand crude oil engine of 500 horse power coupled directly to a 500 kwt. generator inside the car which is hooked up to four 100 horse power motors, one for each wheel.

All parts of the cylinders, heads and sparking apparatus are cooled by water which circulates in pipes and is conducted to the radiator on the roof. Enough crude oil can be carried for 48 hours continuous service and one man can operate the engine, no fireman being required. The engine is capable os high speeds, and no storage battery is used, the oil engine and generator furnishing direct current sufficient to drive motors at all times.

The engineer finds satisfaction in operating the machine because there is a quick pick-up the instant the throttle is opened and the get-away is very much faster than the steam locomotive.

Railroad men all over the country are looking forward to this new equipment as the coming rolling stock of most of the roads in this Nation.

THE HEALTHY HABIT

DR. LOUIS PASTEUR, the microbe sleuth, took his first cue from wise old gardeners who found, long before the pathologists's lens revealed their existence, that one of the surest preventatives against germs is tobacco juice.

Chew and stay healthy. Protect teeth and digestion. Fortify your system against throat and nose trouble.

BEECH-NUT Chewing Tobacco is the perfect form in which tobacco should be used.

Just prime, full-ripe, waxy, whole leaves with all the stems removed, free from dust and fragments, cut just to the right size and untouched by human hands through every stage of preparation until the air-tight, dust-proof package is sealed.

A rich, mellow chew of undeviating quality and quantity—the most liberal friend 10c. ever had.

Joke as you will, the neighboring town of Osseo, you may know there is a slight surprise in store for you. In 1838 Osseo was declared the capitol of the county because it was near the center, and the county business was done there for a while, but owing to the fact that no suitable building could be had for the purpose, it was removed to Hillsdale. Osseo don't appear very cosmopolitan just now but it has a respectable appearance of having seen better days.

A representative of the Lee-Babbitt Sign Co. of Owosso, Mich., was in town Thursday morning negotiating the sale of two dozen steel road signs to the village, to be placed on the gravel highways leading to North Adams. Sorry to mention this is one of the matters we are woefully deficient in. If you travel the roads of adjoining counties you will find that most of the towns and burgs on graveled highways have posted signs telling where to reach certain points. For many miles in any direction you will not find such signs around this town. It is extremely misleading and both ersomc to travelers by auto.

William S. Sayles

The subject of this sketch was born in Moira, Franklin county, N, Y. August 16, 1855. Here his boyhood days were spent. When about 25 years of age he came to Michigan and began railroading by entering the service of the D, H. & S. W. R. R. at Bridgewater in 1881. When the D. H. & S. W. was absorbed by the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern he vas sent to Deveraux. Jackson county, for one year.

After this he was stationed at Hanover for seven years and then came to North Adams where he has resided continuously for 35 years, being actively employed up to within a few days of his death.

Mr. Sayles was the oldest agent in point of service on the Lansing Division, having been on the road 43 years continuously, and had he lived another year he would have been retired upon a pension.

February 20, 1878, he was married to Lydia M. Austin and to this happy union were born four children, Nettie Z. who died in infancy, Louie C. Livermore, Charles A., now train despatcher in Jackson, Mich and Arthur L. also in railroad work at Toledo, Ohio.

During his long residence in North Adams he had endeared himself to associates on the road and was highly esteemed by friends and neighbors. In the Methodist church of which he had been a life-long member he was known as a tireless worker in the vineyard. His devotion to the cause will be most keenly missed. Attention to business when on duty had made him a valuable asset to the road, and his demise is not only a loss to the company but to the community in which he dwelt. He will be remembered for a genial disposition, and his life is a shining example of rock bound faith in the Savior and firm expectation of a reward in the Hereafter.

His companion passed on to the Beyond December 26, 1916, since which time he has resided with his daughter, Mrs. Louie Livermore who had most tenderly ministered to him in his last hours. He is survived by the daughter of this village, two sons Charles A. and Arthur L. and one cousin, Joseph Smith of Jackson, Michigan.

Mr. Sayles was intensely interested in the Boy Scouts, Sunday school and all upward movements for the benefit of the young.

Funeral services were conducted from the late home by his pastor Rev. W. W. Gray and the pall bearers were Joseph Smith, Montie Shults, William Pavey, A. L. Sayles C. A. Sayles and J. H. Livermore.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Lansing—Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck has said the paved road between here and Detroit would be completed by Sept. 1, he believed. A stretch between Brighton and Howell will be gravelled until a sinkhole disappears.

Grand Rapids—William A. Greeson, who resigned last spring as superintendent of the Grand Rapids Public Schools, a position he had held 18 years, has been appointed to a teachers' post in Central High and Junior College at a salary of $3,000 a year.

Mt. Clemens—Dr. M. C. Cronin, of the Allenel Hospital here was in a serious condition as the result of a peculiar accident. Dr. Cronin while attempting to remove an obstacle from the throat of a patient, who was choking, had his finger biten. Blood poisoning developed.

Port Huron—A campaign against speeders and reckless and drunken automobile drivers is under way in this city and St. Clair county. The road commission has engaged a county officer and plain clothes men will be placed in automobiles to assist motorcicle officers in the city.

West Branch—Hiram Scott, 79 years old, of Manistee, was struck by a falling limb which broke his shoulder, several ribs and injured him internally. He was inspecting timber for Seabright & Hall near this city. He lived only a few hours. He is said to have been worth more than $100,000. The body was taken to Manistee.

Detroit—The watermelon market in Detroit is being flooded by steady shipments in carload lots from the south, according to officials of the Municipal Bureau of Marpkets. On a recent day 78 carloads arrived and the day before 87. Most of the melons are from Georgia, although Alabama and Florida have contributed a fair quota.

Grand Rapids — Former Mayor George P. Tilma, in announcing his candidacy for the Republican nomination for congress from the Fifth district, said his platform consisted of the Declaration of Independence, the constitution of the United States and the Ten commandments. Tilma is a wood carver employed in a local furniture plant.

Grand Rapids—Burns suffered when her clothing became ignited from matches with which she was playing were fatal to two-year-old Beulah Waalkes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Waalkes. The baby, who had been playing in the rear yard of her home, ran screaming to her mother, who was badly burned in attempting to extinguish the flames.

Lansing—Only buildings named in search warrants can be searched by officers, according to a ruling by the state supreme court here. The supreme court reversed the conviction of Joseph Bowice, of Presque Isle county, who was convicted of storing liquor in a cabin in the rear of his home. The search wadrant covered his home only and the search of the cabin was illegal, the court said.

Lansing—Michigan owes its counties and townships $6,574,432.17 for state reward highways, it was announced here at the meeting of highway commissioners at which arrangements for payment were made. The various counties' shares range all the way from nothing, in the case of several upstate counties, to $492,879 fod St. Clair county, which has done most extensive work under the Covert act establisheing the state reward.

Grand Rapids—Members of the Western Michigan Bakers association are reported solidly behind legislation fixing a standard weight for loaves of bread. Elmer J. Warren, of Grand Rapids, president of the organization, and Herman Strong, of Muskegon, have been delegated by the association to confer with Secretary Hartman of the state board of agriculture, who is also sealer of weights and measures, in regard to this law. They ask only that there be provided a leeway of one ounce on a 24-ounce loaf.

Ludington—Frank Kibbey, Summit Township farmer, had a narrow escape from death, when his truck, loaded with 83 crates of cherries, was struck by a westbound freight train at a crossing near Baldwin. Kibbey was dragged a quarter of a mile in the wreckage of his rtuck and trainmen were amazed to see him arise from the debris, apparently uninjurde. He suffered only minor injuries, a bone in his left shoulder was fractured and slight scalds from water in the dadiator of his truck being the only wounds found.

Detroit—Wilma Worrell, 15 years old, of Northville, was drowned while swimming at the mouth of Fox Creek, near the Detroit river, recently. According to two girls with whom she was swimming, she dived into the creek, shouting: "If I don't come up be sure to get my body." The girls said after she had been under the water for several minutes they became alarmed and shouted for help, but efforts to get her out were fruitless. Her body was recovered by the police of the harbormaster's division several hours later.

St. Joseph—Henry Lund, five years old, was literally torn to pieces at Silver Beach, a local resort, while riding on a car of an amusement device known as the "caterpillar." The child stuck his foot outside the speeding car and his little body was riped in two. The death was the tragic outcome of a day's outing of 60 children brought here from Mishawhka, Ind. The children, including the victim, were inmates of the Mishawhka orphans home. The children were in charge of Superintendent L. W. Bowen, of the Silver Beach management.

Alpena—Leonard Hamilton, aged 19, sustained the loss of his right arm when the member was caught in an ice machine while working at Rogers.

Battle Creek—William Schnau, 53 years old, was killed here when he fell from the top of a tree while picking cherries. He alighted on his head and his neck was broken. He leaves an invalid widow.

Muskegon—A. W. Gunn, for eight years city editor of the Muskegon Chronicle, and for 25 years connected with Michigan newspapers as publisher or in an editorial capacity, died at Traverse City recently.

Muskegon—Police Judge J. E. Turnes has accepted a plea in a criminal case by mail. Walter Lee, Chicago resorter arrested for fishing without a license, sent a letter to the court pleading guilty. The court accepted the plea and Mr. Lee must pay $9.75.

Benton Harbor—Arthur Nagle, 10 years old, was drowned in the St. Joseph river, when he fell from a raft on which he and three boy chums were playing. He was the son of G. W. Nagle, of Benton Harbor. This is the first drowning of the season in Berrien county.

Ludington—William Quinn, 52 years old, was killed when a wagon, loaded with hay passed over his body at the farm of Mellard Warren, Summit Township, where he was employed. His body was found in the road by his employer, who began searching for Quinn when he failed to appear for dinner.

Bangor—A luxuriant growth of hair prevented serious injuries to Frank Gehring, when a brick dropped from the roof of the new Christian Church and struck him on top of the head with such force that the brick broke into two pieces. Gehring was stunned by the blow, but was able to resume work.

Muskegon—The Prince of Wales has been invited to attend the state convention of the American Legion, to be held here Sept. 13. There is a possibility that he will attend, coming from Chicago, where he is scheduled to be at that time. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who is to be a legion guest, has joined in urging the prince to attend.

Matteawan—Eva Hunt, 13 years old, daughter of Walter Hunt, died recently of injuries suffered when thrown from a horse. The girl, employed as a cherrypicker, tied her dinner pail to the pommel of her saddle and started homeward. Frightened at rattling of the pail, the horse hurled her to the ground. Stricken blind and semiconscious, the girl was taken home, where she died of brain concussion.

Owosso—Officials of the Detroit Creamery Co. have announce that the company's Owosso plant would be closed indefinitely from August 1. The slump in the demand for milk and milk products, due, they assert, in part to the cold summer weather, is responsible. About 250 farmers in the vicinity have been selling 28,000 pounds of milk to the company daily. Local milk dealers report that the demand for milk has fallen off.

Detroit — Tuberculosis caused the death of 1,003 in Detroit during 1923, according to a statement issued by the Department of Health. Of these 855 were from pulmonary tuberculosis, 21 from military tuberculosis, 88 from tubercular meningitis and 39 from other forms. Pulmonary tuberculosis took ist heaviest toll from persons between the ages of 20 and 29, while the meningitis cases were chiefly among children younger than 10.

Detroit—Clubbed unconscious by an unknown assailant Wayne Turne, a United States parcel post distributor, suffered deep lacerations on his scalp and was robbed of between $300 and $400 in cash. Struck on the back of the head by a heavy object, just as he reached down to crank his machine, Turne remembered nothing, until he recovered in the hospital. A passing motorist noticed him lying by the road-side and notified the Highland Park authorities. His pockets were left turned inside out.

Grand Rapids—"Noiseless street cars" will be tried out here by the Grand Rapids Railways Co. which is preparing to replace the 58 cars destroyed in a fire which razed one of its car barns. The new cars are equipped with a brake band like an automobile and with roller bearings and are designed to move over the rails and to be brought to stops with a minimum of noise. To maintain normal service, a number of cars have been borrowed from Saginaw for use until new cars are delivered.

Petoskey—While his wife and four children and other relatives and friends watched him in bathing, Charles Burnett, of Bay Shore, stepped off a ledge of limestone rock in Little Traverse bay, six miles west of here, and sank in deep water. His body was recovered by other bathers who succeeded in reaching shore after following Burnett over the ledge.

Adrian—Immediate work on permanent improvement of the Chicago turnpike in northwestern Lenawee, a federal aid trunk line, has been promised, according to word received from State Highway Commissioner Frank R. Rogers. The highway commissioner and Governor Groesbeck recently inspected the road after a delegation of Lenawee county farmers had visited Lansing in protest against delay in improving the road, which has been graded since last fall, and at all times is in practically an impassable condition.

Port Huron—The Government plans to move the Coast Guard station, now located on the lake shore seven miles north of this city, to a site adjacent to the Fort Gratiot light house. The transfer will be made before the 1925 season of navigation, it is said. As located at present, mariners claim it is impossible to launch a life boat in a heavy surf. If it were necessary to respond to a distress call during a storm, the life boat would have to obe transported by truck to the mouth of the St. Clair River, where it is now proposed to locate the new station.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hughes Gives Europe Plain Words—Wheeler to Run With LaFollette

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES, a notable American, made a notable address Monday night in London under notable circumstances. In London the premiers were in conference and all the world was watching them as they fought, bled and almost died over the much-vexed issue of putting into effect the Dawes commission plan for the payment of German reparations. The United States government was not represented officially in the conference, but it is from the American bankers that the $200,000,000 loan to finance the plan must come.

In London was also Charles E. Hughes, secretary of state of the United States of America, visiting England "incognito" as Mr. Charles E. Hughes, president of the American Bar association, which is being entertained by British lawyers. Finally, President Hughes was the guest of honor at the Pilgrims' society dinner—the last word in distinguished international social gatherings. And Guest-of-Honor Hughes told this gathering—one of the most distinguished of recent years—in polite and friendly yet perfectly plain English words what America and Americans would do and would not do.

For the economic rehabilitation of Europe dependence could be put on American assistance. "And," added the guest of honor, "it does not matter that this aid is not given by the government." The American press, he said, expressed American sentiment from all points of view; American finance spoke for American investors, who did not "look to the government for either advice or security," and American philanthropy needed "no government spur."

"These are the potent voices of America which do not wait for political action," Mr. Hughes said. "These are the outstretched arms of helpfulness which do not depend upon the muscular reactions of government. Dominant sentiment, I am quite sure, is absolutely opposed to commitments which would promise the action of congress in unknown contingencies. Our people insist upon their liberty to form their decisions as contingencies arise.

"You have the Dawes plan and you have had the participation of American experts with the liberty of constructive effort which was essential because it was undertaken in the only way in which success was possible. When you deal with economic rehabilitation you doubtless have in mind such contribution as America may be able to give in disinterested advice, and later in participation in the absolutely essential loan.

"The important, indeed the indispensable, thing is that methods should be contrived and that your disposition should be such that assistance of that sort can be rendered.

"All discussions will be futile unless the arrangements ultimately made satisfy the investing public. My confidence that a way will be found to surmount all the existing difficulties lies in the fact that failure would invite chaos."

At this writing the conference is still deadlocked, with no immediate promise of agreement. But at least Europe knows what America will do and will not do.

SENATOR BURTON K. WHEELER of Montana, Democrat, has been selected by LaFollette as his running mate on the Independent ticket. In his letter of acceptance Wheeler says, "I am a Democrat, but not a Wall Street Democrat" and "I shall do my best to help make this, my country, safe for Democracy." And he says in part:

"The progressive, forward-looking people of the nation irrespective of party affiliation, who honestly believe in clean government, in the enforcement of the law against the privileged class as well as against the common offender; those who believe in the prosecution of the profiteer and those guilty of corruption in high places; those who still hold to the political principles and personal ethics of Jefferson and Lincoln, must needs find a political abiding place outside of the two old parties as they are constituted and managed today."

Wheeler is said to be the only Westerner in the senate with a Yankee twang. He was born in Massachusetts in 1882, worked his way through the University of Michigan law school and landed at Butte. He's been in many a tough and complicated political fight, sometimes loser and sometimes winner. His war on Attorney General Daugherty fixed national attention on him. In the midst of it he was indicted in Montana in connection with oil permits. He says it is a "frame-up." The senate exonerated him.

WHO is America's favorite child right this minute? Why, nobody else but Helen Wills, our eighteen-years-old woman tennis champion of the world. Oh, yes; we all know that Helen won the Olympic title at Paris without meeting Suzanne Lenglen, the temperamental French tennis genius. But who did the dodging? Not our "Little Poker Face." Some day Helen and Suzanne will meet—and we know what will happen to Suzanne.

"Little Poker Face" is a whole lot more than a champion tennis player. She's also what we Americans call "a nice girl," when we mean all-around approval. Moreover she's easy to look at. And she minds her father and mother and studies hard at her books.

Last—and not least—Helen is a "good sport"—which is short for a good sportswoman, the Lady of Outdoors. She has worked her winning way up from the bottom, taking the game as it came, with no grouches, no alibis and no "spells" a la Lenglen. They beat her at Wimbledon. But she came back at Paris.

OUR American world flyers are now headed towards home, with the sixth and last stage of their flight before them. They will make a long circuit to the north from England, through Arctic regions that have never seen an airplane. At Kirkwall in the Orkneys they say good-by to John Bull.

With one stop at the Faroes they land in Raykjavik, South Iceland. The sea flight to Greenland is 500 miles. Along the coast of Greenland to Angmagsalik is another 500 miles. Then comes a 572-mile sea flight to Indian Harbor, Labrador. Thereafter will come successive hops to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Boston, New York and Washington. The last stage will be the transcontinental trip to Los Angeles, whence they started March 17.

The United States navy has its patrol work well under way. A dozen or so cruisers and destroyers will watch things on both sides of the Atlantic. The flyers are equipped with radio to keep in touch with the warships. About 7,000 miles of their 25,000-mile flight lie before the flyers.

PITTSBURGH plus was abolished Tuesday by the federal trade commission. What is Pittsburgh plus? The United States Steel corporation controls 50 per cent of our rolled steel supply. It has many mills in various places. The price for the steel is the price at Pittsburgh plus the freight from Pittsburgh minus the freight from the mill where the steel actually is produced.

The Pittsburgh plus system of determining steel prices is held by the federal trade commission to not only be an unfair method of competition, but violation of the Clayton act, in that it is a means of price discrimination. Operation of the system, the commission adds, tends to retard the steel business in all centers except Pittsburgh, to lessen and eliminate competition and to increase costs to consumers to an amount that reaches $30,000,000 a year in the case of farmers in eleven Western states alone.

The case was one of the most vigorously contested in the history of the commission, attorneys for thirty-two Middle Western states and western steel consumers joining in the fight for abolition of the system.

Results of the abolishment of the system—if the United States Steel corporation doesn't successfully appeal to the courts—will doubtless be far-reaching. Estimates are made that more than $250,000,000 will soon be expended on new iron and steel plants in the Chicago district.

NOMINEE DAVIS, having picked out Clem L. Shaver of West Virginia as the chairman of the Democratic national committee and put him on the job, lt out for a rock-bound isle off the coast of Maine where nobody could get at him, to stay for ten days or so. He will be officialy notified August 11 at Clarksburg, and will then fire his first broadside of the campaign.

Shaver, like Davis, is a "native son" of West Virginia. He is fifty-seven. He was admitted to the bar and practiced, but transferred his attention to farming, stock raising, dealing in coal and timber lands—and politics. He is a fox hunter, duck hunter, fisherman and naturalist. He is so far from being talkative that in his home town they call him "The Sphinx." He must be even less talkative than Pat Harrison's "Silent Sphinx." Candidate Davis says, "Clem gives up a word just about as readily as the average American citizen parts with a dollar bill."

HALF past one Tuesday morning at Mackinac Island! A white squall is lashing the straits. Lightning flashes and thunder crashes. Swooping in through the dark over the finish line at Round Island light came the tail-enders of the fleet of 22 yachts that left Chicago Saturday afternoon—all with double reefs that are not scudding under bare poles. The yawl Vanadis and the sloop Seboomook are driven ashore. The sloop Virginia is run down by the steamer Manitou. The schooner Netant has sought shelter in the Beavers. All Chicago boats these. Vandyke's big sloop Dorello and Commodore Brown's big schooner Ranger, both flying the flag of the Milwaukee Yacht club, have finished one-two Monday afternoon.

Last of all to finish is Ben Carpenter's Chicago midget R class sloop Sari, with its crew of four—so small she barely gets in the 5-ton limit and the smallest craft ever entered in the 19 years of the race, so small, in fact, that when her elapsed time of 56:54:30 is corrected to 44:05:39 by her time allowance Sari leads all the fleet, beating Dorello by less than 40 minutes.

This Chicago-Mackinac annual yacht race over 331 miles of "The Stormy Water" is second to none, fresh water or salt.

CLARENCE DARROW sprang a tremendous surprise in the Leopold-Loeb murder case Monday at Chicago by withdrawing the plea of not guilty and causing the defendants to plead guilty both to the charge of murder and of kidnaping for ransom. "We want to state frankly," said Darrow, "that no one in this case believes that these defendants should be released or are competent to be. We believe they should be permanently isolated from society, and if we, as lawyers, thought differently their families would not permit us to do otherwise."

The case will therefore be heard by Chief Justice John R. Caverly without a jury. There are four punishments the court can put upon the defendants: Death, life term in penitentiary, a term of 14 years or a term of any number of years between.

Notwithstanding the plea of guilty throws the defendants on the mercy of the court, State's Attorney Crowe went on with the trial, stating that the boys were sane and guilty and that the state would send them to the gallows. The case is far from being as simple as it looks. Darrow, victorious leader of many a forlorn hope, is in it to save the boys from the rope. The insanity plea will doubtless appear at the strategic moment.

MAJ. ROBERT IMBRIE, United States vice consul, was beaten to death in Teheran, Persia, by a mob of anti-foreign fanatics. The city and suburbs were put under martial law.

Washington is to have a minister representing the Irish Free State. In matters falling within his sphere the minister will not be subject to the British ambassador and the ambassador will not be responsible for the minister's actions.

Say Figuring in Marks Is Cause of Suicide Wave

Berlin.—In seeking an explanation of the epidemic of suicides in Germany, some physicians are inclined to ascribe it to mental derangement arising from dealing in paper money of such enormous denominations.

For a while worry due to economic causes was generally felt to be the explanation of so many suicides, but closer investigation inclines physicians to believe that that theory is not upheld by facts.

In some cases a slight quarrel with a superior is sufficient to induce a man to commit suicide. In another case a girl is dismissed from service and before looking for another job, she turns on the gas. In a third case a young man comes home from college with a poor report and puts a bullet through his brain. Cases of this kind can hardly be ascribed to money worries, the physicians say, and therefore have reasoned it out that people's nerves were so shattered by dealing with figures of twelve and fifteen digits that they commit irrational acts on the slightest provocation.

Owl Blown to Sea

An owl, of the huge white "snowy" type that comes from the north, alighted on the steamer Homeric during a recent trans-Atlantic voyage. The crew fed it with raw meat and carried it to England. It was thought the owl was blown to sea from one of the northern points of land.

FARM POULTRY

ATTENTION NEEDED FOR YOUNG TURKEYS

After the first five or six weeks, roosts should be supplied for the young turkeys. Ordinarily, if there are open trees or rail fences in wooded spots, or other natural protection, no especial pains need be taken to supply roosts. However, where there are high winds it is better to build the roosts in a shed or next to the barn, or under trees where there is some protection. An excellent way to do this is to set the posts in the ground and lay poles across them at a height of from four to five feet. The evening feed should be given to the turkeys near this roosting place just before dark. It may be necessary, at first, to drive them to the place, but after a time they will come up every evening for their feed and will go to roost without any extra bother. By handling the turkeys in this way, the chances of loss will be greatly reduced and this little first trouble will pay in returned dividends, says the Successful Farmer.

During the summer, when wide range is available, little attention need be paid to the turkeys. Along about October or November they will leave the brood mother, the males ranging ordinarily by themselves and the females in another group. About this time it is usual to begin the fattening if the turkeys are intended for Thanksgiving trade. Along about October 1 begin feeding a little corn night and morning. Do not feed enough that the turkeys will be perfectly satisfied. Feed just the quantity which will insure that they will continue ranging and taking the exercise which is necessary for their health. Another object which is sometimes sought in feeding night and morning is the prevention of too wide ranging upon neighboring farms. It is not possible to successfully confine turkeys altogether. However, they may be kept up until noon and in this way be prevented from ranging too widely.

Live Poultry Prepared for Best Market Price

Marketing the poultry in live form is usually the most satisfactory method for poultrymen to pursue, unless the distance is so great as to make the shipping cost prohibitive. Poultry may be marketed both in live and dressed form but the skill and experience required to finish and dress the birds for market make it advisable not to kill.

Most poultry raisers do not have the necessary skill to feed out, kill and pick the birds in a way to bring the highest market price. The lower quality of the product is very apt to more than offset the lower shipping cost and the feeder's profit. Also, there is more danger of improper handling and spoilage in transit.

Poultry, to be shipped in live form, should always be fattened before killing. This means better quality, more weight and a considerably higher price per pound. Poor and underfed poultry is hard to keep without spoiling, and if kept long it deteriorates greatly in appearance. The market is usually overstocked with poor poultry and understocked with first-class birds. All poultry, whether marketed dressed or alive, should be shut up in pens and fed from ten days to two weeks or more before shipment.

Feather Picking Caused by Lack of Ingredient

Feather picking is generally caused by a lack of some ingredient in the ration which is necessary to the hen. For one thing, they may lack animal food, such as meat, and it is a good plan in this case to put a hopper of high-grade beef scraps before the hens and keep it there. In case this doesn't do the work it will be necessary to buy fresh meat daily and feed them a limited amount. The best method of feeding is to hang on a string or wire just about as high as the hen's head, possibly half an inch higher.

Do Not Force Pullets

Early hatched pullets should not be forced to quick maturity by heavy feeding of mash, lest they begin laying prematurely and go into a winter molt. These pullets destined for breeders should be raised upon free range and fed largely upon whole grain, that they may develop slowly and well and go into winter quarters in good firm flesh, with undiminished vigor for the coming season's production. Lights should not be used, unless it is found necessary early in January to stimulate egg production.

Maintain Cleanliness

Moist food substances spoil quickly in warm weather. Feeding utensils soon become contaminated. Bacteria and disease germs multiply rapidly. All of which means that the poultryman must use unusual care in maintaining cleanliness. In this way danger of disease is largely eliminated. It is not only entirely possible to have good success with late-hatched chicks, but it is much easier of accomplishment than with the earlier-hatched birds.

Summer Shade Is Needed

Chick losses may be materially reduced by having their yards supplied with an abundance of shade. Poultry fail to thrive if not protected from the sun. The comfortable chick eats well and grows well. If natural shade can be afforded all well and good, but in case one cannot have the chick range where there are trees then seasonable crops which afford shade should be planted. Probably the best crop is sunflowers, with corn a close second.

RECOMMENDED BY HER DOCTOR

Found Strength by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kankakee, Illinois.—"My mother-in-law always took your medicine for weakness, and then in the Change of Life it did her so much good that she induced me to take it for a weakness I had for a year and a half. It has strengthened me and now I have a nice baby boy. I do all my own housework now, and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I have the opportunity. I am taking it again for weakness, as my family doctor has recommended it for this purpose."—Mrs. HARRY COULOM, 984 N. Harrison Ave., Kankakee, Illinois.

Real Evidence of Merit

For the relief of female weakness, pains and backache, nervousness and irregularities, with other troubles common to women, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine.

Its worth is thoroughly established by such letters as the above. There are women everywhere, who, having received benefit, gladly tell other women about it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

The Match Making Industry

Tons of wood are consumed weekly in Europe and America in the manufacture of matches, which were originated in 1827. One firm alone uses 625 tons of timber a week in its match output. The logs used average about a foot in diameter and ten feet in length. The match sticks are usually immersed in a solution that will prevent their smouldering, as one of the safety requirements.

This brings to mind the awful destruction of Michigan's once famous forests of cork pine. In its virgin state Michigan contained the most stupendous and beautiful forests of cork pine known any where in the territory east of the Mississippi river. Slothful methods of cutting, winds and fire waste soon laid these magnificent trees low until to day there is absolutely no cork pines left except those used for shade. Much of this timber went into matches—much desired for the purpose because it was so straight grained and split so nicely. While the foolish judgment of past years can scarcely ever be atoned for, yet it is not too mnch to presume the authorities will see the necessity of planting in this state and reforesting large areas which have been denuded to supply manufacturers of all kinds of farm machinery and furniture.

There is one congressman in Washinston at least whose interest in this thing is unflagging Hon. Mr Davey quite frequently addresses the house on this important matter and he always gets a hearing. It is to be hoped that our lawmakers in Washington and at Lansing will not only listen but will endeavor to get on the job at once, and force the planting of forest trees which may not be available for present generations but will come mighty handy for fuel and timber purposes later.

He Thought He was a Good Man

The Memphis Bee says that Fred Theel a farmer living near Yale was woke up at 3 o'clock Thursday morning last by noises in the yard. Upon investigation it was found chicken theives were trying to get away with high birds. They were intercepted by Mr. Theel and his son armed with a shot gun. They ordered the marauders to "stick 'em up" and upon this order being obeyed the son suggested the thieves should be bound, but the father here showed his first foolish streak. He said he could hold them so the son went to a neighbor's for assistance and when they returned found Mr. Theels Sr. lying on the ground with a bullet hole near his heart dead. He had evidently placed too much dependance in his prowess The robbers were gone and up to date have not been located. The telephones in this vicinity were all mostly out of commission and it was necessary to drive to Yale for the sheriff.

NOTICE OF LETTING OF DRAIN CONTRACT—SHULL DRAIN

Notice is hereby given, That I, Robert W. Bates, will, on the 15th day of August A. D. 1924, at the residence of Edward Purchase, in the Township of Adams, in said County of Hillsdale, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day proceed to receive bids for the construction of a certain drain known and designated as the Shull drain, located and established in the said townships of Adams and Wheatland in said County.

The total length of the Shull drain is 18833 feet.

The average depth of the Shull drain is 4.74 ft.

The average center cut is 3.35 ft.

The grade of the Shull drain shall be as follows:—from station 0 to station 11, 0.27°, from station 11 to station 21, 0.18°, from station 21 to station 33, 0.30°, from station 33 to station 42, 0.37°, from station 42 to station 51, 0.24°, from station 51 to station 70, 0.21°, from station 70 to station 91, 0.16°, from station 91 to station 103, 0.40°, from station 103 to station 125, 0.31°, from station 125 to station 135, 0.55°, from station 135 to station 144 plus 98, 0.40°, from station 144 plus 98 to station 164, 0.15°, from station 164 to station 170, 0.90°, from station 170 to station 186 plus 33, 0.13°.

The Shull drain shall be constructed as an open drain from station 0 to station 118 with a 24" bottom, and a 1 to 1 slope, and shall be tiled from sta. 118 to station 186 plus 33 as follows: from station 118 to station 135, with 18" tile, from station 135 to station 160 plus 75, with 15" tile, and from station 160 plus 75 to station 186 plus 33 with 12" tile.

The width of land required in the construction and deposition of earth shall be 50 ft. on either side of the center line.

All tile shall be laid to conform to grade and line, as herein given, and all joints shall be made as tight as possible, no opening greater than one-half inch will be permitted between the tile.

On the tile work, all materials excavated must be used in back filling, at no place shall there be less than 18" of dirt on top of the tile.

Beginning at the lower end of the drain, survey and grade stakes are set 100 ft. apart along the entire line of the drain and are numbered consecutively.

All angles shall be turned with a curve with a radius of 100 feet.

All brush or trees shall be cut or killed for a distance of 33 feet on each side of the center line.

Contract will be let for the construction of a bulkhead according to plans and specifications now on file in the office of the County Drain Commissioner.

Contract will be let for furnishing 2700 ft. of 18" drain tile, 2600 ft. 15" drain tile and 3600 ft. of 12" drain tile.

Contract will be let for hauling said tile from the railroad station at North Adams.

Said job will be let in accordance with the diagram now on file in the office of the County Drain Commissioner of said County to which reference may be had by all parties interested, and bids will be received accordingly. Contract will be with the lowest responsible bidder giving adequate security for the performance of the work, in a sum then and to be fixed by me, reserving to myself the right to reject any and all bids. The date for the completion and the terms thereof will be announced by me at the time and place of letting.

Anyone wishing to bid on said drain will be required to deposit with the Drain Commissioner a certified check or other security to the value of seventy-five (75) dollars as a guarantee that if his bid is accepted he will enter into contract and provide the required bond. Should any bidder to whom a contract is awarded fail to enter into contract and provide the required bond he will forfeit his deposit and it shall become a part of the Shull Drain fund.

The successful bidder shall file with the Commissioner a bond signed by two (2) or more securities to be approved by the Commissioner, or a surety bond, conditioned for the faithful performance of the said contract. Such bond shall be in a sum to be fixed by the Commissioner, but shall in no case be less than the contract price. The Commissioner shall also require the successful bidder in any case to furnish a bond in such sum as the Commissioner may require, to be approved by him, which said bond shall run to the people of the State of Michigan, and to indemnify the drainage district, county or other municipality by reason of any injury to any workman or against any loss or damage by reason of the negligence or carelessness of said contractor, in the construction of said drain.

Said job will be let in sections. The section at the outlet of the drain will be let first, and the remaining sections in their order upstream, in accordance with the diagram now on file with other papers pertaining to said drain in the office of the County Drain Commissioner of said County and bids will be made and received accordingly.

Notice is further Hereby GIVEN, That at the time and place of letting, or at such other time and place thereafter to which I, the said County Drain Commissioner, aforesaid, may adjourn the same, the Assessment for benefits to lands comprised within the "Shull Drain Special Assessment District," and the apportionments will be announced by me and will be subject to review for one day, from nine o'clock in the forenoon until five o'clock in the afternoon.

BIG GAMBLING HOUSE WRECKED BY TROOPERS

NEW CHESTERFIELD INN, NOTED GAMING RESORT, RAIDED BY STATE POLICE

Place Had Reputation As Hangout for Bandits and Criminals.

Public gambling in Michigan was dealt a hard blow in the raiding and wrecking of the New Chesterfield Inn, in Macomb county, just over the line from Wayne county. It was reputed to be the fourth largest gambling place in the United States and had been notorious as the resort of bank bandits, holdup men, bootleggers and other criminals, as well as others who had come by money easily and who were there sought excitement at the green-covered tables.

Playing at the place was reputed to have gone to the extent of more than $100,000 a night and crowds as large as 1,100 people had been known to congregate there.

After the men of the Michigan Department of Public Safety had raided the place on the night of May 23, it was a wreck. The gambling tables were smashed, the windows broken, the gambling parapharnelia confiscated and the operators were in the hands of the law. Its patrons had been scattered and given a fright from which they may not soon recover.

Elaborately Guarded.

George Weinbrenner, known as "St. Louis Dutch," was the owner of the place. He had long been known as a gambler by the Detroit police and had often been raided. Finally he built the New Chestereld Inn out Gratiot avenue and opened the biggest game ever known in Michigan. Two busses were operated to Detroit and free transportation given to those desiring to risk their money. Lunch was also served free to gamblers.

The resort was elaborately guarded. Men were stationed outside at intervals along the private road leading to the place. The ground floor was occupied by a garage and entrance to the gaming rooms was through a passage requiring the passing of several guarded doors. Above the main hall, where the bigger games were played, there ran a gallery in which armed men were stationed to protect the place against holdup men.

Every precaution was taken to prevent surprise by officers of the law. When the sheriff of Macomb county and his deputies, who were known by sight to the lookouts, visited the place, they found it quiet and no gambling in progress. Immediately upon their departure the games started.

State Police Act.

Considerable time was necessary for the detectives of the Michigan State Police division of the Department of Public Safety to secure evidence upon which warrants could be obtained. The detectives had to become acquainted with frequenters of the place, visit it in the company of these habituees and be vouched for so that they could see the gambling actually going on. When this had been done, warrants were taken out and preparations made for the raid.

Commissioner Harry H. Jackson of the Department of Public Safety gave instructions to Captain I. H. Marmon to carry out the plans. State Police were assembled from East Lansing, South Rockwood, St. Clair, Ecorse, Hamtramck, Wayne and other posts. In command of these details were Captain C. J. Scavarda, Lieutenants H. Douglas Potter, E. S. Masters, Lawrence Lyons and George Karkeet. Altogether about 40 State Police were in the party. Accompanying them were Detroit and Hamtramck police officers who were alert for criminals who might be wanted in those cities.

The force assembled in Detroit and was carried rapidly to the scene in a fleet of automobiles. No one except Captain Marmon knew the destination of the raiding party.

Axes Are Employed.

Knowing that a number of gunmen were employed to protect the place, the State Police swept rapidly past the outside lookout stations and got into the lower floor of the building before any intimation had been given of their approach. One door was closed to them and they smashed that in order to reach the main gambling room. Play had been suspended and the 300 patrons stood about when the officers entered.

However, Captain Marmon has sent several troopers, in disguise, into the place in advance of the raid and they were there and could testify that gambling had been in progress.

Weinbrenner and a number of his employees were placed under arrest. Guns, revolvers and ammunition were seized and gambling apparatus was confiscated. One safe was opened and another was carried away to be opened elsewhere under direction of a judge. The latter was the safe supposed to contain the greater part of the funds of the place. As a final touch, the State Police proceeded to wreck the place, destroying the tables and everything else which had been used in the gambling except such portion of the equipment as was required for evidence.

Evidently production, consumption and feed prices, all play an important part in regulating butter prices in a tariff-protected market like the United States. The cost of feed may regulate in the long run, but over periods of a few years it has little to do with the selling price of butter.

"Save America"

Eighteen hundred women representing ten million other women went to Washington recently. They represented thirty nine States and a multitude of American mothers. They went as crusaders with banners flying. And the banners read, "Save America" and "Enforce the Law." These women represented the best of intelligent patriotic America. They were women who believe in this country and who see a grave peril in the growing disregard for the laws of the land. They believe with the wisest philosophers of the ages that the surest way to obtain just laws is to enforce the present laws. And they believe that the laws of our land are good laws if enforced, but destructive to the life of the Republic if held up to scorn.

This Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement held a convention for one week at the national capital. They brought together the best minds in their own numbers and also enlisted the support of national leaders. President Coolidge received them in the White House. He commended their work.

Charles Evans Hughes, the Secretary of State, went on record with this challenging thought:

"All citizens respect the laws they like. The test of devotion to our institutions is respect for law itself, that is, devotion to the principle that we are a government of laws and not of men; that it is only through a government of laws that we may avoid the depotism of a government of unrestrained official discretion, of arbitrary action and caprice. Respect for law is quite apart from approval of particular laws. It is respect for organized society and, in a Republic, for the rule of the people through representative government. Disrespect for law is faithlessness to the democratic principle, which cannot be applied except through laws expressing the will of the people.

"With us the Constitution is the fundamental law, and our devotion to our country has its highest expression in fidelity to the Constitution. In that fidelity is found our assurance of stability and order, the safeguard of the public interest and the guarantee of individual right."

Following Secretary Hughes' fine intellectual thought came a woman, a mother, untrained in the art of public speaking, practically unknown. She said: "No one who believes in democracy can afford to say today, as so many weak willed and spineless executives are doing throughout the country, that because lawlessness does exist on a shameless scale, therefore it is impossible to put an end to it and no attempt need be made to do so. If these men are right, if the fact that a crime exists does indeed constitute a valid reason and excuse for its existence, then it is time, more than time, to shut up shop and consider that democracy as we understand it is a failure and the protection of homes a lost hope."

Among the groups of women who met in this conference and consecrated themselves to law enforcement were The General Federation of Women's Clubs, The Daughters of the American Revolution, The National Parent-Teachers Association, The King's Daughters, and the W. C. T. U.

The program was organized by Mrs. Henry Peabody, and it was sponsored in Washington by Mrs. Herbert Hoover and by Mrs. Lida Hafford, Director of the National Headquarters of the General Feder- of Women's Clubs.

On almost every page of the literature which they circulate, in all their speeches, on the walls of their meeting places are reminders that women may protect the Constitution and "Save America" if they register and vote. "Speak at the Polls" is another of their slogans 'You May Be Right But You Can, Not Help Unless You Vote" is another favorite statement of both the men and the women who stand for law enforcement. A popular placard says very plainly: "We Must Prove to Men That We Are a Necessary Help Not Only in Private But Also in Political Life."

The National Committee for Law Enforcement has prepared a hand book called "Save America." In it are presented the best thoughts of statesmen, authors, economists and educators.

The strength of this great army of women lies in their unanswerable demand for the enforcement of the laws of this land. They do not ask for new laws—but they insist that the acid test of application be given to the laws that now stand on the books.

The problem goes deep into the fate of the American people collectively and into the health—the very life—of young America individually It has become the order of the day to laugh at the law. We race along thoughtlessly or defiantly until tragedy blocks the way.

Those of us who are hurt—and sooner or later most of us who defy the law are hurt—pay a bitter price.

Ten million women is a force which, if it stands solidly on a moral issue, must be reckoned with by the nation.

If you have not joined the ranks of the women of America in their struggle for law enforcement, but if you do wish information on this subject, write to the editor of THE DELINEATOR.

Giauque For Sheriff

Oscar Giauque and wife of Hillsdale visited North Adams a few days ago. Oscar handed us a small card on which was a map of his countenance and announcement that he will be a candidate at the primaries for nomination for Sheriff of Hillsdale county. He has modestly thrown his hat into the ring, and we were so glad of it we asked for his petition and signed it forthwith. Oscar used to live in North Adams and we all know what we could depend on if he were proprietor of Hotel De Hoosegow. Mr. Giauque gave us his platform which runs something like this if we remember it correctly. "As the law stands if a man wants to take a drink of whiskey its nobody's business but his own, but if he violates the law while drunk he must be punished and I believe these laws must be enforced to the letter."

Down at Milan Michigan they have a unique and original way of doing things. It seems among other things in Milan they have mules, and the other day one of these grown-up rabbits took it into his head he would balk on the bridge, and all human efforts were unavailing—he just simply would not go. Along came a big truck and connections were made with the east end of the mule which was headed west. In a short time things began to happen. It is stated that when he had arrived at the end of the bridge he meekly looked around at the truck then with a downcast expression jumped headlong into the creek and committed suicide. That's the way with a mule. He will be the whole push or nothing.

The Modern Female

A quiet young woman, who had sixteen summers behind her, recently staggered her father by saying she knew no good reason why girls should not wear short skirts, use rouge, smoke cigarets, and bob their hair, if they wanted to.

Of course, the answer to that is If they want to, rightly or wrongly, they will. In fact they do.

Aside from this, consider these four things on their merits:

First, the short skirt, as an article of dress, it allows its wearer to walk comfortably, thus making it a garment conductive to healthy living. The justification of the short skirt lies in the spirit with which it is worn. In itself, it is a much better garment than the old pavement sweeper of a few years ago.

Rouge, lipstick, and eyebrow pencil are all right if the one who uses them knows her cosmetic business. On a young or even a tolerably advanced girl or women, their presence is a confession of a silly streak or an unhealthful, underexercised mode of living.

Bobbed hair is becoming to comparatively few women. It looks very well, or can be made to look very well, on most girls of any age up to twenty five. But with care and taste in the individual's handling of it, bobbed hair does not look so badly on any girl or woman of any age that it need be condemned if it saves its wearer time and trouble in washing and general care to make it worth her while.

As for cigarets—well, any and all smoking by women or men in any public place where it annoys nonsmokers is bad manners and bad sense.

No. We can't get excited about the moral trend of women and girls today. In the long run they will not mistake freedom for license. They've got a lot better sense than most men give them credit for, and these bobbed-hair, bobbed-skirt evidences that some of us are inclined to interpret as steps downward by women are merely a few little irrepressible flourishes of joy at a freedom hard won and a chance grudgingly given them by men to get ahead.—Jackson News.

Politics Are Warming Up

We make bold to announce we have already received calls from three different candidates who expect to make a run for the primaries this fall on the Republican ticket and all of them will be prominently before the people.

Oscar Giauque who will run for Sheriff, Robert Bates who will try for Drain Commissioner a second term, and C. Jay Town, who will be a candidate for State Senator from the tenth district.

These men all look good to us, and at this time we like the way politics are shaping in the county

Some years ago the proximity of election meant that the average would-be was to secure a campaign hat, several boxes of cigars, hire the smartest rig in the livery, carry a choice selection of wet goods for certain celebrities and learn to swagger and the correct tilt for his cigar, but today its different. Most of the men whom we interview for offices are quiet, calm, earnest, conscientious; mean what they and say what they mean. Many of them are christian gentlemen—thanks to the refining influences of the church and Anti-Saloon League. Hon. C.Jay Town has come to us down the slippery slide of politics not as raw material, but as a veteran law maker, having served three consequtive terms in the House at Lansing. He is opposed to Barney Brower and looks like a 100 per cent dyed-in-the-wool American, talks as if he would be pleased to fix legislation for the hard-pressed farming population, hat they may pay their taxes, improve their lands and yet lay aside a sinking fund, which most of them have been unable to do during the past few years. Mr. Town is a living example of the crosses borne by the common people—he is a farmer and just now we feel that one experienced agriculturist with a fund of real honest-to-goodness logic is a better investment at Lansing than a dozen lawyers.

Poultry Tour to Hit Seventeen Counties

Poultry farms in seventeen counties of Michigan will be visited on a special tour which is to start in Newago county on August 4, according to announcement made here this week by the poultry department at M. A. C., sponsors of the trip. Inspection of modern poultry plants and equipment will be the feature of the trip. Most of the poultry breeders who join the caravan are expected to stay through only a part of or the full day at most, it is said that a few will follow through practically the entire swing for the sake of the educational material to be picked up at the different stops, eight or ten of which will be made each day.

J. A. Hannah of the M A. C. poultry staff, and Dr. H. C. Stafseth, poultry disease specialist of the College Bacteriology department, will handle the work of the tour. Dr. Stafseth will hold a disease clinic at practically every stop.

While detailed itineraries for the different counties are now being handled by the different county agricultural agents, the counties to be visited and their dates are as as follows: Newago, August 4-5; Oceana Aug. 6; Muskegon 7; Ottawa 8-9; Kent 11; Allegan 12; Barry 13; Van Buren 14 Berrian 15; Kalamazoo 16; Jackson 18; Washtenaw and Lenawee 19; Wayne 20; Macomb 21; St.-Clair 22; Sanilac Aug. 23.

Scorching Days in the Harvest Fields seem shorter when a jug of this refreshing drink is kept on hand

EVERYBODY knows the trick of putting oatmeal in the water jug to prevent the water getting flat and stale.

But here's a better scheme than that. Let Farm House Cocoa take the place of oatmeal. Then when you're tired, hot and thirsty, the contents of the water jug will be as welcome as the ringing of the supper bell at night. Fix up a gallon jug according to directions. Keep it in a shady spot where you can reach it easily. Then see how it refreshes after hardest labor. When once you've made this test you'll thank us for the tip. Let tomorrow be the day to try it out.

How to Make It

1 pound Farm House Cocoa, 4 pounds sugar, 2¼ quarts boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt. Mix sugar, cocoa and salt, add boiling water, stirring constantly. Boil five minutes. This syrup will keep almost indefinitely in cool place, and is sufficient to make ten gallons of delicious beverage merely by adding cold water in the proportion of six quarts of water to one pint of syrup. The use of part milk adds richness.

Those "indications" were the letters of one John Anderson, who described himself as a prominent officer in the American army. The letters were written to Sir Henry Clinton. They asked for a command in the British army and hinted at the advantage to be derived from facts, of prime importance, in the writer's possession.

Margaret and her mother sailed with Sir Roger Waite and his regiments on the tenth of March and arrived in New York on the twenty-sixth of April.

The month of May, 1780, gave Washington about the worst pinch in his career. It was the pinch of hunger. Supplies had not arrived. Famine had entered the camp and begun to threaten its life. Soldiers can get along without pay but they must have food. Mutiny broke out among the recruits.

In the midst of this trouble, Lafayette, the handsome French marquis, then twenty-three years old, arrived on his white horse, after a winter in Paris, bringing word that a fleet and army from France were heading across the sea. This news revived the drooping spirit of the army. Soon boats began to arrive from down the river with food from the east. The crisis passed. In the North a quiet summer followed. The French fleet with six thousand men under Rochambeau arrived at Newport, July tenth, and were immediately blockaded by the British as was a like expedition fitting out at Brest. Washington could only hold to his plan of prudent waiting.

On a clear, warm day, late in July 1780, a handsome coach drawn by four horses crossed King's Ferry and toiled up the Highland road. It carried Benedict Arnold and his wife and their baggage. Jack and Solomon passed and recognized them.

"What does that mean, I wonder?" Jack queried.

"Dun know," Solomon answered.

"I'm scared about it," said the younger scout. "I am afraid that this money seeker has the confidence of Washington. He has been a good fighting man. That goes a long way with the chief."

Colonel Irons stopped his horse. "I am of half a mind to go back," he declared.

"Why?"

"I didn't tell the general half that Reed said to me. It was so bitter and yet I believe it was true. I ought to have told him. Perhaps I ought now to go and tell him."

"There's time 'nough," said Solomon. "Wait till we git back. Sometimes I've thought the chief needed advice but it's allus turned out that I was the one that needed it."

The two horsemen rode on in silence. It was the middle of the afternoon of that memorable July day. They were bound for the neutral territory between the American and British lines, infested by "cowboys" from the South and "skinners" from the North who were raiding the farms of the settlers and driving away their cattle to be sold to the opposing armies. The two scouts were sent to learn the facts and report upon them. They parted at a cross-road. It was near sundown when at a beautiful brook, bordered with spearmint and wild iris, Jack watered and fed his horse and sat down to eat his luncheon. He was thinking of Arnold and the new danger when he discovered that a man stood near him. The young scout had failed to hear his approach—a circumstance in no way remarkable since the road was little traveled and covered with moss and creeping herbage. He thought not of this, however, but only of the face and form of a man of middle age. The young man wrote in a letter:

"It was a singularly handsome face, smooth-shaven and well-shaped with large, dark eyes and a skin very clean and perfect—I had almost said it was transparent. Add to all this a look of friendliness and masterful dignity and you will understand why I rose to my feet and took off my hat. His stature was above my own, his form erect. I remember nothing about his clothes save that they were dark in color and seemed to be new and admirably fitted.

"'You are John Irons, Jr., and I am Henry Thornhill,' said he. 'I saw you at Kinderhook where I used to live. I liked you then and, since the war began, I have known of your adventures. I saw you passing a little way back and I followed for I have something to say to you.'

"'I shall be glad to hear of it,' was my answer.

"'Washington cannot be overcome by his enemies unless he is betrayed by his friends. Arnold has been put in command at West Point. He has planned the betrayal of the army.'

"'Do you know that?' I asked.

"'As well as I know light and darkness.'

"'Have you told Washington?'

"'No. As yet I have had no opportunity. I am telling him, now, through you. In his friendships he is a singularly stubborn man. The wiles of an enemy are as an open book to him, but those of a friend he is not able to comprehend. He will discredit or only half believe any warning that you or I may give him. But it is for you and Solomon to warn him and be not deceived.'

"'I shall turn about and ride back to camp,' I said.

"'There is no need of haste,' he answered. 'Arnold does not assume command until the third of August.'

"He shaded his eyes and looked toward the west where the sun was setting and the low-lying clouds were like rose-colored islands in a golden sea, and added as he hurried away down the road to the south:

"'It is a beautiful world'

"'Too good for fighting men,' I answered as I sat down to finish my luncheon for I was still hungry.

"While I ate, the tormenting thought came to me that I had neglected to ask for the source of his information or for his address. It was a curious oversight due to his masterly manner and that sense of the guarded tongue which an ordinary mortal is apt to feel in the presence of a great personality. I had been, in a way, self-bridled and cautious in my speech, as I have been wont to be in the presence of Washington himself. I looked down the road ahead. The stranger had rounded a bend and was now hidden by the bush. I hurried through my repast, bridled my horse and set off at a gallop expecting to overtake him, but to my astonishment he had left the road. I did not see him again, but his words were ever with me in the weeks that followed.

"I reached the Corlies farm, far down in the neutral territory, at ten o'clock and a little before dawn was with Corlies and his neighbors in a rough fight with a band of cattle thieves, in the course of which three men and a boy were seriously disabled by my pistols. We had salted a herd and concealed ourselves in the midst of it and so were able to shoot from good cover when the thieves arrived. Solomon and I spent four days in the neutral territory. When we left it a dozen cattle thieves were in need of repair and three had moved to parts unknown. Save in the southern limit, their courage had been broken.

"I had often thought of Nancy, the blaze-faced mare, that I had got from Governor Reed and traded to Mr. Paulding. I was again reminded of her by meeting a man who had just come from Tarrytown. Being near that place I rode on to Paulding's farm and spent a night in his house. I found Nancy in good flesh and spirits. She seemed to know and like the touch of my hand and, standing by her side, the notion came to me that I ought to own her. Paulding was reduced in circumstances. Having been a patriot and a money lender the war had impoverished him. My own horse was worn by overwork and so I proposed a trade and offered a sum to boot which he promptly accepted. I came back up the north road with the handsome, high-headed mare under my saddle. The next night I stopped with one Reuben Smith near the northern limit of the neutral territory below Stony Point. Smith had prospered by selling supplies to the patriot army. I had heard that he was a Tory and so I wished to know him. I found him a rugged, jovial, long-haired man of middle age, with a ready ringing laugh. His jokes were spoken in a low tone and followed by quick, stertorous breathing and roars and gestures of appreciation.

"He looked my mare over carefully before he led her to the stable.

"Next morning as he stood by her head, he asked if I would sell her.

"'You couldn't afford to own that mare,' I said.

"I had touched his vanity. In fact I did not realize how much he had made by his overcharging. He was better able to own her than I and that he proposed to show me.

"He offered for her another horse and a sum which caused me to take account of my situation. The money would be a help to me. However, I shook my head. He increased his offer.

"'What do you want of her?' I asked.

"'I've always wanted to own a hoss like that,' he answered.

"'I intended to keep the mare,' said I. 'But if you will treat her well and give her a good home I shall let you have her.'

"'A man who likes a good joke will never drive a spavined hoss,' he answered merrily.

"So it happened that the mare Nancy fell into the hands of Reuben Smith."

CHAPTER XXVII

Love and Treason.

When Jack and Solomon returned to headquarters, Arnold and his wife were settled in a comfortable house overlooking the river. Colonel Irons made his report. The commander in chief complimented him and invited the young man to make a tour of the camp in his company. They mounted their horses and rode away together.

"I learn that General Arnold is to be in command here," Jack remarked soon after the ride began.

"I have not yet announced my intention," said Washington. "Who told you?"

"A man of the name of Henry Thornhill."

"I do not know him but he is curiously well informed. Arnold is an able officer. We have not many like him. He is needed here for I have to go on a long trip to eastern Connecticut to confer with Rochambeau. In the event of some unforeseen crisis Arnold would know what to do."

Then Jack spoke out: "General, I ought to have reported to you the exact words of Governor Reed. They were severe, perhaps, even, unjust. I have not repeated them to any one. But now I think you should know their full content and judge of them in your own way. The governor insists that Arnold is bad at heart—that he would sell his master for thirty pieces of silver."

Washington made no reply, for a moment, and then his words seemed to have no necessary relation to those of Jack Irons.

"General Arnold has been badly cut up in many battles," said he. "I wish him to be relieved of all trying details. You are an able and prudent man. I shall make you his chief aide with the rank of brigadier general. He needs rest and will concern himself little with the daily routine. In my absence, you will be the superintendent of the camp, and subject to orders I shall leave with you. Colonel Binkus will be your helper. I hope that you may be able to keep yourself on friendly terms with the general."

Jack reported to the commander in chief the warning of Thornhill, but the former made light of it.

"The air is full of evil gossip," he said. "You may hear it of me."

When they rode up to headquarters Arnold was there. To Jack's surprise the major general greeted him with friendly words, saying:

"I hope to know you better for I have heard much of your courage and fighting quality."

On the third of August—the precise date named by Henry Thornhill—Arnold took command of the camp and Irons assumed his new duties. The major general rode with Washington every day until, on the fourteenth of September, the latter set out with three aides and Colonel Binkus on his trip to Connecticut. Solomon rode with the party for two days and then returned. Thereafter Arnold left the work of his office to Jack and gave his time to the enjoyment of the company of his wife and a leisure that suffered little interruption. For him, grim-visaged war had smoothed his wrinkled front. Like Richard he had hung up his bruised arms. The day of Washington's departure, Mrs. Arnold invited Jack to dinner. The young man felt bound to accept this opportunity for more friendly relations.

Mrs. Arnold was a handsome, vivacious, blonde young woman of thirty. The officer speaks in a letter of her lively talk and winning smiles and splendid figure, well fitted with a costume that reminded him of the court ladies in France.

"What a contrast to the worn, patched uniforms to be seen in that camp!" he added.

Soon after the dinner began, Mrs. Arnold said to the young man, "We have heard of your romance. Colonel and Mrs. Hare and their young daughter spent a week in our home in Philadelphia on their first trip to the colonies. Later Mrs. Hare wrote to my mother of their terrible adventure in the great north bush and spoke of Margaret's attachment for the handsome boy who had helped to rescue them, so I have some right to my interest in you. I happen to know a detail in your story which may be new to you. Miss Hare is now with her father in New York."

"In New York!"

"Oddso! In New York! We heard in Philadelphia that she and her mother had sailed with Sir Roger Waite in March. How jolly it would be if the general and I could bring you together and have a wedding at headquarters!"

"I could think of no greater happiness save that of seeing the end of the war," Jack answered.

"The war! That is a little matter. I want to see a proper end to this love story."

She laughed and ran to the spinnet and sang "Shepherds, I Have Lost My Love."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Workers of Lancashire Prove the Best Spinners

It's a common saying in the cotton trade that Lancashire spins finer every day. So the spinner must be given some credit for the production of many of the beautiful fabrics which are now made from cotton.

But fine spinning is useless without good weaving, and here Lancashire is ahead of all rivals. It has the finest operatives in the world, with the inherited skill of their forefathers in their fingers. Threads are joined by a twist of the fingers, quicker than the eye can see, and the utmost is obtained from all the miraculous machinery.

Cotton is turned into velvet fit for a queen under their skillful hands and gossamer fabrics, both stronger and finer than silk, emerge from the clanging looms. Every color of the rainbow is seen, and the studios of Paris give of their best in designs.

The cloth of Lancashire supplies the fabric for motor tires, covers the furniture, makes beds soft and comfortable, offers smart shirts that keep their color forever, and provides dainty frocks and lingerie for wives and children.—London Mail.

Insects Lead All

It is computed that there are five times as many different kinds of insects as there are species of all other living things put together. Seventy years ago the number of species of insects preserved in collections was about 170,000. Today it is estimated that there are 750,000 sorts, and that without counting the parasitic creatures. In Europe alone there are 350,000 species. Most insects live on trees or plants. There are known to be 450 sorts which make their home in oak trees, and about 200 in the pine. Of beetles alone the varieties exceed 100,000.

It's up to you to win the prize; let others explain how they lost it.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness are oftentimes symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

How It Started

It is not an unreasonable supposition that many, if not most, quarrels are like that described by a Washington lawyer.

"So you and your husband are forever quarreling?" he asked a fair client seeking advice.

"Yes," she said.

"What do you quarrel about?"

"I forget the subject of our first quarrel. But we have been quarreling ever since over who was to blame for it."

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with all druggists here, as well as in all other towns of the U. S., that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchial Asthma or difficult breathing can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. R. Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a package of my Asthmador, or cigarettes, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to your druggist and he will return your money cheerfully, and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundreds of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. Certainly more positive proof can thus be demonstrated than a 'free sample' could possibly prove. Also sent on same guarantee, per parcel post, C. O. D., or on receipt of price, 65c, if not kept by your druggist, by addressing R. Schiffmann Co., 1734 N. Main, Los Angeles, Calif."—Adv.

Photographic Telescope

Accurate measurements, by means of a huge photographic telescope, 36 feet long, to determine the direction of the stars' movements, are planned by scientists of an Eastern university.

An expedition equipped with the tube, said to be the third largest in the world, is preparing to go to points in the southern hemisphere where atmospheric conditions will be favorable to the task.

Included in the outfit is a camera with a 26-inch lens. Data to be obtained is expected to clear up some perplexing problems of the skies.—Farm and Ranch (Dallas, Texas.)

Swamps Put to New Use

Furs have become so popular in America that a new industry has sprung up in swampy districts. Muskrat farming, for years carried on as a pastime only, now is a thriving industry in some sections of the United States. It is found that captive muskrats become tame easily though they are prey for many enemies. They require no feedings as they live on the vegetation of marshes and ponds. Twenty years ago the muskrat was considered a pest. Some swamps where they are bred and raised now are worth more than the arable land nearby.

Trees on Roadside

In the vicinity of some cities and towns in Oregon systematic efforts in tree planting have been inaugurated along the highways, says Nature Magazine. A good example of this is near The Dalles, where the Kiwanis club has planted about two miles of trees just approaching the city.

C. W. McGregor, Director

Jay Speer Home From West

Jay Speer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Beecher Speer, who has been in the west for a number of years, arrived home on July 3rd coming from Denver, Colorado where he has been foreman of a large gang of telephone linemen. Mr. Speer states that when he decided to drive to North Adams with two machines from the west, he advertised in a Denver daily for people who wished to come east, and was swamped with replies, and Mrs. Speer was kept busy answering the phone, over 100 applying in one day.

They finally started from Denver with a touring car and a Reo speed wagon carrying eleven people. The journey was made without mishap and pretty good roads with one exception. Two passengers stopped at Omaha, Neb., and two at Chicago, the rest of the bunch coming through to Detroit.

Mr. Speer says the trip was a very enjoyable one but Michigan looks good to him, although it is not likely he would have come here had it not been for the exceeding poor health of his father.

Mrs. Speer remained in Omaha to visit relatives, and will come here later. She has never lived on a farm but thinks the change would be much appreciated, as she has taught school since her graduation from the University at Lincoln Neb.

Jay graduated from the North Adams High school with the class of '95 and has a checkered career When the Spanish war broke out he enlisted and was sent to Camp Chickamaugua thence going to Cuba. After the war he went t Honduras as the manager of a plantation of several thousand acres owned by northern capitalists. Here he remained until the Mexican uprisings and returned to the states, living for some time at Los Angeles and Hollywood, California.

Renewing Old Landmarks

Persons who traveled the highways of southern Michigan forty years ago will remember that in the extreme north-east corner of Hillsdale county near the old territorial road there stood a 50-foot wooden derrick on a high promotory or knob known as Bunday's Hill. This hill is composed of a hard gravel formation and at one time heavily wooded afforded an unobstructed view for many miles in all directions, in four counties. This hill was owned in an early day by Warner Bunday who took up the land for a homestead possibly about the time of ths construction of the Detroit-Chicago turnpike.

In 1875 the state wanted to survey and chart the southern counties and it was decided to build a tower on this point, the three highest points on the watershed being Pratt's Hill just west of Hillsdale, Prospect Hill in Lenawee county and Bunday. On this hill was erected a tower over 50 feet high built of heavy timbers suitably trussed and braced, and anchored to iron rungs securely bedded below the surface. A platform on top gave a good lookout and from it 22 lakes and many villages could be discerned with the glass and by night the lights of Jackson and Hillsdale 20 miles away. A few years ago after many hundreds of tourists had visited the spot the tower had become weather-beaten and was adjudged unsafe. They took it away.

Now a company of men from Somerset and vicinity propose to establish a hotel, gas-filling station, refreshment stands and an observatory on the hill. Being on the pike from Chicago to Detroit we believe the project will suceeed. A tourist camp should be the main idea.

Stage All Set For Farmers' Day

Completion of final plans for entertainment of the thousands of Michigan farmers and their families who will gather at M. A. C. on Friday, August 1 for the annual Farmers Day at the College, was announced here this week. Exhibits are in place; blue ribbon animals in the livestock herds have been given a fine grooming; tour routes of inspection have been mapped out in detail, and the final arrangements for the general afternoon meetings have been attended to in preparation for the big event.

With favorable weather conditions, a crowd of at least 5,000 is expected to attend the conference. That number have turned out for the past two years, and it is considered possible that a new attendance record may be set on Aug. 1. Harvest conditions and the weather are said to be the two determining factors in attendance.

For the average visitor, the day's progrnm will include inspection of the college experimental plats and buildings in the morning, (following one of the marked tour routes) basket picnic lunch under the campus trees at noon, special exhibits after lunch, and the general speaking program and livestock parade in the afternoon.

Jonesville Visited By Fire

Last Sunday morning the village of Jonesville was visited by a fire which broke out about seven o'clock and the hardware store of Howland & Grill seriously damaged. The fire fighting apparatus of Jonesville being inadequate to cope with the blaze, the Hillsdale fire fighters were summoned and made short work of it. However, the fire had gained quite a headway before being discovered and so much smoke made it difficult to operate. Most of the goods on the first floor of the hardware and the millinery stock of Jennie Burnett next door was removed but stocks on the upper floors of the hardware were badly damaged by fire and water. Loss is estimated at $5,000 on the building and no estimate given on the goods as yet. Only partially covered by insurance. The store will be repaired at once, it is said. It is said the fire originated in the ceiling of the second floor where there were no electric wires and its cause is a mystery.

Plans were discussed for next year.

Here is a word of interest we want to say to the good housewives of the village and surrounding country. Did you ever stop to consider how many weary steps you are obliged to take every day to perform your household duties A farmers wife iu Iowa hit upon the plan of measuring distances by means of a pedometer tied to her limb. She had a family of three to look after besides the duties that usually fall to a farm woman. She found she traveled 5 miles each day in doing the work. She and her husband got busy and installed labor saving devices and studied the best possible location for each in the kitchen and parts of the house she had to visit, with the result her daily travels were reduced to 2½ miles! Now you women can figure it out yourselves how much difference it would make in your health in 20 years' time, and we ask is it not worth while? We put this argument up to a woman once and this is how she came back at us: "A woman in health should walk four miles at least, each day purely for exercise, and if she can so arrange her duties as to take her daily walk, she is fortunate indeed."

Republican Party Loses Valuable Asset

Fx-Sen. Charles E. Townsend of Michigan is no more; he passed to his reward at Jackson last Sunday night at about 10:35 from heart failure, a malady which he had suffered for several years and which he momentarily dreaded. In the United States Senate at Washington Hon. Charles Townsend several times proved his sterling worth as one of the "old guard" and ever as a watch-dog of the state's interests. His wonderful rise from poverty to ranks of influence and power is a gilded page in Jackson county's history. After a meager country education he entered high school, paying expenses by working as a stable boy. From high school his course continued unwaveringly toward College from which he eventually graduated with honors.

On the St. Lawrence Waterway Commission in the Senate his work will go down to posterity, whether we get the waterway in ten years or a hundred. There is no doubt his death is a serious hindrance to the project. Mr. Townsend was a man whose position in the party is hard to re-fill.

Liners Pay Good Dividends

How Long Will it Last?

Junk in 5 Years Or Still Going at 10?

THE cost of operating any farm implement is determined to a large extent by the length of time the implement remains in serviceable condition.

For example, the cost of operating an implement which originally cost $500, and which lasts only five years, is $100 per year, exclusive of interest on the amount of the investment. If that same implement could be made to last ten years, the yearly cost of operation would be just half as much Would a saving of $50 per implement per year make any differencse inyour yearly production cost?

Government statistics show that implements which are left in the open, last as a rule only half as long as equipment which is given the protection of a well-constructed, weatherproof shed. How much is Nature charging you for the privilege of storing your implements in her "Great Outdoors?" Enough, and then some, probably to more than pay you to previde your own storage space—especially when one considers that a good mplement shed can be built at such small cost. Are you interested in doubling the life of your implements; in reducing operating costs and consequent production costs?

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Pacifists and Gov. Bryan Attack Defense Day Plan —Coolidge Upholds It.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CONFIRMED pacifists and certain political opponents of the Republican administration, including Governor Bryan of Nebraska, Democratic vice presidential nominee, and the LaFollette group, are making a political issue of the national "defense day," September 12, planned by the War department. They insist that it is to be a "mobilization day," because some of the department statements inadvertently called it so, and they describe it as a "militaristic gesture."

President Coolidge did what he could to dispel this idea by sending a long letter to Secretary Libby of the National Council for the Prevention of War, in the course of which he said:

"What is proposed for September 12 is merely a compliance with the purposes of the national defense law of 1920. It is not a mobilization, and the people who first attached to it the term 'mobilization day' and then proceeded to condemn it have been utterly unfair. Most of them, I am sure, have been innocent of intent to be unfair, but they have been misled.

"Profoundly hoping that the outlawing of war from this world may be accomplished, I am yet unable to detect any inconsistency in giving my approval to the program of defense day. I wish crime might be abolished; but I would not therefore abolish courts and police protection. I wish war might be made impossible, but I would not leave my country unprotected meanwhile.

"The defense test seems to me a means to assure the fullest efficiency to the extremely modest defense force our country maintains."

Governor Bryan disagreed with the President's statements and announced that he did not favor any plan "contemplating mobilization of the civil or industrial resources of the country or anything else that savors of a national holiday devoted to preparation for wars." He said, however, that he would issue general orders to assemble National Guard troops of Nebraska "for inspection and practice in military activities."

John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, announced that he agreed with the views expressed by the governor of Nebraska. He added:

"It is one thing to keep the military organization of the country in adequate practice; it is quite another to encourage demonstrations that can be nothing else at a time when every energy should be bent in getting the world back to peace and to work, calming the prejudices and passions growing out of the World war and encouraging useful trade and commerce. In all these America should take the lead."

Nearly all the state governors dissented from Bryan's views and the plans of the War department are going ahead with apparently the general approval of the people of the country.

Senator LaFollette's campaign speakers, it is said, are preparing to raise the cry of a choice between "militaristic Coolidge" and "peaceful LaFollette" in sections where they think it will make a lot of votes for the independent candidate.

INTEREST in the LaFollette candidacy does not die down, because there is always the chance that it may throw the election of a President into congress. His followers are still hoping for the support of the great bulk of the union labor vote, and at the close of the week the executive council of the American Federation of Labor met to decide whether or not he should receive the indorsement of the federation. The decision is not known at this writing, but President Samuel Gompers issued a statement in advance reiterating his opposition to partisan action by the federation. He praised LaFollette for not falling into the "snare" set by the communists of the Farmer-Labor convention, but added:

"I say with complete assurance that at the present moment our minds are open and our conclusions will be arrived at during our sessions as the result of our consideration of those facts. There is but one thing that can be said definitely at this time. It is that the American Federation of Labor will, in this campaign, abide by its time tried policy of nonpartisan action. We shall consider men and platforms upon the basis of their service, past and promised to the wage earners and the great masses of the people of our country. We shall commit ourselves to no political party as partisans to a party."

Leading members of the Woman's party, replying to a call by LaFollette managers asking the support of "progressive women's organizations in every state," call attention to the fact that the LaFollette convention did not indorse the party's program for full equal rights for women, its record in this respect pleasing them no better than those of the Republicans and the Democrats, who took no action on the measure.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CHAIRMAN BUTLER has gone to Washington to help prepare for the ceremony of formally notifying Mr. Coolidge of his nomination. This event will be staged on August 14 in Continental Memorial hall and the national committee says it will be the biggest Republican rally of the campaign. The hall will seat only 1,700, but many thousands gathered outside will hear the proceedings through loud speakers. The notable guests will be numerous. Little less elaborate will be the notification of Charles G. Dawes at his home in Evanston, Ill., on August 19.

John W. Davis will be informed of his nomination by the Democrats at his Clarksburg residence on August 11, and it is certain that the Democrats, being ahead of their opponents in date, will not be behind them in making the event notable for enthusiasm and oratory. Mr. Davis' speech of acceptance is completed and has been tried out in private.

ACTIVITIES of the new grain marketing merger which has taken over the assets of five big elevator systems of the Middle West for the benefit of the farmer began last week. The new venture, however, has been refused the indorsement of the National Farmers Grain Dealers' association in which 5,000 grain elevators in the Middle West hold memberships. The association, in session last week in Des Moines, Iowa, adopted this resolution:

"We do not favor any terminal marketing proposition of any sort unless all stock in it is held and owned by farmers' elevator companies and not by individuals; nor do we favor the entering of any farmers' co-operative elevator company into any terminal marketing venture until a sufficient number of other such companies have agreed to affiliate with the venture to insure control by the co-operative elevator companies; or until sufficient capital has been subscribed by such companies to properly finance the venture."

Reports of damage to the Canadian wheat crop, which resulted in a big jump in prices, have been denied, confirmed and denied again, and good rains of last week up there curbed the enthusiasm of the bulls considerably.

NO DEFINITE progress has yet been made in the allied conference in London, but on Thursday one of its committees began consideration of a new plan submitted by Premier Herriot for providing security for the proposed loan to Germany. It represents considerable concessions by France but certain features of it were not pleasing to the English. Briefly, Herriot proposes that a German default shall not be declared by the reparations commission unless a committee of five experts and representative bondholders, one of whom shall be an American, shall have given its opinion. Then the commission vote must be unanimous, otherwise the questions are to be submitted to an arbitral board of three with an American as president and one representative each of the majority and minority opinions in the reparations commission. In both cases of delegation of the commission's power an American would have the deciding vote. What the British do not like are provisions for the guarantee to France of the delivery by Germany of definite quantities of reparations in kind.

Though the matter of the military evacuation of the Ruhr is not within the scope of the present conference, it has been discussed there, and so M. Herriot has proposed that as soon as Germany accepts the experts' plan and fulfills the conditions, France will get out of the Hagen district, and that the other occupied districts shall be evacuated according to the speed with which Germany fulfills her obligations. If the other allies agree to this plan, the process of evacuation would be complete in about two years.

THE allied military control commission under General Walch, who succeeded General Nollet, last week broke off all relations with the German war department. It was asserted that General Von Seeckt, head of the German army, had demanded that the commission give forty-eight hours' notice before inspecting any German military organization or plant, and that the commission also post a notice at every place inspected that this was the last inspection of the German military forces that would be undertaken by the entente. General Walch was ordered by the French government to refuse absolutely all such demands and to report in Paris. According to the commission, the German war department has, by underhand methods, been able to train officers and men enough for an army vastly larger than that allowed by the Versailles treaty.

SECRETARY OF STATE HUGHES, in Europe as president of the American Bar association, has been scoring great successes in London, Paris, Berlin and other cities. Unofficially he undoubtedly is doing a lot toward bringing about agreement among the quarreling nations. The Germans look on his visit as a diplomatic step to make the London conference successful.

AFTER many days of severe fighting, the Brazilian government forces drove the rebels out of Sao Paulo and occupied that important city, the center of the revolt. It was announced that the rebellion was thus practically suppressed. Immediately steps were taken for the restoration of normal conditions in Sao Paulo. The civil authorities were reinstated, communication with Santos was restored and the banks and large industrial concerns were aided in formulating a general plan of reconstruction. Managers of American enterprises there have returned to put their properties in shape again. Many warehouses and factories were destroyed by shell fire or burned.

OUR intrepid trio of army flyers is on the way across the Atlantic ocean, headed for home. Wednesday the aviators flew from Brough, England, to Kirkwall in the Orkney islands, off the north coast of Scotland and immediately prepared their plans for the jump from there to Hornafjord, Iceland, a distance of 500 miles. They intended to take the air again Thursday, but the start was delayed when adverse weather reports were received. From Danish sources there were reports of very bad ice floes and huge icebergs and tremendous ice barriers along the Greenland coast, which it was feared would make difficult and dangerous the landing of the aviators there.

SOVIET Russia has almost given up hope of reaching an agreement with Great Britain, but is still trying, having now sent Joffe, its treaty expert, and Kamineff, one of the Russian big four, to London. If they fail the Russian government, it is said, will issue an ultimatum to the British which is likely to result in war. Russia has accumulated immense stores of arms and ammunition, obtained from Germany and England, and may first make an attack on Persia in order to involve Great Britain. According to their secret treaty with Germany they can claim aid from Berlin any time up to the middle of August.

THERE is a threatening war cloud over the Balkans. Bulgarian irregulars have been invading Serbia and Greece and the Greek army is in readiness to cross the Bulgarian border. Communists financed by Moscow are doing their best to aggravate the situation.

Means Large Extension of Educational Work

New York.—The Carnegie corporation of New York, custodian of the bulk of the fortune left by Andrew Carnegie, paid to Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh, an additional $8,000,000 to the endowment for educational work of the institute.

The gift had been under consideration four years, because of the handicap under which the institute found itself as a result of the wartime depreciation of the currency. The corporation required the institute to make certain changes in its educational scheme with regard to other schools in the Pittsburgh district, and also stipulated alterations in its financial policy.

"This is the largest gift ever made at one time for Pittsburgh education," said Mr. Church, "and is one of the largest ever made in the history of the world. It makes the total amount given to the Carnegie institute by Mr. Carnegie and the Carnegie corporation $38,000,000.

"There is still a further gift of $8,000,000 to be paid during the next twenty years on condition that the trustees of the Carnegie institute have raised $4,000,000 from other sources."

The Carnegie institute, in which 5,000 students are enrolled, embraces at the present time a school of fine arts, a museum and the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Owosso.—The American Legion of Owosso took out a rain insurance policy recently to the amount of $500, which would have been paid if one-tenth of an inch of rain fell between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. on the day when they held their annual picnic and barbecue at Round Lake. Visitors from all over the eighth district attended.

Munising—Will Tormis, a Grand Marais boy, was very seriously injured as the result of a bullet wound inflicted by a companion, Clarence H. Hoen. The boys were chasing a chipmunk around a brush pile when Hoen's rifle was discharged accidentally. The bullet pierced Tormis' right lung and emerged from the right shoulder.

Grand Rapids—Falling overboard unnoticed, from a rowboat in which Earl Fisher, a member of the Carlisle United Brethren Church, was taking eight children of his Sunday school for a ride recently on Green Lake, Earl Fitzgerald, 10 years old, was drowned. His body has been recovered. The children were in attendance at a church picnic.

Detroit—Circuit Judge Arthur Webster has issued a decision restraining the Gas Co. from collecting new rates awarded by a board of arbitration. Judge Webster holds that a three year agreement, such as was made, is equivalent to a franchise and in order to be valid must be approved by either the electorate or the public utilities commission.

Jackson—Only the engine can be salvaged from a passenger airplane which crashed to earth recently at Hague Park, near Jackson, with pilot and one passenger. Neither pilot, "Galloping Gallop," nor the passenger were injured seriously. The plane was caught in shifting air currents, according to Gallup, and came down only five minutes after taking off.

Detroit—Although it ranks fourth in population, Detroit took third place in the United States for building construction in the first six months of 1924, according to word received recently from Washington. Los Angeles, which had been leading Detroit, dropped back to fourth place. Only New York and Chicago have higher construction programs ahead than has the auto city.

Detroit—Col. Charles Beecher Warren, ambassador to Japan under the Harding administration and to Mexico under President Calvin Coolidge, is at his home following resignation of the Mexico City post. With John Barton Payne, Colonel Warren drew up the protocols between Mexico and the United States which resulted in recognition of Mexico by Washington. He plans to remain in Detroit.

Kalamazoo—A campaign to raise an initial $50,000 building fund has been opened by a committee of the Kalamazoo Elks Lodge headed by Fred C. Putnam, postmaster. At a cost estimated at $100,000, the local club is planning to remodel and extend its present building into one of the finest temples in the State. The campaign is to close Aug. 18. Bids for the construction will be advertised for as soon as the first $50,000 is in, cash or pledges.

Lansing—Bond issues totalling $900,000 are to be voted on by city electors at the primary, September 9, as the result of action of the city council in voting to ask approval of $600,000 paving bond issues and $300,000 issue for sewer bonds. If the paving bond issue is passed, Michigan and Washington avenues, described by Lansing visitors as the worst main streets they have encountered in any city of this size in the United States, will be paved.

Grand Rapids—The formal petition of the city commission requesting the Michigan Public Utilities Commission to inventory and appraise the property of the Consumers Power Co., in this State, was recently signed by Mayor Elvin Swarthout. Several other cities joined with Grand Rapids in this request. The appraisal, the mayor explains, is to establish a fair value upon which rate schedules may be based for cities of the State when their franchises or present schedules expire.

Detroit—Six-year-old Harrison Daggitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Daggitt, who was discharged from the Henry Ford Hospital last May after lying crippled there for months, suffered a broken leg when an unknown assailant threw him into a ditch recently. As a consequence he may after all have to spend the rest of his life on crutches. His mother said to him before he started for his walk Saturday that since he could walk again she might as well give his crutches away.

Sault Ste. Marie—The international bridge between the American and the Canadian Soos was damaged recently and will be out of commission for several days. A government tug was upbound and the operator in swinging the bridge hit the tug, damaging the locking jack of the bridge so that connections with shore pier could not be made. A special railroad wrecking crew was summoned but it was not expected there would be any railroad traffic to or from Canada, for several days. The tug was also seriously damaged.

Ann Arbor—Ann Arbor school children will be given week day religious instructions one hour each week beginning next fall it has been decided by the local board of education. Twelve churches in the city have agreed to assist in the work. Instruction will be limited to pupils in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Before pupils can take this religious work which will be given in the churches, and not in the schools, their parents must sign a card stating their desire to instruct their children and their preference of the church school.

Marquette—The body of Harold Walker, Newberry boy, attending the Northern State Normal school here, who had been missing since Saturday, July 19, has been found in the water near Picknick Rocks here.

Cadillac—Making mud pies cost the finger of a small girl here. Virginia, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Osterberg, was playing with a broken glass tumbler when she fell and one finger was severed.

Making mud pies cost the finger of a small girl of Cadillac. Virginia, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Osterberg, was playing with a broken glass tumbler when she fell and one finger was severed.

Grand Rapids—Theodore Stasiukinas, 5 years old, son of Joseph Stasiukinas, was killed when the boy, jumping from the rear of an ice wagon from which he had snatched a piece of ice, ran in front of an automobile. It is the ninth traffic fatality of the year here.

Grand Rapids—Once reported dead in action and returning to a home which was changed from sadness to joy by his arrival, Corporal Carl J. Host, gassed and several times wounded in the World war, died recently at the home of his parents here, as the result of his war injuries.

Constantine—Charles A Pashby, a pioneer and Civil War veteran, is 80 years old. Sixty of those years he has spent within 30 miles of Kalamazoo. He made his second journey there a few days ago. The first was when he answered Lincoln's call for volunteers in 1861.

Grand Rapids—A crew of the fire department attending a fire which destroyed the home of Olin Baker on the Knapp road, recovered $2,000 worth of jewels and $200 in bills when they were able to search the ruins. The property was owned by a guest who thanked the firemen for their assistance.

Iron River—The Iron district of Michigan has been facing what has proven a difficult task, that of finding a candidate for the state legislature. With only a few days left in which to seek the office held for the past 10 years by P. O'Brien, of this city, who retired. Candidates were being sought from every nook and corner of the district, which embraces Iron, Baraga, Antonagon and Keweenaw counties, but all declined.

Pontiac—Ross Stockwell, of the Probate Court, has approved the finding of three commissioners appointed by him in a condemnation suit brought by Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, against Dr. Leo Breisacher, of Detroit, in which it was found necessary to take about five acres of Dr. Breisacher's land fronting on Woodward avenue, in Bloomfield Township, for widening the highway. The price fixed was $4,864.75.

Lansing—Commissioner of Insurance Leonard T. Hands recently revoked the license of the Associated Employers Reciprocal Insurance exchange, of Chicago, to do business in Michigan. Investigation of the exchange, Commissioner Hands said, revealed the fact that it was impaired to the extent of $1,000,000. A hearing was to have been held here by Hands, but no representative of the concern appeared before him, thus automatically cancelling its license.

Port Huron—The will of Horace G. Snover, former Seventh district congressman, bequeaths $2,000 to the First M. E. church of Port Austin, Mich.; $2,000 to the First M. E. church of Port Huron; $1,000 to the Romeo, Mich., public library; $1000 to the village of Port Austin for park purposes, and the income of $2,000 to school district No. 1, of Port Austin, to purchase books for the school library. The balance of the estate is held in trust for his widow, a son and two daughters.

Luther—Carlton Shoots, 18 years old, was seriously injured and his father, John Shoots, 45, was severely burned as a result of an explosion of gasoline in an automobile tank which the youth was repairing. The younger Shoots, lying beneath the car, struck a match while making an adjustment. The father, rushing into the garage, was burned pulling his son from beneath the automobile. The garage, barn, and outbuildings on their farms two miles southwest of here were destroyed by fire.

Manistee—The steamer Pere Marquette No. 8 has been pressed into service here as a hotel for imported workmen, and conditions were quiet at the plant of the Filer Fiber Co., on Manistee Lake, where virtually 225 men walked out several days ago, when it was said the company refused to discharge a non-union workman. Accommodations aboard the steamer will provide for a full complement of men to operate the plant and permit them to remain on the company property and insure their personal safety.

Petoskey—Miss Esther Allen, of Galesburg, Ill., employed at the Bay view house during the summer is acclaimed a heroine, and has demonstrated to northern folk the value of the training given by the Red Cross life-saving classes by her act in saving Robert Monroe, Detroit, from drowning. While, with a party of friends, Munroe ventured far off the bathing beach, was seized with cramps and sank. While other bathers stood by helpless, Miss Allen swam out and brought the young man to shore, where he was revived.

Owosso—That the fly-killing campaign conducted by the school children of this city in May is the reason why Owosso is today a flyless town, was the statement of Dr. R. C. Mahaney, health officer, when a tour of alleys, restaurants, fish and meat markets, hotels and creameries, showed that the community is virtually free of the house fly. School children killed and authorities counted 16,000 flies in May. Dr. Mahaney states that the 16,000 if permitted to live, would rave brought forth a 80,000,000,000,000 progeny by this time.
